ALUMNI LIBRARY CAMPAIGN

Gifford Cappellini, '45
General Chairman

The significance of the individual that Wilkes has always maintained remains a pillar of the College's vision of tomorrow. Students are individual persons; each is unique in aspirations, in intellectual curiosity and potential. Alumni are individual persons; each has taken his place in the world beyond alma mater and because of his education has made his community, his state, his nation a better place in which to live.

We do things as individuals even when we are a part of a group. But the fact remains that the individual is the key to whether a job is done fully.

You read this and wonder and, hopefully, agree. Undoubtedly, at this point, you are considering the preceding remarks concerning the individual, you.

To come right to the heart of the matter . . .

Wilkes needs a new library. Individuals, not groups, provide funds for such a need. In short, you are counted on to assist your College meet this need.

Alumni, individuals, have contributed $62,000 to assist in the building of a new library. Students, individuals, have contributed $2,300 to assist in the building of a new library.

We, alumni, individuals, seek to provide Wilkes with $100,000 for a much-needed library. This can be done if each of us is aware of the importance of the individual effort and support.

This challenge to you and to me must be met by you and by me, not by the "other fellow" alone. And challenges are not met unless individual action is taken.

Please direct your pledges to the Wilkes library fund now. The time is urgent. The campaign closes soon.

Sincerely,

Gifford Cappellini, '45
General Chairman

Dr. Abraham D. Barras, rabbi of Temple Israel, Wilkes-Barre, and a member of the philosophy and religion faculty at Wilkes, delivered the baccalaureate address to the graduating class of 1966.

Choosing as his subject "The Power at Life's Center," Dr. Barras told the graduates: "A vital faith in the living God must be at the center of our lives if we are to live with the courage, and the compassion, and the conviction that a world of crisis demands for us.

"While we pray for life at this baccalaureate service, we are mindful of the perils and uncertainties of life. The very spelling of the word calls attention to the vast contingencies with which life is fraught. In the very middle of the word life there is 'if.' In the middle of every life there is a big 'if.' Robert Frost makes this point sharply in a haunting little poem called, The Road Not Taken. Once while walking through the forest he came upon a fork where two paths branched out. Naturally, he could take only one, but in the poem Frost wondered what would have happened had he taken the other path."

The speaker re-emphasized his point in stating: "yes, the big 'if' is in the middle of every life. How often do you and I in our reveries walk along the road not taken. Once we realize how central a position 'if' occupies in our life as we look backwards, it takes only the most superficial reflection to grasp the role of 'if' in our lives as we look ahead. Indeed, overwhelming uncertainties have become the dominant mood of our time. Only at political conventions is the road to the future pictured with dogmatic assurance as peaceful and unbroken. Sober students of our time have with compelling evidence labeled our age as the 'age of anxiety.' Living as we do during the era of alphabetical bombs, we can understand why Quincy Howe has written that "Twentieth Century has put the human race on trial for its life."

"As we peer into the future the 'if' in the middle of life looms large indeed. Yet is that all that we can say about life? Can it be that the only thing that we can say with assurance is that there is nothing that we can say with assurance. Is life to be reduced to a series of haphazard contingencies which we are powerless to control and helpless to change? Is life to pivot on so unstable a center? Must we face tomorrow with only a huge baffling question mark to sustain us?"

Dr. Barras then focused on the heart of his message as he said "The antidote to a life befogged by uncertainty is a life rooted in God. If life is not to sag under the burden of heavy hazards, it must be supported by the stout beams of great affirmation. 'If' reduces life to a question mark; God punctuates life with an exclamation point.

'If' makes us helpless bystanders; God makes us intelligent co-workers. 'If' leads to despair; God whispers courage."

The rabbi further developed his central thought in stating: "let us see what it means to put God at the center in times of trouble. Does it mean that faith in God grants us and our children immunity to polio, keeps us from crippling accidents or assures us uninterrupted prosperity? To be sure there are some people whose faith is so naive that they are what we might call God's fair-weather-friends. When the sun of good fortune smiles down on them they are enrolled among the believers. But let a heavy cloud gather on their personal horizons, they feel betrayed, their belief has been splintered.

"There are others, however, to whom faith becomes a stimulant to heroic responses, to the severest challenges of adversity. They do not expect God to keep them from trouble but rather to enable them to accept it when necessary and surmount it when possible.

"However, we notice that the prosperous man is not always the happy man. Success in any field does not necessarily bring the fulfillment it promises. Someone has reversed the popular slogan 'nothing succeeds like success,' to make it say, 'nothing fails like success.' This revised version contains a profound physiological truth. For it is only after we succeed in attaining any material goal that we realize that by itself it can never bring happiness.

"Those of us who are today earning what appeared to us in our lean days astronomical figures, are we basically happier than we were then? Is there necessarily more contentment in the modern well-appointed split level homes than there was in the ill-furnished flat in which the marriage began? Is it merely a coincidence that the age of anxiety has coincided with the age of abundance, or is it true as Tolstoy said that the discontent is the result of man's abundance? The psalmist spoke of an affliction God sometimes visits upon the successful, 'and He gave them what they asked for but He sent a hunger into their souls.'

"To put God at the center of life at a time of triumph means to recognize that basically we are spiritual creatures, and no matter how we pamper our bodies it shall avail us not at all unless we also nourish our souls. To make God the vital center of our lives in the hour of triumph means to regard ourselves under obligation to return to Him a portion of the physical and financial means with which He has blessed us."

Dr. Barras brought final focus on the subject of his talk in concluding: "Lastly, this is what I consider to be the supreme significance of making God the vital center of our lives: To put God in the middle of life means to make the whole enterprise, the whole business of life meaningful. Unless God is at work at the very core of life, what sense does the whole thing make? Basically the anxiety of our time derives in a profound measure not so much from the uncertainty as to what life will bring us as from the uncertainty as to what life means. Is life worthwhile? Does it have any intrinsic value?"

"When God becomes the vital center of our lives we get an entirely different set of answers, 'each one of us is a priceless bit of mosaic in the design of God's universe.' We are but little lower than the angels. We are here at God's orders rendering a command performance. And what we do with our lives is of everlasting significance. Life becomes an unending adventure toward the goal of becoming fully human. If we are to live our lives with courage, compassion, and with conviction, we need God in our hearts to give our lives a place of central calm."

BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS

The Power At LIFE'S CENTER

RABBI ABRAHAM D. BARRAS, B.A., D.H.L.
Department of Philosophy and Religion
Wilkes College

MR. PRESIDENT, it is a privilege and honor to present, on behalf of the Faculty, Administration, and Board of Wilkes College, this candidate for the Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters.

The College has established criteria for honorary degrees consistent with its primary mission . . . the development of a sound intellect and an awareness of the associated social responsibilities imposed by education in a free society. The honorary degrees awarded by the College are intended to call the attention of Wilkes students (past, present, and future), the faculty, and the community at large to individuals who personify these qualities.

The Honorable William Warren Scranton, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, has attained distinction in all levels of service to his Community, his State, and his Nation. Trained in the law with both his BA and LLB from Yale University, his range of activity in the business worlds of publishing, banking, and broadcasting combine to prepare a unique combination of qualities exercised in community service.

Governor Scranton served with the Air Force in World War II as a pilot and operations officer with the rank of Captain and, upon returning to civilian life, became an influential leader in the effort of his home city of Scranton to diversify its economy through establishment of new industry.

During this post-war period, he served in many volunteer capacities with charitable organizations, educational institutions, and hospitals. He has served as Vice President of the International Textbook Company of Scranton and as Director and member of the Executive Committee; as President of the Scranton-Lackawanna Trust Company; as Chairman of the Board and a director of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Broadcasting Company; and then in 1959, accepted a call to public service to act as a Special Assistant to Secretary of State Christian Herter. In this position, he administered the Secretary's private office, and represented the United States at international conferences. His outstanding ability in service to Secretary of State Herter was followed by his election to the 87th Congress in 1960 from a district with a pronounced Democratic registration majority. In 1962, he was the Republican candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, and carried the State with a majority of approximately half a million votes.

Since becoming Governor, he has led Pennsylvania into a new era of prosperity and social progress, and heads one of the most progressive administrations that the State has ever experienced. His outstanding leadership, political tact, and persuasive powers of argument have resulted in legislation of broad import to the citizens of the Commonwealth. The rapidly changing economy of the State and, particularly, in the communities of Northeastern Pennsylvania is obvious to all who look about them.

In particular, his leadership in examining the structure of higher education in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania will determine the opportunities for education long after we have passed from the scene. The establishment of a State Council on Higher Education and the charge to develop a Master Plan for higher education in the Commonwealth are of tremendous significance to every citizen.

The clarification of roles and responsibilities of publicly-supported and private, independent colleges and universities are of critical significance to higher education in our State, and his courage and leadership in attacking these difficult problems demonstrates those qualities so sorely needed in government today.

PRESIDENT FARLEY — in recognition of his outstanding achievements in business and public service, his constructive leadership in the areas of economic development of our State, and his concern for the problems of education in Pennsylvania, I am privileged and honored to present to you, the Honorable William Warren Scranton, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and ask you to confer upon him the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

Longfellow once wrote:

"Look not mournfully into the past. It comes not back again. Wisely improve the present. It is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy future, without fear, and with a manly heart."

The spirit of both this Commencement and the locality in which it is held reflects the application of Longfellow's sage advice. For you who are about to become graduates of Wilkes, as well as the College itself and the entire area it serves, have not looked mournfully into the past. You, your College and your area all have honored your heritage and learned from your history.

Soon, you will go forth to meet the future armed with a degree from one of America's truly fine colleges. That degree signifies the satisfaction of your alma mater that you have learned well from the accumulated wisdom of the past. But, even more pointedly, it symbolizes her faith that you have mastered the skills of mind and heart to make you worthy leaders in the struggle for human advancement in the future.

We will not know how successful your education has been until we see the kind of world you hand to your children a generation from now. Most assuredly it will be a different world than that which you inherited. Forces far more powerful than any man can control will see to that, for change is inevitable. But will it be changed for the better?

Like it or not, your generation of Americans does not have the right to be a generation of spectators. You have inherited a catalog of decisions which must be made: moral decisions, political decisions, economic decisions; decisions of freedom versus tyranny, of justice versus anarchy, of individuality versus conformity.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

The Future of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE HONORABLE WILLIAM W. SCRANTON
Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

Dean of Academic Affairs
Presents
Governor
Scranton

The following introduction was made by Dr. Francis J.
Michellini, Dean of Academic Affairs, who presented Governor
William W. Scranton for the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

And if it seems that society is asking a lot of you, it is at least equally true that you are promised the corresponding rewards that only go to a generation which lives in a time of decision and change. The burden is yours, but so are the fruits if you accept that burden and carry it well.

Nor must your generation go around the world or into outer space to find its challenges. Many of them are right here at home in our own Nation, and not the least of them right here in Northeastern Pennsylvania. For here it is that the depletion of a basic source of livelihood, coal, once threatened to destroy the economic lifeblood — yes, almost the will to live — of the people themselves.

Yet here is also currently being written the extraordinary story of a people pulling themselves up by their own efforts to the edge of a great new era in area history. Though, in the not too distant past, it may have seemed to others that the Anthracite Area was on its way out, a raging fire of hope and determination burned constantly in the minds and hearts of its citizens.

More importantly, through effective grass-roots action in which Wilkes College has played a vital role, this hope and determination has been translated into a realistic promise for the future. As Shakespeare said, "The past is prologue." And we need only look at the recent past to reassure ourselves of the shining future of this entire area and, in fact, all of Pennsylvania. For what has been happening here is a smaller picture of what has been happening throughout this State. And it is happening only because people like you cared enough to make it so, working together at the Federal, State and community level, and in private enterprise, in what I like to regard as the perfect example of cooperative federalism.

In January of 1963, nearly 420,000 Pennsylvanians got up each morning and went out looking for jobs, jobs which simply did not exist. Our State unemployment rate was far above the national average of 6.9. Yet today, we have not only reversed the downward trend in our economy, but are building a solid foundation upon which we can construct a greater Pennsylvania.

By May of this year — just last month — the number of unemployed throughout the State had plummeted to an estimated 145,000, the lowest for any month since we first began keeping records in 1950. And our State-wide unemployment rate stands at a new, all-time low of 3.1! Right here in the Anthracite Region, the story is even more dramatic. In both the Wilkes-Barre/Hazleton and Scranton labor market areas, the unemployment rate has been cut by more than half — from 12.4 in Scranton to 4.5; and from 10.3 in Wilkes-Barre/Hazleton to 3.8. And, I am extremely happy to tell you tonight that this remarkable decline, culminated only last month, not only means nearly 17,000 more jobs for people in those areas but the rates themselves are both new all-time records for any single month!

One of the reasons for this remarkable recovery record is, of course, the discovery by business and industry that the New Pennsylvania — especially Northeastern Pennsylvania — is a wonderful place to locate new plants or expand existing facilities. In the past three and a half years, more than 2,400 new plants and plant expansions have been announced in Pennsylvania — 260 of them right here in the Anthracite Region. And a minimum of 125,000 new jobs — 18,032 here in this area — are being created for our people as a result. In addition, the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority, inspired by imaginative industrial development leaders from Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton, has become a major tool in achieving this growth.

Since January 1963, 51 Lackawanna and Luzerne County projects alone have received State loans totaling $11.27 million, and these will result in the creation of nearly 7,000 new jobs in a region almost without hope only a few short years ago. And, as a story in BUSINESS WEEK Magazine's May 21st issue points out, the key to what the magazine calls "something of an economic miracle" has been "wholesale attraction of new, diverse industry . . . so successful that industrial promoters can afford to be selective about companies they invite . . ." And the proof of that statement is the fact that a blue chip, high salary industrial concern like RCA has chosen to build not one but two modern plants in this area — one of them a $25 million Color TV tube plant which will bring more than 1,200 new jobs into being.

But, if all this is the result of wise improvement of the present, the future is our concern here tonight. And rightly so. And the future of Northeastern Pennsylvania never looked so bright. Nor is this just wishful thinking on my part — although admittedly I am somewhat partial. A recent independent study made by Litton Industries for the Appalachian Regional Commission named this Anthracite Area as one of nine subregions (out of 43 in the entire 12-State Appalachian Region) with the highest growth potential, now and in that future.

This judgment is based on three major factors:

The potential for continued industrial growth, for becoming a transportation hub serving the world's richest markets and as the focal point for a tremendous recreational boom attractive to residents of all of the Northeastern United States is obvious.

This entire area benefits from its strategic geographical location in relation to the rapidly-growing eastern megalopolis. Upon completion of the Interstate Highway System, it will literally be a Crossroads of the Nation, with the junction of Interstate Highways 81, 80, and 84 forming the connecting link with all major U. S. cities, north, east, south and west.

In recreation, both Northern and Northeastern Pennsylvania can become, in time, the major playground of this same eastern megalopolis. The impending development of Tocks Island as a National Recreational Area is reason enough for that statement. Yet even Tocks Island is not the only great recreational area soon to come into being.

Later this week, it will be my privilege, along with Governors Rockefeller of New York and Tawes of Maryland, to participate in the formal announcement of a proposed new Susquehanna River Basin Commission to plan the wise future use of a great natural resource that serves nearly 46 per cent of the land area of the entire Commonwealth. Patterned after the Delaware River Basin Compact, this Commission hopefully will provide the same potential for both industrial and recreational development along the river that flows right through our area as that now coming into being along the Eastern boundary of our region.

But, despite this great potential, we can ill afford to sit back and let nature take its course. Much still remains to be done. We must increase our manpower resources, particularly in the skilled and semi-skilled, to meet the growing needs of our industries. And in that, Wilkes College already excels.

We must continue to improve the livability of the area, with new sewage facilities, recreational facilities and housing. And our efforts to cure the ills of our mining areas must be accelerated. This Administration already has spent well over $3.6 millions in the Anthracite Region to quench dangerous mine fires, flush and fill abandoned deep mines, eliminate unsightly and dangerous burning and non-burning culm piles and to reforest and restore mined-out land.

In addition, we have asked the Appalachian Regional Commission for an additional $16.5 million to be used in our continuing fight against the ravages and scars of a century of coal mining, $13.4 million of which already has been approved. We have passed laws requiring restoration of our lands by operating strip miners and banning pouring acid mine drainage into our streams. And we have also proposed a new half-billion dollar State program to conserve and restore the beauty and bounty of our land and water.

And yes, as Dr. Farley has said, we have taken many steps forward in education, the whole gamut of it, — from free school for deprived children efforts, all the way up through the Ph.D. degrees, and both in construction and in more appropriations of money and subsidies and otherwise. Yes, the Pennsylvania into which you are graduating is young again. So, too, is the Northeastern Pennsylvania in which most of you reside.

Now, what do we need? Well, briefly we need you. And we need you for more reasons than one. We need you for every type of human endeavor that there is. Take a good, long-lasting look at America since the turn of this Century and you will find that in these sixty-six years no nation in the history of mankind has ever made so much progress in almost every field of human endeavor that you and I can name — in nursing, and in medicine, and in law, and in education, and in finance and transportation, and in industrial know-how — you name it!

America in these years has made the most stupendous progress that any nation ever has in history. With two possible exceptions: Since World War II, we, the leading free nation of the world, have not made nearly the progress that some of the other major free nations have made in two very important fields of human endeavor. One is in the art and science of government. The Europeans, for example, have turned their backs on the last 300 years of their history, of their nationalistic history, which they used decisively for those 300 years to oust each other for power, and in twenty odd years have turned through Euratom and the Iron-Steel Institute and the Common Market and now some other methods to get their governments together, a complete new change of unanimity and unity in organization. This is an extraordinary historical fact. And yet in America we have made almost no change to reform our system of government, or even to give the best men and women that we have to it.

More important than that, however, is the lack of leadership that we have shown in this nation in another field which is even more important — the field of human relations. The reason that I was late this evening was that I had just learned before I arrived that James Meredith was shot in Mississippi. And naturally, I tried to make telephone calls around Pennsylvania to see if we could at least be on the alert in those areas that might result in some kind of problem because of this horrible thing.

Do you know another leading nation of the free world in the last twenty years that has made as little progress as we have in human relations, which is basic to all humanity? Do you remember as I do that my ancestors and maybe some of yours came to these shores some hundreds of years ago as puritans. What did they do when they got here? They started as great a discrimination as they found in their home countries. Well, you remember the "no Irish need apply" signs in Boston, and you remember that if they came from Poland and Italy and Germany, and Ireland, each in turn looked upon the next wave in a discriminatory way. At long last let us hope that we have cast aside all of that — with the possible exception of the negro who has suffered longer and more indelibly from this than any other group.

I say to you that this is a challenge which is yours. We haven't solved it. I say to you too that if we do not solve it, human relations and the art and science of modern government in the United States, then we no longer deserve to be the leading free nation of the world.

And as great, tremendous progress as we are making in this State, and in this part of this State, and with every opportunity open to you that was not opened in years past, nevertheless, that door of opportunity will be closed, as shut, and as strong, and as tight as it could be if at least these two fields are not met with and dealt with and solved in your generation.

We need you!

And with this rejuvenation has come the thunder and strength, the high spirits and strapping good health which are the special treasures of youth.

As Longfellow suggested, we Pennsylvanians stride fearlessly into the future, with a manly heart, determined not only to solve our economic problems and our social ones, but our governmental ones, and those that affect us as human beings.

I'm proud of you. And I'm proud of all of young America — because as I have seen it, it's been good. I say to you from the bottom of my heart that I have the utmost faith in what you will do. But please give just a little bit of your heart, and your soul, and your mind, if not your vocational life, to one of these two fields of human endeavor that I mentioned, because we need it. We need it from all of you, particularly those who are graduating tonight. America needs the benefit of your education!

'FAIR-LEA'

WRITING POETRY was one of Eleanor Farley's many talents. Among her many beautiful poems are the following three that were written shortly before her death. "He Was A Gentle Man", "Age", and "The Rhythm of Time" were composed at Nags Head, North Carolina, April 1965.

He Was A Gentle Man

He was a gentle man —
(He told me so.)
His love for all was great.
He wanted me to know
He understood mankind.

He was very kind —
(His voice was low.)
It hurt him so to see
Unfairness, bigotry.
He wanted me to know.

His heart was filled with love
(He told me so.)
For all of his own kind.
He had but few dislikes.
In fact he loved mankind.

His reverence was deep.
(His voice again was low.)
He feared I would not know
He was a pillar of the church
Unless he told me so.

That gentle, loving man
Whose reverence was deep,
Who understood mankind,
That most unusual man
Had only three dislikes.
(He told me so.)

His hatreds only three
He also told me
In order of his hatreds:
"Niggers" first, then Jews,
And lastly — Kennedy.

This fine, broad-minded man
Had love for all mankind.
His reverence was deep.
He was a gentle man.
(He told me so.)

The Rhythm of Time

You must build a firm foundation
Within you, a State, a Nation,
Not let Hope be your constructor,
Expect Time to change the structure.

You should be a careful workman.
If you wish to get fine work done,
Giving strength where strength is needed
Hearing words before unheeded.

Time can only work by using
Strengths or faults you've been excusing,
The foundations you have chanted,
Or the building you have started.

Time moves on with steady rhythm,
Causing firmness or indecision,
Moving on in strength or weakness
Magnifying each uniqueness.

Age

One day I feel a million
The next day I feel young,
I wonder, is it due to weather,
Be it rain or sun?

Or am I old on days of rain
When it is bleak and cold,
And no sun shines, just dreariness —
Is that what makes me old?

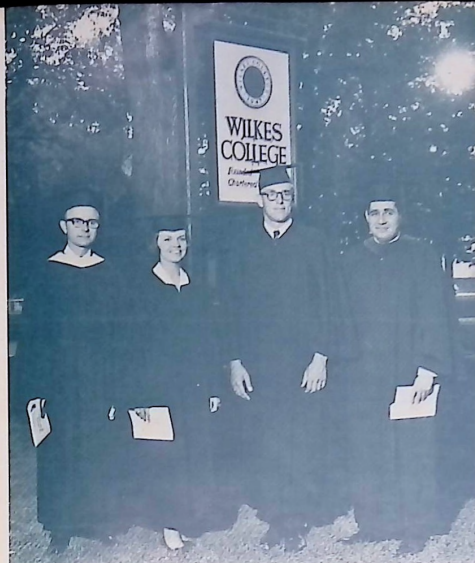

The days I spend with students
Joining them in class
Refresh, renew, invigorate,
Bring back my youth! Alas.

I fear I'm old when bored
With things that hold no zest,
But when youth meets with me
I know I'm at my best.

A Remarkable Dinner and...

The three children of Martin Luther King had never seen such a sight—and neither had the rest of the South. Some 1,500 persons, Negro and white, banker and yardman, society matron and maid, gathered in an Atlanta hotel to honor both Dr. King, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, and the cause for which he won it: the non-violent revolution of the Negro. They sat together and ate together and if there was discomfort, none showed it.

Even in today's gradually moderating South, even in sophisticated Atlanta, such a meeting is not easily assembled. When it was proposed to honor Georgia's first Nobel Prize winner, instant opposition developed. But Atlanta has intense pride in itself as a community and a place that knows how to do things well. This pride won out—as told in the editorial on page 4. The dinner was flawless and ended in an extraordinary scene: southern whites joined in the singing of the hymn of the Negro movement, We Shall Overcome. It suggested an emotional acceptance heretofore unknown in the South.

Tears stood in Dr. King's eyes. "This is a very significant evening," he said, "for me and for the South," and he added, "I am tempted to stay here in a more serene life, but I must return to the valley..." of anger and prejudice. A few days later he was back in his valley leading a voter registration campaign at Selma, Ala. where, of 15,000 Negroes, only 335 are on the voting rolls. The official resistance lacked the onetime Alabama savagery of cattle prods and police dogs. But it was still effective. By late last week, no Negroes had been registered to vote and nearly 2,000 had been arrested in the demonstrations. Among them was King. He lay on a hard bunk in jail reading the Bible and, perhaps, reflecting on his dinner of a few nights before.

...Off to Jail

MARCHING IN SELMA. At Selma, Ala., King leads a column of prospective voters to the courthouse. Minutes later all of them were arrested for parading without a permit. King's arrest ignited the month-long campaign.

A circle of reindeer at the Arctic Circle

It was the time of year for a reindeer roundup in Swedish Lapland (above). Some 5,000 of the creatures—most of which had shed their antlers—meandered docilely around in circles while the nomadic herdsman sorted out strays and tried to figure out which reindeer belonged to whom. In due course the men moved out with the herds, not toward any particular destination, but just in search of patches of frozen grass that would carry the deer through to another spring.

A junk car pool in the flooded Northwest

Their turret tops sticking up like turtles, a lot full of junked cars (below) lay in the spillover from Rock Creek in Tigard, Ore. Rainstorms, along with unseasonably warm temperatures which melted mountain snow, had brought a second flood to the winter-and-rain-racked Northwest (LIFE, Jan. 8). The new disaster caused three deaths and the evacuation of hundreds in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, a month after a Christmas season deluge left 18 people dead.
