Season's Greetings Extended By Wilkes President

TO ALL ALUMNI:

The College Christmas card for 1971 shows the facade of Conyngham Hall, as sketched by Chester Colson, and features a poem, "Rebirth" by Alfred Groh.

Conyngham Hall, with all of its significance for the early period of College development, is being reborn in a new facility designed to inspire new programs and new approaches to the challenges of education at Wilkes.

The Christmas season, with its emphasis upon the birth of the ideals of love and brotherhood, reflects so much of what the College is experiencing both physically and intellectually. This season reminds us that the mind and spirit inspire mankind in his constant quest for love, peace, happiness, and brotherhood.

The message of your College at this Christmas season is to wish for you the continued rebirth of your hopes and ideals that will give continued challenge to your lives and lead to continued service to mankind.

Sincerely,

Francis J. Micheline

Alumni President's Message

by Thomas J. Moran
President, Alumni Association

Outgoing alumni presidents are supposed to say something in their farewells which will have a lasting impact upon the members, but as I pluck away at the keys of this typewriter I find that I have nothing to write that is going to make you suddenly leap out of your easy chair, sing a chorus of the "Wilkes Drinking Song" and immediately pledge one month's salary for the next 20 years.

I do want to say that the honor of having served as alumni president of Wilkes College is one I never expected and certainly did not deserve, but one that I will never hesitate to mention whenever I can maneuver the conversation into convenient position.

I must warn one and all that I write this as an alumna.

If the Alumni Association has progressed in its contribution to Wilkes during the past two years — and I sincerely feel it has — the credit belongs to Chancellor Eugene S. Farley, the college's first president, who continues to dream and bring to life the dreams he has had for more than three decades.

It also belongs to President Francis J. Michelini, who every honest man must admit, had to follow a really tough act, but one year later has made those who selected him look better than the mystics of folklore.

And behind these two advocates of an even greater Wilkes College is Art Hoover, who is somewhat a legend in his own right as a former student, teacher, proctor, assistant to the dean and now as college alumni affairs director. So many college development and alumni programs have succeeded here and elsewhere because of the presence of a person like Art Hoover. And so many, many more have failed, much to the amazement of the best planners, because they didn't have someone like him.

There is more to the team, which of course includes the entire college family, but I am writing about one from whom you will be hearing many good things — Tom Kelly, assistant in the office of development, who is patiently and ably learning his job to a degree that inspires confidence in the development future.

Having come this far with expressions of appreciation, I find that there are so many others who deserve credit for our accomplishments and while it is impossible to mention all, I speak gratefully of the aides in the offices at the college, the core of ever-present, hard-working standbys like Pete Winebrake, Pat Burke, Sandy Walters and ever so many more, too numerous to mention.

I would like to move without more delay to the future of the Wilkes College Alumni Association — and I speak of the future as beginning today and hopefully never ending.

My position in two roles here has afforded me the luxury of viewing situations from two sides — alumni president and college administrator. I would hope that the double view has not blurred my vision as to where we are, where we should be going and what must be done.

First, I would suggest that we look inward as alumni of Wilkes College. Take a good, long look and ask yourselves if you have honestly appraised your responsibilities not only to the college but to young people such as you were when you walked this campus.

Has it really been easy to convince yourselves that you owe nothing to Wilkes?

I have never met anyone who was ashamed to say that he was a graduate of Wilkes College, but I know from the amount of participation in campaigns and college affairs that there are literally thousands who would be embarrassed if you ask them what they had ever done for Wilkes or its young people.

The future of private institutions of higher learning has never before faced a greater responsibility beneath the yoke of a heavier burden and greater threat to academic freedom than it does today.

It is my personal belief that the time has come for those who in any way have even a small interest in the future existence of Wilkes and those who need it to come forth and offer even the slightest help to those who have assumed the responsibility up to now.

There is little more I can say in leaving office after alerting you to the need for your help and asking you to provide it. I can, of course, express my wish for new horizons and greater accomplishments to the person who will succeed me. That, I most certainly pass along.

I will close by saying that I have seen Wilkes students in situations where they have been up and down. I assume as alumni they pass through the same stages. The time has arrived for those who have been away far too long to return and lend a much-needed hand.

Class of '72 Joins Senior Gift Program

During their senior year the Class of 1970 made a commitment to collectively participate in the support of the College. The approach by which they chose to express their commitment was the Class Gift Fund Program. Likewise, the Class of 1971 elected to join their predecessors by creating a similar Gift Fund. This year the Senior Class (Class of 1972) has agreed to maintain what seems like the beginning of a tradition which can become extremely important to the continued development of the College.

Here's how it works:

1. The Class Officers appointed a Committee whose membership agreed to contact each member of the class.
2. Each classmate was asked to consider making a pledge of an appropriate amount to be paid annually for fifteen years.
3. The first payment was not due until one full year following commencement.
4. The monies paid to the fund will be invested by the College's investment counsel.
5. At the end of the fifteen-year period the class will conduct a reunion and, in consultation with College officials, decide upon the application of the fund in a manner which would benefit the College within the framework of its needs at that time.

It is interesting to note that 38% of the Class of '70 made pledges to the gift fund while 47% of the Class of '71 made this commitment. Considering the economic uncertainty in the job market over the last two years, there is much hope that the Class Gift Fund Program will become an ongoing and increasingly more important source of cultivating alumni interest and providing the college with a greater measure of support from its Alumni.

During a period in which corporations, foundations, and individual donors are likely to ask what Wilkes' Alumni are doing to support their institution, the College can respond with a discussion of the Class Gift Fund Program.

It is the hope of the College that the Gift Fund Program might serve to maintain and strengthen the ties between Wilkes and her Alumni — and by so doing provide sustenance for the College and meaning for the Alumni.

Forward Thrust

Presently under construction is the new Learning Center designed to provide additional facilities for the departments of Biology, Chemistry, Engineering, Environmental Science, Fine Arts, Physics and Psychology. This structure, on the planning boards for some time, became urgently needed following the fire which destroyed Conyngham Hall. More recently, the decision to join Hahnemann Medical College in an innovative program in medical education was based, in part, on the realization that the Learning Center would provide ample facilities to house the new program.

The Hahnemann-Wilkes cooperative program in Family Medicine is designed to accomplish the following through a coordinated program which will insure the quality of medical education:

1. increase the number of physicians in the field of family medicine
2. reduce the time and cost of medical education for the student
3. improve medical care and education in Northeastern Pennsylvania.

Additionally, a two-way microwave audio-visual communication system will be constructed by General Electric Company to provide increased communication between Wilkes and Hahnemann. This communication system will be used for diagnosis and consultation and for the exchange of materials relating to medical programs. The necessary facilities on this end of the communication system will be located in the new Learning Center.

The original estimate of the Learning Center was $3 million — which has been secured. However, an expansion of the original concept of the building in combination with escalating construction costs have increased the firm bids to $5,860,000. Because the need for these facilities has become more urgent within the framework of the agreement to implement the medical program, the College has decided to begin "Phase I" of the Learning Center. These plans call for the completion of the frame of the entire building as well as the furnishing of the first and second floors. It is hoped that by the time Phase I is completed (September 1973) the additional $2.8 million will have been secured to assure the continuation of construction under "Phase II." This second portion of development prescribes the completion and furnishing of the third and fourth floors as well as the construction of a large lecture hall adjoining the Learning Center.

The College has accepted perhaps its greatest challenge with the hope that friends and alumni will recognize and support this most promising endeavor.

OF ART . . .

by Art Hoover, '55

Among my wishes for a joyous holiday season is my personal wish that all of us, as alumni, will approach the significance of the season with a renewed spirit of concern for and faith in our Alma Mater. Because Christmas is generally considered to be a time of remembering and giving, it is an appropriate gesture to include Wilkes in our holiday thinking. By way of suggestion, there are two significant means available for us to consider.

As the current year ends, we are approaching the halfway mark in our Alumni Challenge Gift Campaign. This campaign, as you may recall, challenges the alumni to provide $300,000 from 3,000 alumni donors between July 1, 1969, and June 30, 1973. Upon the attainment of this challenge, six friends of the College will contribute an additional $25,000 each for a total of $150,000. As I write this appeal to you, we are near the 50% mark in meeting the challenge, but again, renewed effort is a "must" if we are to meet the challenge.

Some time ago, you received a published list, by class, of alumni contributors to the Alumni Fund and the Challenge Gift Campaign. If your name was missing from the list you still have an opportunity to rectify the omission. All gifts and pledges received by January 15 will be incorporated into the Alumni Fund Report which will be published early in 1972. Consequently, your new gift or additional gift now will add your name to your class list, increase your total class contribution, help to meet our challenge — and, most of all, renew our spirit of concern for and faith in our Alma Mater.

Another significant means of support for the College is your active involvement in the recruitment of students for admission to Wilkes. Many times in the past, Dr. Farley has communicated to all of us the importance of alumni efforts to attract qualified students to Wilkes. Many fellow alumni have taken considerable time to talk with high school seniors about the type of educational experience available at Wilkes and this alumni help has contributed substantially to the continued maintenance of quality education.

Now, more than ever before, our recruiting efforts assume added importance and need to be intensified. As an independent liberal arts college, tuition income (supplemented by gifts from friends and alumni) provides the basic source of support; whereas, public institutions receive their basic support from public sources. As a consequence, tuition charges at public institutions are considerably lower and students throughout the country are looking to the public institutions for their collegiate education. Fortunately, the student who prefers the independent liberal arts college may gain some help through college and state scholarship programs, loan programs, etc. Our job as alumni is to advance the cause of the independent colleges — especially Wilkes — through the recruitment of prospective students.

Reprinted on the facing page is a copy of the "Alumni Interview Form" which was devised specifically for use by our alumni in the recruitment process. When you interview a prospective Wilkes student, complete the form and return it to the Alumni Relations Office. As soon as certain information is recorded in the Alumni Relations Office, the form will be forwarded to the Admissions Office and you will, in turn, receive replacement interview forms for continued use in recruiting.

Your interest, cooperation and support is greatly appreciated. Warm wishes for the holiday season!

Financial Aid Programs

GRANTS

Wilkes Scholarships

Wilkes Scholarship grants are available to students with good records of achievement and performance in high school or college who cannot finance fully the cost of their education. The amount of each grant shall be based on the financial need of the student after an analysis of the Parents' Confidential Statement submitted on his behalf. (Funded completely by Wilkes College.)

Total 1969-70: $235,059

Educational Opportunity Grants

Federal grants ranging from $200 to $1,000 are available to students demonstrating exceptional financial need, who, except for this aid would be unable to obtain a higher education under the Higher Education Act of 1965. Applications will be considered for an Educational Opportunity Grant award if the expected parental contribution, as determined by an analysis of the Parents' Confidential Statement, does not exceed $625 per year. Families with gross annual income of $9,000 or more are not eligible for EOG assistance, while preference is given to families with below $6,000 annual gross income. (Funded completely by the Federal Government.)

Total 1969-70: $164,650

State Scholarships

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Direct grants ranging from $100 to $800 are available to Pennsylvania residents who demonstrate financial need. The amount of each grant is limited to 80% of the cost of tuition and fees, or $800, whichever is less. Grants are based solely on financial need, with families having gross annual income in excess of $15,000 per year, or assets in excess of $30,000 are excluded from this program. (Funded completely by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.)

Total 1969-70: $841,426

Other States offer scholarship programs for their residents. New Jersey for example, makes awards of up to $500 per year on the basis of academic achievement and financial need, and recipients may use these awards at out-of-state institutions.

Total 1969-70: $22,600

New York also offers scholarship assistance to its residents, but the award may be used only at institutions within New York State.

Outside Scholarships

Several students receive scholarship assistance provided by high school organizations, veterans' and civic groups, etc. These awards are made independently of the College and are funded by the sponsoring organization.

Total 1969-70: $28,417

LOANS

National Defense Student Loan Program

Long-term, low-interest loans are available to students who demonstrate financial need under the National Defense Education Act of 1958. The amount of each loan is determined by the College, based on an analysis of the Parents' Confidential Statement, with a maximum loan of $1,000 per year. While the student remains in school, no repayment is made; and no interest is charged. The loan is repaid beginning one year after graduation, with 3 per cent simple interest. This program includes loan cancellation provisions for persons who enter the teaching profession, or military service. (Funded 90% by the Federal Government, 10% by the College.)

Total 1969-70: $181,075

State Guaranty Loan Program

Most states now operate loan programs which enable full-time students to borrow as much as $1,500 per year ($750 for part-time students). The loan is made by the student's bank or savings-and-loan association, while the State guarantees repayment to the bank if the student should fail to make timely repayment. If the student's adjusted family income is below $15,000 per year, the Federal government pays all interest plus a lender participation incentive (up to 3%) while the student remains in school and for 9 months afterward. The loan is repaid in monthly installments of at least $30, with 7 per cent interest. (Banks fund the loan, the State guarantees repayment, and the Federal government pays interest as indicated.)

Total 1969-70: $401,738

EMPLOYMENT

College Employment

The College employs students as assistants in faculty and administrative offices, the library, dining hall, laboratories, and on the maintenance and grounds crew. Students may work up to 15 hours per week, and are paid at the rate of $1.45 per hour. (Funded completely by Wilkes College.)

Total 1969-70: $54,000

College Work-Study Program

Under the Higher Education Act of 1965, students may be employed in positions similar to those listed above. Under CWSP, however, the student must demonstrate financial need as determined by an analysis of the Parents' Confidential Statement. Preference is given to students from low-income families in filling job assignments. The standard rate of pay under CWSP is $1.60 per hour. (Funded 80% by the Federal Government, 20% by the College.)

Total 1969: $108,390

Wilkes Alumna Heads National Children's Magazine

Dreams have a knack of sometimes coming to life. Ask Ellen Taggart, a former Kingston native and Wilkes College alumnus, who was recently named managing editor of Jack and Jill Magazine, one of the nation's leading children's periodicals.

"It all started with a letter to the Curtis Publishing Company in Philadelphia during my senior year at Wilkes," related the 24-year-old Glenside resident who has moved from assistant editor to managing editor in just two years.

"I had always wanted to write for a children's magazine, and Jack and Jill was a relatively popular publishing house located near home. But as luck would have it, soon after I was appointed to the staff in January 1970, the firm transferred to Indianapolis, Indiana," she said.

The move turned out to be a blessing in disguise for Ellen as she was one of the few asked to move with the company. Shortly after arriving in Indianapolis, the Wilkes graduate was promoted to the position of associate editor.

"Things happened so fast and then Mrs. Melle Bell, who had served as editor for many years retired," she explained, "and I was asked to move up to her position. I naturally accepted."

She traces much of her success to Wilkes College and it's English faculty. "I received a strong English background at college and I'm extremely thankful to Dr. Philip Rizzo and many of the other instructors."

Jack and Jill magazine has a circulation of about 700,000. It is published 10 times a year and directed mainly at the 4-12 age group.

Speaking on the nature of her duties, she stated, "We have five people working on the book. Most of our work is done six months in advance. The majority of our manuscripts come from free lance contributors, and surprisingly, 6,000 are submitted each year."

A big part of her job centers on the tedious task of selecting the manuscripts and the scheduling of deadlines. The book has recently enlarged from 52 to 64 pages and is printed in four colors.

Noting the biggest change in children's writing, "We're not saying life is absolutely all beautiful. There are now some sad endings. We try to look at the positive side of things and not be peachy."

"We want to help kids solve their own problems. Our major goals are achieved if we can get the child to read for pleasure on their own rather than turn on the television."

The most popular subjects in demand are stories written about mystery, adventure, and science.

"Children are definitely reading more than they have been. They want controversial subjects. Finally they ask a lot of questions and want to know the answers."

Another big moment in her rapid rise to success came last month when she was designated to tour the new Disneyworld in Orlando, Florida, prior to it's official opening. Details of the experience will be related in the April issue of the magazine.

Probably the proudest fan of Ellen is her mother, Nan Thomas Taggart, a former teacher in the Abington High School District, near Philadelphia, and a graduate of Bucknell University. "I am very happy for Ellen. She knew all the time what she wanted and went out to get it," related the proud parent. Ellen's father is deceased.

The National Scene

Higher education's 'uncertain' future: Will students want what colleges offer? Will colleges have enough space?

A BACKWARD GLANCE at the growth of higher education over the past century shows that the pattern was almost always predictable. Enrollments kept rising, doubling every 15 years or so. An ever-increasing share of the college-age population was actually going to college. New colleges kept going up. Old ones kept getting bigger. And this year, the federal government estimates, enrollments are up again—by six per cent.

But what of the future?

Can we expect more of the same?

What will higher education be like—and how big will it be—in 10, 20, or 30 years?

The answers aren't that predictable anymore. Too many factors in and around higher education are changing. Never before, says the noted Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, have the colleges been faced with a comparable situation. Amid many uncertainties, here's what the panel sees ahead:

► In the 1980's, higher education will have the unusual experience of a pause, if not an outright decline, in enrollment growth. New campus construction will cease, faculty members will be recruited far more slowly, and the opportunities for reform that tend to accompany periods of expansion will be reduced. There may be some qualitative improvements, though, as the demands of quantity subside, and adult education may come in for some dramatic expansion.

► The end to enrollment growth in the 1980's will be preceded by a decade of reduced growth, at a rate of perhaps 50 per cent. In the 1990's, enrollments will rise once more, by some 30 per cent. But compare those figures with the 124-per-cent increase of the past 10 years!

► In the long run, higher education will find that it is growing "more nearly with society," instead of far ahead of it. The portion of the college-age population in college at any given time may well level out to about 50 per cent a year by the turn of the century.

Taken together, those developments would be unprecedented for higher education, the commission says in a report on New Students and New Places. But as it looks at past and current trends, the panel stirs in some ideas of its own about where the academic world should be going. It expects greater college opportunities for low-income students and for adults to add to the enrollment pool. It wants to reduce the time students take to earn degrees. And it projects a shift of enrollments to two-year colleges, along with a decline in graduate rolls. The overall result, it says, would be a net drop of about 1 million students in the total estimated for 1980 on the basis of previous trends. The panel's revised total is 12.5 million students by 1980, with 16 million estimated for the year 2000. None of this can be forecast with great confidence, however. The panel points to these "new uncertainties":

► As colleges continue to be hard-pressed financially, will they be able to afford "new places" for new students?

► Most jobs today don't require a college degree. What happens when the labor market stops absorbing college graduates "at the level of training they have acquired?"

► Will students want what the colleges have to offer? The effects of the cultural revolution are a "great unknown."

► What will happen to the birth rate, which is now showing a dramatic decline?

► In the midst of the "new technology" of tapes and computers and video-cassettes, will the campus survive as the main center of higher education?

As academic leaders ponder such questions, they must also weigh proposals concerning the number, location, and size of their institutions. If they take the Carnegie Commission's advice, they will create at least 175 new community colleges and at least 80 new "comprehensive" public four-year colleges, mostly in urban areas, by 1980. They will not create any more Ph.D.-granting "research-type universities." And they will not let their institutions stay too small or get too large.

■ In Brief: For a long time now, the country has not been sure what to do about its traditionally black colleges. Should it save them, or scrap them in the name of integration? The wealthy and influential Ford Foundation, long-time supporter of higher education generally, has made a choice. It will devote about three-fourths of its higher-education grants over the next six years (some $100-million) to aiding minority students and a limited number of black colleges . . .

Minority enrollments are growing at a faster rate than those of the rest of the college population—20.4 per cent to 5.7 per cent between 1968 and 1970, federal statistics indicate . . .

Many private colleges are in worse financial shape than they had forecast. A survey has found more than 100 of them approaching bankruptcy.

Winter Sports Season Looks Bright

WRESTLING

If early season success is any indicator, the 1971-72 winter schedule of sports should be a happy one in Colonel land.

Graduation has cut deepest into the wrestling program where John Reese, starting his nineteenth year of collegiate coaching, must find replacements for four-year veterans Dennis Verzera, Gerry Willetts, Ron Fritts, and Rich Ceccoli.

Filling in most of the upper weights, the quartet carded a combined 142-29-7 mark during their stay at Wilkes.

Despite an early loss to the University of Buffalo, the Blue and Gold matmen will be favored again to cop their eleventh Middle Atlantic Conference title.

This year's hopes will be centered around team captain Al Zellner (158), who had a 24 dual meet string snapped at Buffalo; Jay McGinley (118), Bob Roberts (126), Art Trovei (134), and Alain Arnould (Hwt.). All five are seasoned veterans.

Newcomer Mike Lee, a sophomore transfer from Navy, also promises to create excitement before his departure from the Wilkes scene in 1974.

Wilkes, 2-1 at writing, holds wins over Oneonta State, 32-10; and Montclair State, 34-14. The setback inflicted by Buffalo, by the way, ended a 17-meet winning streak which had traced back to the 1969-70 season.

Still remaining on the Colonel slate are meetings with Oregon State, Army, Hofstra, and East Stroudsburg, which should give Coach Reese a few more lost hairs before the year is out.

BASKETBALL

Excitement is also being generated by the cagers, enjoying a fine 3-0 start, as they begin their first year under new basketball taskmaster Rodger Bearde.

The new mentor has the hardwooders hopping and a fifth consecutive winning year is within reasonable thought.

Wilkes has registered triumphs versus Susquehanna, 87-76; Philadelphia Pharmacy, 78-69; and Elizabethtown, 105-86. The latter win had the Wilkes faithful speechless, as Bearde's charges came through with 62 points in the second half.

Sights are still set at one of four MAC playoff berths, something which has eluded the Wilkes cagers since their entrance into the Middle Atlantic Conference in 1957.

Like wrestling, spring commencement cut deep into the basketball ranks, taking four starting veterans. To close the experience gap, Coach Bearde has gone with Dave Kurosky, a 6-5 senior; Mike Bachkosky, a 6-4 junior; Roman Shahay, a 6-0 junior; Mark Catterson, a 6-3 junior; and Greg O'Brien, a 6-0 junior, as his starting five.

The rapid development of freshmen Clarence Ozgo, Greg Buzinski, and playmaker Steve Ference gives hint of continued victory in the months and years ahead.

SWIMMING

A wave of optimism also greets the arrival of the swimming year, as Coach Bob Corba has assembled one of the most talented squads in school history.

Middle Atlantic Conference diving champ Doug Krienke returns along with sprinter Rich Marchant. The speedy junior copped two fifths and one sixth place medal at the MAC confab last winter.

The Fall Season In Retrospect

By George G. Pawlush

It was the return to "good times" this fall as Colonel athletic teams enjoyed some of their finest hours.

After feeling the wrath of a 3-4-1 record the previous season, the football charges of Roland Schmidt turned the corner in 1971, recording a fine 6-2 showing.

Wilkes soccer also got big play, as the booters fought Elizabethtown College down to the last day for MAC championship laurels. The Colonels closed with an overall 8-4-2 tally, 7-2-1 in conference play.

As expected, the cross country team, undergoing its first season of varsity competition, fell prey to injuries and seasoned opponents, and completed its baptismal year with a 2-10 log.

Only setbacks to Ithaca, 41-28; and Indiana (Pa.), 13-7, prevented the Blue and Gold from attaining their fourth perfect football season in six years. Ineligible for the MAC "Northern Division" team title, the Colonels posted a 4-0 record against conference squads.

The biggest hair-raiser of the campaign occurred on Oct. 23 when freshman placekicker Terry Blaum booted a 24-yard field goal with three seconds remaining, to give the Colonels a 3-0 victory over Juniata.

Another ego builder was a 15-14 nod over across-Pocono-Mountain-rival East Stroudsburg State College. The Warriors had buried the Schmidtmen, 30-0, in 1970.

Passing became a prime weapon in the Wilkes arsenal as the Colonels struck for 1,354 yards via the airplanes. The gridsters were equally awesome on the running paths, blistering the turf for 1,342 yards.

Ted Yeager was the prime mover in the ground attack, scampering for an all-time season record of 952 yards on 217 carries while accumulating 13 touchdowns.

Not to be overlooked by plaudits was 5-10, 175-pound junior quarterback Jeff Giberson, who connected on 86 of 162 aerial attempts for a whopping 1,290 yards.

His prime receivers were Neil Langdon (25-295 yds.), George Sil-lup (19-216 yds.), and Bill Horan (15-329 yds.). The latter two will return next year.

Holding down the defensive side of the ledger was the interior line-backing duo of Frank Galicki and Tony Cardinale, who accumulated tackle totals of 179 and 148, respectively. Both were bona fide post-season honors candidates along with Yeager.

The Colonels finished third in the Lambert race, symbolic of eastern "Division III" supremacy. The Schmidtmen copped previous Lambert honors in 1966 and 1968.

Paced by the sharpshooting toe of junior forward Ed Garabedian, the Wilkes soccer team put forth its best single-season effort since 1966 when it compiled a 9-2 log and brought home the MAC championship.

Garabedian was nothing short of sensational, ramming home a record total of 17 goals and 11 assists. Also producing in double figures were Rich Combella (10 goals — five assists), George Bene Hoane (11 goals, one assist), and Stellios Pat-siokas (six goals-four assists).

Bene Hoane, an Ivory Coast native, established a new Wilkes one-game standard, slashing the nets for five goals in an 8-1 win over Upsala.

Coach Tom Rokita's team dropped a 3-0 decision to powerful Elizabethtown on the final match of the campaign, resulting in a title for the Bluejays and a runnerup placing for the Colonels.

Named to the MAC "Northern Division" all-star team were senior goalie Charles "Chip" Eaton, full-back Bob Linaberry, and Garabedian.

The "Sudden Six plus One" was the cry as the Wilkes cross country team made its debut into the inter-collegiate wars.

Fielding a six-man squad, the harriers of rookie mentor George Pawlush took the lumps of inexperience, but managed wins over Lebanon Valley and Cheyney State.

Senior Bruce Davis was the most consistent runner while the marked improvement of Gary Horning, Duane Sadvary, Joe Miraglia, and Jim Godlewski will give the Colonels a solid foundation in 1972.

Ted Yeager-All-Time Great Wilkes Rusher

When senior tailback Ted Yeager scored on the final play of the 1971 season, it was only a proper curtain call for the 5-6, 160-pound speedster, who rearranged every rushing mark in the Wilkes record book.

During his four-year career, the "Cat-awissa Flash", or the "Mini-Mite", as he was affectionately called, trampled the gridiron for 2,869 yards (almost 1.7 miles) on 623 carries.

On eleven separate occasions he garnered over one hundred yards in one game. His personal high was 172 in the 1971 season opener against Lycoming College.

Another bit of irony recorded was the fact that he scored the first time he ever carried the pigskin, a 67-yard romp versus Vermont in his freshman year, and the last, the one-yarder at Muskingum.

No doubt, in time many of his standards will be erased from the picture, but it is interesting to note that in the age of the "big man", Yeager proved that size isn't everything, just sheer guts.
