A "campaign of deception" leads to mistrust

Perhaps we can all learn something from the mistakes of others. This week there has been much talk about the Reagan administration concerning what The Wall Street Journal has called the administration's "campaign of deception." The Reagan administration is being accused of passing false and exaggerated information about Libya and Colonel Moammar Gadhafi to the United States press.

The spreading of false information began on August 25 in a story run by the Journal and was repeated in The Washington Post. The articles reported that Col. Gadhafi was increasing his support for terrorism and that the U.S. was prepared to deal with the problem even if it meant a repeat of last April's U.S. bombing. Reportedly, the information was released to the press in order to frighten Gadhafi from further terroristic acts.

The policy of deception has been condemned by many, including some leading senators. Creating falsehoods, whether doing so actually deterred Gadhafi or not, causes the American press and the American people to question anything the Reagan administration says from now on.

What has happened here can be applied to almost any area of our lives. There is a great deal that can be said about the policy of honesty. Whether it involves the U.S. Government being dishonest with the press, the Wilkes College administration and The Beacon, or two friends, the consequences are the same.

Once an organization or a person has established a reputation for creating fabrications (a nice word for lying), he or she marks their name. It becomes difficult to recreate a feeling of trust once that trust has been abused. We all should learn from the example of the Reagan administration and their policy of presenting "disinformation" to the American public. The credibility of an organization or an individual can remain intact with a policy of honesty.

Does Holtzman bug you?

Dear Editor,

I watched them walk in, and I didn't say a word to them. I saw and heard them knock on every door of Evans first. Then, a burst of anger shot through me. What were they doing here? In our dorm? You know who these people are.

They've bothered you on every end of this campus. They've interrupted your dinner. No, not the gnats, but they are twice as irritating as the people affiliated with Congressional candidate Marc Holtzman Holtzmanites.

We all know about Marc Holtzman's bid for the Congressional seat in the 11th District (here). In order to spread his name, he fielded a staff of volunteers who fit his image... young, motivated, bright, and unimposing.

He molded them and taught them his way of campaigning. He sent them on weekend training sessions in Washington, D.C. Now, during the nitty gritty part of his quest, he has turned loose the most obnoxious, pushy, and manipulative group of yuppies in the world outside of Georgetown. And they, like the gnats, chose to pester Wilkes.

These Holtzmanites leave no stone unturned in their search for "getting voters." When one of them spot you with whatever detection device they use (binoculars, radar, smell sensors), they immediately swarm you with the question, "Are you registered to vote?"

Then, they sign you up and stick your address immediately into their "suckers" file. Thirty seconds later, or however long it takes them to leave, you begin to receive Holtzman mail, all in its royale blue and white glory. This mail eventually is used to dry the trays in the cafeteria.

Speaking of the cafe, lunch is unpleasant enough without the invasion of the Holtzmanites. Imagine your surprise, as you shove a forkful of baked Missouri into your mouth, when this too-nice-to-be-human smile lights up your table.

Before you know it, they plop down their load of applications, pamphlets, bumper stickers, and copies of "The Holtzman Cult Handbook." As you dig into your vegetable delight, they persist in badgering you.

Finally, with the beet juice deliberately running down your face in an attempt to get them to leave, they look up from their pamphlets and into your eyes and blurt out "if you've been here on campus for more than 30 days, you can vote."

Yup, Sure can." You know he's throwing you a line crapola when his "political" move is to take the juice off of your face with his $300 coat sleeve.

As if that wasn't enough, this tops it all off. Holtzmanites were frustrated after an argument with Kanjorski pollster which punctuated with a vicious attack calling Holtzman a certain part of his very anatomy, they entered Evans.

I can just picture them sticking their heads into room 142, "Are you registered for the vote?"

What about invasion of privacy? At least act like Holtzmanites. What if your boss saw you and knew you bent the truth about the administration, saying the administration is fair, but not here. He's talking about a bunch of people who would "take the ball and go home," even if the ball wasn't theirs. What will be done?

Unfortunately, not much concrete can be implemented upon these de-programmed brainwashed Holtzmanites (for lack of a better term).

They've been kicked off more places on this campus than a dirtiest bum. Now, that's a nice thing to be said about a bunch of sparkling yuppie business type yuppies ing their candidate.

The best thing that can happen is a huge swarm of gnats engulf the Holtzmanites and ask them if they registered for the vote. You see a Holtzmanite polite and you may want to say you've registered will vote... but for the exterminator who gets rid of the gnats.

How

by Jonathan Eames

In the September issue of The Beacon, an article appeared concerning the rigid structure of the meal plan.

The article expressed the idea that the meal plan does not give students any control over their board money is spent.

The article also gave examples of meal plans at other colleges where students may choose to purchase any meal plan now. Many students at Wilkes probably share the opinion of the author of that article.

The first step to bring about some sort of change to organize student opinion concerning the present meal plan. This can be simply by polling students if they enter or leave the cafeteria.

This doesn't seem very difficult, but no one has done it yet. Unless there has been a drastic change in opinion over the past weeks, or unless students have begun to like the meal plan, most students would probably (and I'm just assuming) they know what's good for them.)

Once student opinion has been determined, you wonder what the next step should be. Again, it's a simple matter.

Is Neal real?

Dear Editor,

Your report last week on "the Astonishing Neal" was itself quite astonishing.

Be that as it may, some of the feats allegedly performed by Mr. Neal do not seem very impressive.

For example, your readers may be interested to learn that we have, in the Stark Learning Center, a machine shop quite capable of fusing together men's rings of any number (even more than three).

Furthermore, when Dr. Rodechko was finishing the rec room in his basement, it was reported that he too actually bent many twenty penny nails. (I can attest to the accuracy of these reports, since I saw some of the bent nails.)

The best for last: it is entirely likely that these gifted persons here at Wilkes would be willing to perform these acts at considerably less expense than that incurred by the Programming Board in hiring Mr. Neal.

How can we change meal plan?

by Jonathan Eames

In the September 18 issue of The Beacon, an article appeared concerning the rigid structure of the Wilkes meal plan.

The article expressed the idea that the meal plan at Wilkes does not give students any control over the way their board money is spent.

The article also includes examples of meal plans at other colleges where students may choose not to purchase any meal plan.

Many students at Wilkes probably share the opinion of the author of that article, but wonder how they can change the meal plan.

Wilkes College recently underwent a restructuring of the administration. Under the new structure, students theoretically have some input concerning how the school is run.

Attempting to change the school's meal plan policy is a prime example of a way to test the theory that Wilkes students really do have some control over the way they spend their time here.

Obviously, many students at Wilkes would prefer to have a choice of meal plans. For that matter, many probably would prefer not to purchase any meal plan unless the quality of the food were to improve.

A simple matter such as the meal plan should not be a very difficult policy to change, but it has to begin somewhere.

The first step to bringing about some sort of change is to organize student opinion concerning the present meal plan. This can be done simply by polling students as they enter or leave the cafeteria.

This doesn't seem to be very difficult, but no one has done it yet. Unless there has been a drastic change in opinion over the past few weeks, or unless students have begun to like the food, most students would probably (and I'm just assuming they know what's good for them) say they think the policy should be changed.

Once student opinion has been determined, you may wonder what the next step should be. Again, it is a simple matter.

Everyone who attends Wilkes surely has friends who go to other colleges or universities. All you have to do is ask your friends who go to other schools what their meal plans are like. Chances are you will find out they can choose the number of meals, the time of meals and probably even whether or not they want to buy any meals.

From the information about other schools' meal plans, there would have to be some sort of plan the food-powers-that-be at this school would approve.

In the past, a popular objection by the school to a change in the meal plan has been cost. Apparently, the school feels the meal service wouldn't make enough money if everyone didn't purchase the full meal plan.

The objection of not making enough money in an area concerned with day-to-day student life is simply unreasonable. If it works at other schools, why can't it work here?

Wong announces fellowships

by Jim Evelock

Not later, not tomorrow or next week, but now is the time for juniors and seniors interested in attending graduate school to learn about the fellowships that may be available to them.

Dr. Bing Wong, professor of mathematics, has been appointed to a coordinator-like position in which he receives fellowship information. He then attempts to locate eligible and worthy students to apply for them.

In the past, fellowship information was sent to the various faculty members. This year the College has decided to organize itself, thus appointing Wong to the position.

Wong states adamantly, "I want to open the vistas of students to fellowship opportunities." Wong is eager to speak with any interested senior students who have high grade point averages in their majors and have serious intentions of attending graduate school. Wong is currently looking through computer listings for potentially eligible students. He is also very willing to work with students in the application process.

A few specific fellowships open include the Mellon fellowship, which is open to seniors who are interested in becoming college level professors in the humanities area. The deadline for applying for this fellowship is Nov. 3, 1986. The fellowship's stipend is $9,000, plus tuition costs.

The Hertz Foundation offers a graduate fellowship in the applied physical sciences, with a stipend of $12,500 per year, plus tuition costs.

The highly regarded Rhodes fellowship is available. This fellowship allows students to attend Oxford University for two years, with the option of another two-year renewal.

Anyone interested in applying for a fellowship should contact Wong at his office (SLC 406).

Faculty approves Wilkes Goals

by Elizabeth Mazzullo

At last Thursday's faculty meeting, faculty members approved a set of Goals for the College.

These Goals will be used to decide the direction of the core curriculum, according to Sharon Telban, chairperson of the Core Review Committee.

The Wilkes College Goals and Objectives were distributed last May and discussed at a retreat held in July at Kirby House. The list was then refined further and presented at the faculty retreat held Sept. 6 at Pocono Manor, but Telban said that the list was not approved until last week because a vote could not be taken until the next faculty meeting.

Some editorial changes have been made since then, including a change in the title. The word "Objectives" was dropped from the title after Dr. Joseph Bellucci raised a question as to whether the points on the list fulfilled the definition of objectives, Telban said.

According to Telban, the Wilkes College Goals will appear in next year's Bulletin.

She stated that "from this point," the Goals will be used in developing the revised core curriculum currently under review. "It's an objectives-based curriculum that's being designed," Telban explained.

Telban said that departments are now looking at current and potential course offerings and "analyzing to see how they would meet these identified objectives." The Goals will function as "something against which we can measure how things meet the core," she added.

Telban also noted, "Now that we have the objectives in place, we can get student input, what currently enrolled students see as important." She encourages students with ideas to contact her or anyone on the Core Review Committee.

Wilkes College Goals

Wilkes College is committed to the liberal education of men and women who value learning for its own sake throughout their lives and participate responsibly as enlightened members of society. The institution's curriculum is designed to stimulate the intellectual, emotional, social, and physical development of each student. Our principal goals are to familiarize students with the content of the various realms of human inquiry, facilitate the integration of their knowledge into a unified whole, provide opportunities for them to acquire a depth of understanding in at least one field of study, and develop their unique capabilities. We believe that every liberally educated person:

1. thinks critically, analytically, and creatively;
2. communicates effectively;
3. cultivates aesthetic sensibilities;
4. explores ethical, intellectual, and social values;
5. makes ethical judgment based upon a consciously developed moral value system;
6. understands one's own and other cultures, both historic and contemporary, and respects cultural differences of other peoples;
7. appreciates the dynamics of an individual functioning within a complex society;
8. understands scientific principles and their relationship to technology and culture;
9. applies quantitative reasoning in the presentation and interpretation of data;
10. pursues life-long recreational activities, acknowledging the importance of physical well-being;
11. correlates these goals of liberal learning with career and professional perspectives.

Dinner to honor Ralston

by Wendy Holden

There will be a dinner held in honor of Dean George Ralston on October 17 at the Woodlands Inn in Wilkes-Barre. Over the past forty years, Ralston has held the positions of Dean of Men, Dean of Students, counselor, coach, instructor, and administrator, and is currently Dean of Students Emeritus.

President Christopher Breiseth commented on the event: "It is an opportunity for the College and his friends to thank him for the wonderful job he has done for these forty years. It is also a celebration of the fact that he's going to continue to work with us to gain support for the College from the alumni, many of whom he had in class."

Ralston was overwhelmed and said, "I'm greatly pleased because it is an opportunity for alumni and old friends to be together. I'm thrilled that they are coming for the purpose of honoring me and am looking forward to seeing so many of the graduates."

Not only an active member of the College, Ralston is involved in numerous community activities. He is an elder of the First Presbyterian Church of Wilkes-Barre, a director of the Wilkes-Barre Recreation Board, a director of the YMCA and a board member of the Wilkes-Barre General Hospital.

The dinner was first announced in the spring Quarterly when alumni were urged to reserve their tickets. The event was organized by Deans Paul Adams, Jane Lampe and Arthur Hoover and is limited to 460 guests.

A special dinner will be held October 17 in honor of George Ralston for his many years of service to Wilkes.

Circle K holds fundraisers

by Elizabeth Mazzullo

After participating in two fundraisers last weekend, Circle K will attend a meeting next weekend and sponsor a haunted house later this month.

Last Saturday, Circle K participated in a road rally sponsored by L.C.C.C.'s Circle K. Each car that entered paid a $5 entrance fee, which benefited the March of Dimes. Wilkes entered three cars and won first, second and third places, said Deb Pavlico, president of Wilkes' Circle K.

Circle K also participated in the Calvacade of Bands held at Meyers High School last Sunday. Club members sold programs and raised money for the American Arthritis Foundation, said Pavlico.

According to Pavlico, Wilkes' Circle K will attend Interpack, a meeting of all Circle K clubs in Pennsylvania which will be held Oct. 17-19 at a park near Indiana, Pa.

At Interpack, Pavlico said, "We meet to hold workshops and leadership training programs."

Several members of Wilkes' Circle K will hold workshops at Interpack.

Joe Andes, Circle K governor of Pennsylvania, will hold a President's Workshop, and Debbie Tippens and Bob Orlando, district treasurers for Pennsylvania Circle K, will hold Treasurer's Workshops.

Circle K will also sponsor a Haunted House, entitled "A Nightmare on Main Street," to be held from Oct. 27 through Nov. 1 at 373 N. Main Street in Wilkes-Barre.

There will be "a whole bunch of different rooms," including a Devil's Den, a Guillotine Room, a Cemetery Room and rooms featuring a Mad Scientist, Dracula and others, according to Pavlico.

Admission will be $2 per person, and proceeds will benefit the American Cancer Society.

"We're looking forward to making it better than last year and making more money for the Cancer Society," Pavlico said.

She added, "We will be looking forward to seeing Wilkes College in full force."

SG report

by Michelle Munday

On Tuesday night, Student Government granted the Programming Board's request for $289. The money will be used to send two students representing the Programming Board to the National Association of Campus Activities (NACA) conference.

At the conference, the representatives will be able to attend their choice of over 20 workshops ranging from study to commuter parking. The conference is also a great place for the Programming Board to make contacts with performers and to get involved with co-op buying. Co-op buying occurs when several schools get together and form a block enabling that "block" to get an act at a lower price.

Plans for Homecoming were also discussed at the meeting and it was announced that the elections for Homecoming King and Queen are invalid.

It seems that some seniors who were ineligible to vote went ahead and voted anyway (a student must have at least 90 credits to be considered a senior). There were also some names on the ballot written in pencil. This may or may not have caused the person to receive unfair attention (or votes).

A re-election for Homecoming King and Queen will be held today in Stark Lobby between 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. and also at dinner time in the cafeteria. "Eligible" seniors are urged to get out there and re-vote.

"Ring Around the Moon" to be season opener

Showcase Theatre will open its 23rd season of live onstage performance on Friday, October 10, at the Dorothy Dickson Dart Center for the Performing Arts.

The opening production will be the romantic comedy "Ring Around the Moon," written by Jean Anouilh, and adapted by Christopher Fry. Curtain time is 8:00 p.m. on Friday, October 10 and 11; and at 2:00 p.m., Sunday, October 12.

Production of the show is under the direction of Jane Tomassetti of Trucksville, who directed "My Fair Lady" last year at the CPA for Showcase Theatre. "Ring Around the Moon" is set during the 1920s in France and centers on the romantic escapades of twin brothers, Hugo and Frederick. The escapades are enhanced by the personalities of the brothers who are exact opposites—one is shy and the other is aggressive.

The twins will be played by one actor, Mark Roszko of Wilkes-Barre, in his first showcase appearance. The women in the twins' lives are portrayed by Fran Keller of Wilkes-Barre and Diane Yenason of Dallas. Both actresses have been seen in

Creative performer promises to steal the show

by Lorri Steinbacher

The Concert and Lecture Series continues to bring quality entertainment to the Wilkes College community with a performance by multi-talented actor/mime Tom Montanaro on Wednesday, October 22, at 8 p.m.

Montanaro has extensive performing experience in a myriad of areas. Although he performed regularly in high school and college productions as well as summer stock and puppeteering, Montanaro's first big break occurred in the mid 1950's. It was at this time that Montanaro met the renowned mime talent, Marcel Marceau. After giving Montanaro a chance to perform some mime skits for him, Marceau was so impressed that he invited him to study with Marceau and his master, Etienne Decroux, in Paris.

After his period of study with Marceau, Montanaro travelled throughout Italy and the United States. He performed with small mime groups, made some commercials, and developed his first major show entitled, "Mime's Eye View." The show, which premiered in New York City, was a success and many years of touring followed.

This touring took Montanaro through countless years of winter and summer stock, college shows, and many other venues. Montanaro did not restrict himself to mime, however. Throughout this time he danced, vaudeville acts, performed as a clown and puppeteer, and also portrayed various Shakespearean characters.

Montanaro then turned to TV. He was the host of an award winning children's show, "Pretendo," in Philadelphia. In addition, he made many television commercials for such companies as Volkswagen and United Technologies. He also produced two films for Columbia University Press.

With all of this experience behind him it is incredible that he should want to pass this information, his skill along. Montanaro has now taken up the teaching of his skill. He began holding mime workshops in Woodstock, New York, and in Maine. He also originated the Montanaro Mime Theatre School. In the past decade, the school has produced national tours that have performed in Lincoln Center in New York, the Kennedy Center in Washington, and Sweden, Canada, and Mexico.

Most recently, Montanaro has created and directed the Celebration Theater Ensemble, a touring group that tackles the work of a variety of playwrights and composers. Montanaro also has appeared in the motion picture "Clan of the Cave Bear," as Zoug, the storyteller.

In addition to performing, Montanaro will be holding a workshop for those interested. The workshop will be held Tuesday, October 21, from 7 until 9 p.m., the day before the performance.

This is Montanaro's third appearance at Wilkes College. He is sure to thrill the audience with his skill. The show is at 8 p.m. in the CPA, free of charge. So, take advantage of the bargain, come on down to the CPA, and get a little social edification.

Amy proves theory on apathy wrong

by Amy Hancock

It was encouraging to see that my article in the September 23 issue of The Beacon prompted written responses from two of the paper's readers. Some very interesting observations were made in the article and letter that appeared in last week's issue. It is reassuring to learn that there are concerned and thoughtful people reading The Beacon.

Dr. Farooq's letter was insightful and inspiring. Reading between the lines, he recognized my notorious inability to make decisions. What someone else should have told me a long time ago, he compacted into a short but effective letter. Thanks for a long-overdue kick in the derriere, Brother Farooq.

My main concern in the article was to express my feelings about being under-estimated. Thus, I have mixed feelings about Jim Evelock's view of my desire "to make a lot of money."

First of all, that statement was meant to be humorous. Nevertheless, I sympathize with Mr. Evelock's opinions. Certainly, there are students whose main objective while attending college is to procure that diploma that demands a hefty salary. But there will always be some people like that.

Unfortunately, Mr. Evelock's argument instilled anger in his fellow students more than a desire to change. He didn't make us want to think about our values because he put us down. By accusing the majority of students of being money-grubbers, Mr. Evelock put them on the defensive, making them want to disagree with him.

Mr. Evelock believes that most students are insensitive to the "real" meaning of earning a college education. True, many people are blind to the intrinsically satisfying aspects of life. Instead of striving for happiness by spending time with friends and family, for instance, many people concentrate on acquiring that which makes it possible to fulfill their desires--money.

People who behave this way may not be entirely at fault for their weakness. Today's lifestyles often nurture obsessions with money. If one's childhood memories are of his parents' constantly scraping the bottom of the barrel, it would not be surprising for him to desire a life without that insecurity. Thinking and worrying about how much money he has or needs could easily become habit. How many people are able to rid themselves easily of their lifelong habits?

The way I see it, what fool wouldn't mind making a lot of money? Anybody can make a lot of money (however much that may be) and be happy at the same time. One doesn't have to relinquish career and personal happiness in order to be monetarily secure. Do high school and college athletes compete in their sports only because they may someday make millions at it? I doubt it. People are drawn into their professions by intellectual curiosity and personal talent and preference. So what if someone's occupation happens to provide him with big bucks?

Of course, I cannot claim that everyone is happy with his job. After graduating, any student may enter a profession and later on find that it isn't his cup of tea. Then what will he do? He'll move on to something different, that's what.

Each of us is unique; what provides happiness for one person may not meet the needs of another. Everyone has to live his life the way he wants to live it. And if that means making a lot of money, why not.

A Quiet Riot erupted at the CPA last Friday evening. The hour long show consisted of a variety of mime skits. Included in the show was the skit above, a scene of a men's room.

Capricorn: Don't give up yet!!

Aries-You need to stop doubting yourself. A new relationship will flourish only if you make the effort. Don't be afraid of letting that new friend know how you feel.

Taurus-No, you won't have time to recover from last weekend. A new acquaintance whom you met a week or two ago will show up at your doorstep in the near future. Make the most of it.

Gemini-A turbulent week lies ahead, but in the end everything will fall together. A change in plans seems devastating at first but it is really a blessing in disguise.

Cancer-Reduce your worries by going for a long walk with a friend. A Gemini will play an important role in your activities. Have a relaxing break.

Leo-You won't be able to use the Fall Break to relax. Use the extra time to finish all the work that has piled up in the past few weeks. Maybe then you can show your face in class.

Virgo-You may want to visit a close friend or relative during the break. If you do, you'll have more fun than you had expected. Whatever you do, don't spend much time at home.

Libra-Try to think of something different to do this weekend. Your life seems boring and routine only because you haven't been as daring as you used to be.

Scorpio-People will begin to get on your nerves in the next few days because you have so much on your mind. After a couple days off you should be able to clear up all your problems.

Sagittarius-Be careful about what you say to others this weekend. If you aren't subtle in your criticism, you may hurt someone's feelings. You'll find time to relax on Sunday.

Capricorn-A close friend will be able to pull you out of your depression. Think about the future instead of mulling over the past. Somehow, it will all work out.

Aquarius-When it comes to your self-esteem, it's one of two extremes: you're either in love with yourself or you're suicidal. People will adore you this weekend, though, so keep your chin up.

Pisces-A great weekend is in store for you if you don't repeat any of last weekend's stupid mistakes. Spend some time outside in the fresh air and clear your mind for a few hours.

Safety guidelines

It can happen to anyone. On a city sidewalk, a country road, even at home or at the office, anyone can become a crime victim. Victim's Resource Center, a United Way funded agency, offers the following tips for protecting yourself and preventing crime.

1. Be alert. Know what is going on around you. Walk assertively. If you do not look like a potential target, then you are less likely to be one.
2. Always lock your house and car doors. Carry your keys in your hand so that you can get inside quickly.
3. Before unlocking your car, walk all the way around it (at a safe distance) and look in the back seat to make sure no one is hiding beside or in your car.
4. Do not leave a purse on the front seat when driving. Instead, place it on the right front floor.
5. Avoid carrying hand-bags or purses with long shoulder straps. Better still, do not carry a purse at all.
6. If you have car trouble, signal for help by raising the hood, displaying a white handkerchief, or putting a large "Please Call Police" sign in the window. Stay in your car with the doors locked and windows rolled up until the police or someone you know arrives.
7. Avoid going out by yourself at night or leaving a party or meeting alone. It's safer to travel in pairs.
8. Do not go to a public laundromat or apartment building alone. Take a friend along.
9. When working late or on the weekends, ask a friend or relative to call periodically to check up on you. Phone before leaving the office to say which route you are taking home and when you should arrive.
10. In elevators, stand next to the control panel so that you can hit the alarm if there is trouble. If you sense danger before entering, simply wait for the next car.
11. If you carry a weapon, be aware that it could be used against you.
12. If you feel threatened, sound an alarm. Set off a hand-held siren or shout "FIRE!" As a last resort, use a shoe or rock to break a store window. The alarm will frighten your attacker and bring the police.

If assaulted, contact the local police station or sheriff's office immediately. If you need crisis counseling, contact our local information and referral service, Help Line, another United Way member agency at 829-1341. You can also contact Carol Lavery, Executive Director, Victim's Resource Center, 132 South Franklin Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. 18703, 823-0765.

A different perspective

Non-traditional enrollment on the rise

by Ellen Campbell

There seems to be more and more of us all the time. I don't know if I am more attuned to noticing or if, in fact, there really are more. At any rate, I am definitely seeing more students over the age of twenty-five on the Wilkes campus.

National figures in adult student enrollment indicate my observation is probably correct. In a newsletter from the Office of Adult Learning Services, projected enrollment figures are as follows:

--From 1982 to 1992 higher education enrollments will decrease by 616,000.

--This is the result of a loss of 1,517,000 students 24 years old and younger and a gain of 901,000 students 25 years and over.

These figures represent a twenty percent loss of traditional age students (24 and under) and a nineteen percent gain of adult students (25 and older). Even more dramatic are the projected figures for the increase of female students over

According to the "from 1972 to 1992, students 25 years old over will increase 1,145,000 to 3,140,000 increase of 174 percent

At Wilkes we have a support group for non-traditional students. This group meets periodically to sound a board for its members, to develop solutions to common problems, and to make representative recommendations to the administration. For example, the group has suggested a special orientation and handbook designed to meet the needs of the adult learner.

The support group is a good first step. As the number and percentages of non-traditional adult students continue to rise, Wilkes will systematically plan to attract, assimilate, and moderate this growing segment within the college body. I wonder what college is planning to

Kick up your heels with Roseanna

by Lorri Steinbacher

Are you frustrated? Depressed? At the end of your rope? Do you need something to release all of your pent up feelings? Did you know that gym dances can help you with all of those things and many, many others?

Well, for those of you in need of some relaxation for the impending Homecoming weekend, the annual Homecoming gym dance is right around the corner.

This year the featured performers are the Long Island based band Roseanna. Named after the legendary Saturday Night Live character, Roseanna Rosannadanna, this band has been together for over ten years. Originally, says Rosanna's bassist Joe Sidito, "We weren't even supposed to be a band. We just got together at a talent show, and everything came together."

The band is fronted by two singers, one male and one female. This adds a dimension to the band that all-male groups lack. The two singers are Henry Jimenez, Jr. and Lyn Critelli. Backing these two dynamic performers are Joe Sidito, on bass, Pete Minervini on guitar, Andy Stern on keyboards and Rob Seifried on drums. Sidito and Minervini also take care of some back up vocals.

Included in the band's repertoire are a variety of tunes including ones from Wham!, The Cars, Genesis, Robert Palmer, Prince, INXS, and many other Top 40 favorites. Don't expect, however, a band that is just going to sing the songs. Roseanna also prides themselves on their impressive choreography and stage show, as well as the creativity they put into the songs. "We're a show band. We don't just stand there and play the music. We're a party band. We take copy tunes and put our own creativity into them. We put Roseanna into everything we play," comments Joe Sidito.

Roseanna has been busy in the ten years that they have been together. They have played countless colleges, bars, nightclubs, dances, even roller rinks. They play approximately 50-100 colleges a semester, an average of two colleges a week. In the summer, they play even more. They have played in New Jersey, Connecticut, Long Island,

New York, Florida, Massachusetts. This is their first time visiting the northeastern Pennsylvania area.

In addition to their extensive touring, Roseanna has plans for recording some of their original material. They have used some of it in concert and, according to Sidito have, "been getting a good response."

So all of you Wilkes students out there who are weary of the daily grind come on down to the gym on Saturday, October 18, from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. and dance away all of those frustrations. For only a dollar with your Wilkes I.D., it is certainly less money than you'd spend on a shrink, and probably more effective.

Campus Counseling Wants You!

Campus Counseling is looking for individuals interested in forming a peer referral network at Wilkes. The program would serve as an outlet for students' problems in a relaxed atmosphere. Training will be provided. All interested individuals should contact Mark Sowcik at ext. 494 or on the 2nd floor of the Student Center.

Lady stickers 1966 team to be honored at Homecoming

5th in state

by Debbie DeCesare

Last Tuesday the Wilkes field hockey team hosted Scranton for their first MAC game of the season. The ladies were psyched to play and win even though they have been defeated by Scranton for the past three years.

Only 12 minutes into the game, Sally Vojtek made a cross pass to Kelly Wandell who took a hard shot on goal to score the first goal of the game. In the second half, Scranton managed to score with 23 minutes left, but still the lady Colonels would not give up.

With only six minutes left in the game, Debbie Marquart scored the first goal of her career and the game winning goal. Credit Yvonne Pierman with an assist on that goal. The final score was 2-1.

Last Thursday Wilkes played away at Marywood. The first goal of the game was by Sally Vojtek with Marissa Kane on the assist. The second goal was a hard shot by Debbie Marquart and Marissa Kane was there for the rebound. Kane pushed the ball in to make the score 2-0 at halftime.

In the second half, it was Marquart again taking a hard shot toward goal with Kelly Wandell tipping it in. Yvonne Pierman, keeping the pressure on, took a shot toward goal but the ball was cleared and defensive player Jane Zeller was there to take an awesome shot from outside the striking circle to score the first goal of her season.

Marywood got a free penalty shot for a defensive miscue to make the final score 4-1. Wilkes displayed their best offensive effort ever, outshooting Marywood by 30-14.

Wilkes played at College Misericordia on Saturday. Wilkes came onto the field very confident of the win even though field conditions were terrible.

Sharon Domzalski took a shot and Marissa Kane, collected the ball, dodged the goalie, and made the first goal. The score was only 1-0 at halftime, but the Wilkes offense exploded with five goals in the second half.

Sally Vojtek started the rally when, only one minute into the second half, she hit a hard shot from almost the 25-yard line with no one able to touch it. The third goal was by Kelly Wandell with Sally Vojtek on the assist. The fourth goal was made by Yvonne Pierman with Marissa Kane on assist.

Not letting up, the fifth goal of the game was on a shot by Kelly Wandell and Donna Vasquez was there to hit it in powerfully for her first goal of the season. The last goal of the game was a tip in by Marissa Kane off a shot made by Debbie Marquart. This made the final score 6-0.

Dede Palin played a great game in her first starting varsity game. Wilkes outshot Misericordia 27-10.

On Tuesday, Wilkes played Lycoming in their second MAC of the season. Wilkes was the first to score when, in the first half, Yvonne Pierman made a short pass by goal to Marissa Kane who made a reverse stick shot into the goal.

The score was 1-0 at the half and Lycoming's players tempers were flaring. Three Lycoming players got green carded during the second half.

The second and final goal of the game was a penalty corner shot by Yvonne Pierman that was untouchable. This made the final score 2-0. Excellent defense was displayed by Margo Serafini, Jane Zeller, Debbie Marquart and Sharon Domzalski.

This game was another step closer to the playoffs for the Colonels. It also knocked Lycoming out of the playoff picture. The win boosted the Wilkes ranking from 9th to 5th in the state. The ladies record now stands at 7-2-1.

by Jim Pyrah

For Wilkes College football fans the years of the late 1960's are remembered with a pride and awesome respect that Colonel football has been sorely lacking since.

The "Golden Horde", as they were called accomplished one of the most incredible feats in college football history.

Enroute to a 32 game winning streak, the 4th largest in the history of college football, the horde racked up 3 undefeated football seasons, 4 MAC conference titles, 2 Lambert Bowls and the Timmie Award for being the best division III football team in the entire country.

The 1966 team was the centerpiece of this golden era of Colonel football. This was the first of the undefeated teams and was voted the very first recipient of the Lambert Bowl, which honors the best division III college team in the East.

The tone was set in the very first game of the season as Wilkes squared off against East Stroudsburg. East Stroudsburg was sporting a 12 game winning streak coming into the game.

Over 7,500 people showed up at the Wilkes football field to witness the game. Wilkes won 10-0 on a field goal and an interception return for a touchdown.

The second game was the kind of which legends are made. Wilkes fought Lebanon Valley to a 7-7 tie with only one second remaining on the clock.

Freshman quarterback Joe Zakowski entered his first College football game and, long before Doug Flutie tossed a pigskin, let loose a long desperate bomb. The pass found it's way through three defenders and into the hands of Paul Purta who raced for the winning score with no time on the clock.

This was to set the tone for the entire year. Wilkes went on to rack up six more wins and post a perfect 8-0 mark and collect the Lambert Bowl.

If you have ever been on a undefeated team or a championship team you can understand the spine tingling feeling, the indescribable rush of emotion that accompanies such an experience. The members of that 1966 team know that feeling well, even twenty years can't fade the memories.

The 51 members of that team and their head coach, Rollie Schmidt will be the honored guests at the 39th annual Homecoming football game on October 18th as Wilkes takes on Juniata.

Come on out to Ralston Field and see the legends of the past mingle with the stars of the present.

De Chirico, Keohane lead Harriers, again

by Tom Urso and Jane Brown

The Wilkes cross-country team travelled to Lycoming College this past Saturday.

The women made a valiant effort to battle off their opponents, even though they didn't have a full squad.

Kathy DeChirico, a sophomore, led the field with a time of 21:07, beating Lycoming's top runner by a mere six seconds. This fine showing put Kathy in the 14th position on Lycoming's list of the top 20 course times.

Next for Wilkes was sophomore Jane Brown cruising in with a time of 24:28. She placed third overall. Brown was followed by sophomore Tracey Hebron who posted a time of 24:29.

Unfortunately, the girls were forced to forfeit since five runners constitute a full team and only three lady Colonels were able to run.

The men's team ran a strategic race, but were outmatched by the Lycoming Warriors by a score of 38-22.

Senior Mike Keohane had an outstanding race. Enroute to posting a 28:47 time, he outdistanced Lycoming's number one runner by over a minute. His time makes him the 10th fastest competitor on the Lycoming course.

Junior Tom Urso placed second for Wilkes while posting his best time of the season, 30:43. Doug Lane came in next for the team. He showed a steady improvement with a time of 33:59.

Junior Pete Huber, with a 36:31 time, was followed by Murnal Abate in 36:45. Both improved on their season's best. Last but not least was freshman John Raksky who finished his first college 5-mile race with determination to spare.

The next scheduled meet is on October 15, away against Albright College. Show some support for this awesome Colonel team, they deserve it.

Colonels get beaten

by Jim Pyrah

The Wilkes Colonels have managed to turn the old cliché around this year; they have gone from riches to rags.

After opening season wins over Lebanon Valley and Upsala and much pre-season hype about an elusive MAC title for Coach Unsworth and his charges, the Colonels have dropped two straight games. The first was a heartbreaking loss to defending champion Lycoming College.

The more recent of these two was this past Saturday when Wilkes was on the losing end of a 24-3 game against Susquehanna.

Turnovers proved to be as great a problem as the opposing crusaders. Senior signal caller Brad Scarborough had five passes pilfered by the Susquehanna secondary. Add two fumbles and the Colonels coughed the ball up a total of seven times.

Susquehanna tallied first with 9:11 left in the first quarter. Wilkes followed with it's only score of the afternoon, a 24-yard Sean Meagley field goal.

In the second half, Susquehanna scored three more times; once through the air, once on a 47-yard run by Kevin Weber and once on a 23-yard field goal. The final score was 24-3.

Wilkes settled for 70 yards on the ground and another 137 yards in the air. Scarborough was 16 of 37. Susquehanna racked up close to 400 yards total offense including 247 on the ground and 170 in the air.

It was only a matter of time before opposing coaches got wise to Coach Unsworth's pass happy offense and built their defensive game plan around that fact.

Scarborough attempted an incredible 63 passes last week against Lycoming and an equally eye-popping 37 in the losing effort against Susquehanna.

It's not that the Colonels can't run the ball. Besides having one of the most experienced and talented offensive lines in the conference, running backs abound. Freshman Dean Ambosie's talents alone would make one want to keep the ball on the ground. Include freshman Bill George and injured sophomore sensation Courtney McFarlane and you have the makings for a potentially explosive ground game.

Coach Unsworth's plan doesn't allow for an attack though. Case in point: against Lycoming. Wilkes had the ball in goal from the one. The called is a tight end pop the middle. The ball in the ground incomplete for the Colonels it was intercepted.

Legendary coach Lombardi once said that didn't like to pass because "only three things happen and two of them are bad." Scarborough learned that lesson this week.

This is not to anything away Scarborough, his record or the team in general. Scarborough has proven that he is a talented athlete. In fact you may sympathize with him being called on to throw times in a game.

Tony DiGrazia and Ulitchney are unquestionably two of the finest receivers in the MAC.

Wilkes may just be one of the best teams in the conference this year put until they overcome their reliance on the passing game. Show some patience with the running game no one ever find out.

Trivia Time

Tom Gasper is pretty hot stuff. He answered both of our Trivia Time questions for the second time this year. As a matter of fact, Tom even helped in the formulation of this week's questions.

The Say Hey Kid, Willie Mays went longest between MVP years. He was voted the national league MVP in 1954 at age 23 and won it again 11 years later in 1965. Also, the designated hitter rule has been in effect since the 1973 season, a total of 13 years.

I understand that there have been people out there who would like to try their hand some ice hockey trivia so question # 1 is for you.

QUESTION #1

After the Montreal Canadians, which team has won the most Stanley Cups?

QUESTION #2

It was mentioned in an article in this week's Beacon that Wilkes had the 4th longest winning streak in collegiate football with wins in a row. Can you name the team which had the longest streak in history?

HINT: The 47 game streak ended in 1957 after the team was beaten by Notre Dame 7-0.

If you think you can answer both of these questions let us know in the Beacon on the third floor of the S.U.B.. The first person with the correct answer will get a $5.00 prize.
