Wilkes: Real Progress, Greater Promise

BY DR. TIM GILMOUR, WILKES UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT

I AM PLEASED TO REPORT SOME WONDERFUL NEWS FOR WHICH EVERY MEMBER OF THE Wilkes University family can be proud. A team of reviewers from the Middle States Commission on Higher Education recently issued an exceptionally positive assessment of the progress Wilkes has made over the past five years and for its potential for the future.

This assessment was expressed in the Periodic Review Report. These reviews are required of all Middle States institutions at the mid-point in their ten-year accreditation cycle to ensure that they are taking the steps necessary to meet the increasingly demanding Middle States criteria.

To say we are well perceived by our reviewers is putting it mildly. They said, "Wilkes University is a center for excellent education, with a faculty, administration and staff whose priority is the education of leaders for today and tomorrow."

The Middle States reviewers discovered an undeniable climate of academic excellence here. They noted that "... Wilkes University is becoming known as a place for exceptional education and exceptional opportunities for personal and professional growth."

The evaluation team was particularly impressed with the university's planned focus on mentoring to produce exceptional results in all of its academic programs and commented that the past several years have seen a complete revamping of the university's financial management operation, creation of a transparent budget process, and significantly improved food service, purchasing, and public safety functions.

As someone who has dedicated his adult life to academics, I love to hear words like transparent when describing a budget process. That word speaks volumes about integrity and honesty, and those will always be watchwords at this university.

I must mention a line that virtually leaps from the page of our Middle States report. When commenting about our Campus Master Plan, the reviewers observed that "Wilkes has unleashed its imagination on the future." I can't help but reflect on what a wonderful commentary this is on all the work that we do here. At its heart, the function of any institution of higher education is to touch society's tomorrows through the accomplishments of those we teach today.

Make no mistake, Wilkes has challenges to face to reach its full potential. We will address those challenges head-on with the help of all of you and fulfill our great promise as a university. Those challenges include reaching the ambitious goals that the board of trustees sets with us. The Board has centered the university's strategic plan on three points of focus: excellence and growth in educational programs, developing world-class support programs, and valuing our people through a focus on their development. You will hear more about each of these initiatives as we continue to make progress in the coming years.

Reaching these goals will take hard work, dedication, and talent, but I believe those attributes are present here today in the talented students, faculty, committed alumni, and staff who comprise the Wilkes community. ■■

Legacy families make Wilkes a part of their lives

Why do people love Wilkes? The reasons are as diverse as the people themselves. But there must be something special when, year after year, alumni recommend Wilkes to their children and their children's children. A lot of families are making Wilkes University a multigenerational part of the family—a part that permanently connects them to the university's past...and to its future.

"We're celebrating the many connections legacy families have to Wilkes University, and we are excited about telling the stories of how Wilkes continues to offer an experience that transcends the generations," said Sandra Carroll, executive director of alumni relations.

Legacy families help expand the Wilkes family for the benefit of the entire university, according to Mike Frantz, vice president for enrollment and marketing. "Alumni who recommend Wilkes to prospective students are giving a great gift to their alma mater. That recommendation is a powerful endorsement of the university—especially if the student is a family member," said Frantz.

The Zokas: Academic Achievers at Wilkes

Three sisters, three Wilkes University students. For the Zoka family, 1990–1991 was the biggest Wilkes year of all: Kim was a senior, Krista a junior, and Kathy a freshman. Kim also worked in the admissions office, giving tours and educating potential students about the Wilkes University experience. Krista was on the basketball team, and Kathy was just starting the studies that would lead to her graduating first in her class. "We all felt very welcome at Wilkes," Krista said. "To me, Wilkes is like a big family."

Although the three Zoka sisters grew up in nearby Kingston, it wasn't a given that they would enroll at Wilkes. After all, their parents, Suzanne and Robert Zoka, might have pushed the schools they attended (Marywood University and the University of Scranton respectively). Instead, the eldest, Kimberly Ward '91, decided on Wilkes because of its academic reputation and also because of a professor who took the time to talk with her about her initial goal of attending medical school. Kim recalls that her sister, Krista Rubino '92, chose Wilkes because of two people. "It was a combination of me and the basketball coach," she said. By the time sister number three, Katherine Genovese '94, was heading for college, she had already taken an early calculus class at Wilkes and visited her sisters enough to know she would follow in their footsteps. The scholarships all three received helped seal the deal.

The girls did well. Kathy had a 4.0 grade point average and received the Maxwell award for graduating at the top of her class, Kim posted a 3.472, and Krista 3.2. Today, Kim uses her bachelor's degree in biology and minor in chemistry at Pfizer Inc. in Groton, Conn., where she's a scientist in the regulatory chemistry, manufacturing, and controls department. Krista earned a bachelor's degree in psychology/elementary education, followed by a master's in educational development and strategies, and taught first grade for eight years before becoming a stay-at-home mom to her three young children. Kathy earned a bachelor's degree in math and a master's in education and now teaches math at GAR Memorial High School, just a few blocks from the Wilkes University campus.

"I tell my students to go to Wilkes," Kathy said. "I tell them you don't need to go to a really huge school to get a good education."

The Boyles: Almost 50 Years at Wilkes

For the Boyle sisters, Wilkes University offered a lifeline to higher education. Scholarship aid was an important consideration for the Wilkes-Barre family with seven daughters. "Educating seven children was quite a challenge to my mother after my father died in 1963," recalled Patricia Boyle Heaman '61, the eldest of the sisters. "Wilkes had a reputation for offering an excellent education in the liberal arts to students who couldn't manage the financial strain of room and board in addition to tuition." It helped that each of the Boyle sisters, who attended Wilkes as commuting students, received a scholarship.

Five of Patricia's six sisters followed her to Wilkes:

- Stephanie Cawley '66 of White Haven, now director of the Carbon County Bureau for the Aging.
- Suzanne Rash '69 who was a reading specialist in the Wilkes-Barre Area School District until her death this past year.
- Marion Petrillo '70 of Wilkes-Barre, English professor at Bloomsburg University.
- Anne Boyle '75 of Winston-Salem, N.C., professor of English and women's studies at Wake Forest University.

• Jacquelyn Ghormoz '78 of Wilkes-Barre, a director and counselor in the student affairs office and adjunct faculty member in psychology at College Misericordia.

Patricia met husband Robert J. Heaman at Wilkes, where he retired in 2001 as professor emeritus of English after a career that included serving as dean of the School of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences. Although their older daughter, Maggie, earned her degrees from other colleges, she laid the foundation at Wilkes through the Young Scholars Program and Wilkes theater programs while she was in high school. Maggie is now resident designer and costume shop manager for the San Jose (Calif.) Ballet Company. Younger daughter Catherine earned a bachelor's degree in psychology from Wilkes in 1992 and a master's in counseling from Villanova University and is an independent communication systems consultant in Philadelphia.

Except for graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania, Patricia has made Wilkes part of her daily life since 1957. She taught English at Wilkes for almost 40 years and was founding director of the Writing Center, coordinator of women's studies, and chair of the English department before retiring in 2001. "In all, I've been affiliated with Wilkes for close to 50 years," the professor emeritus of English said. "It has been a second home and family to me throughout that time."

The Heamans extended their legacy to Wilkes and their recognition of the importance of scholarships for promising students in the liberal arts through the Patricia Boyle Heaman and Robert J. Heaman Scholarship, awarded each year to a junior or senior majoring in English with a literature concentration.

The Pawlushes: Entering the Second Generation

When the five Pawlush siblings got together last summer for the first time in years, it wasn't surprising that Wilkes University popped up in conversation. After all, the siblings are all Wilkes alumni, as are three of their spouses. And now, the first member of the second Pawlush generation has graduated from Wilkes. "Wilkes has been a big part of our lives, and we all appreciate the opportunity that we had," said George Pawlush '69, eldest of the siblings. "All of us in some way picked up something that became essential and guided us through our careers."

In addition to George, the Pawlush siblings include:

by school registered nurse at Wilkes.

- Michael Pawlush '82, information technology resource manager for the U.S. Navy in Mechanicsburg.
- Neil Pawlush '84, a chemistry professor at Albany College of Pharmacy.

As the first Pawlush sibling to head to college, George chose Wilkes because of its academic reputation and low cost and the fact that about 40 of his high school classmates in Wilkes-Barre also went to school there. He worked in sports publicity as a student and became the institution's first sports information director after he graduated. During his 11 years working at Wilkes in public relations, he met his wife, Carol Corbett Pawlush '79, who at the time was secretary to the director of financial aid. George is now the vice president of public relations and community affairs for Greenwich Hospital in Connecticut, and Carol is a college relations officer for the Yale New Haven Health System.

George Pawlush IV '98, eldest of George and Carol's three children, was born during the Wilkes years and was a frequent visitor to the administration offices—as a baby and toddler. Attracted to Wilkes for reasons other than those

If your family is a Wilkes University legacy family—or if you know another family with multiple members who are alumni—we'd love to hear about it. Please fill out the reply card in this issue and tell us about your connections.

"Legacy families demonstrate the personality of a university—the depth of character and influence that flourishes through the generations," said Sandra Carroll, executive director of alumni relations.

Legacy families will be honored in various ways, such as with special name tags at homecoming or legacy receptions at open houses, Carroll explained.

Alumni are also encouraged to begin new legacy families by referring family members and other prospective students to the admissions office. An online referral form may be found at www.wilkes.edu/alumni/involved/refer.asp.

Taking Action for Diversity

BY TRACEY M. DOOMS

ONE YEAR AGO, WILKES University adopted its Diversity Action Plan, designed to guide the university in its quest to become a more diverse community in which cultural differences are understood and valued. Today, concrete results are already visible, even as Wilkes makes plans for the next two decades...and beyond.

Among the diversity success stories being told at Wilkes:

- New outreach programs target potential students of color and other underrepresented populations by visiting high schools with higher enrollments of minority students.
- Departments report annually about progress on diversity and multiculturalism.
- A diversity ambassador program brought together more than two dozen students from underrepresented groups at the beginning of the fall semester for a three-day retreat. Upperclassmen took new students "under their wings" to help them adjust to campus and begin long-term mentoring.

- A diversity series is bringing performers from a variety of cultures to campus.
- Efforts to seek and hire minority faculty and staff are included in each search process.

Rising to the Challenge

Although the entire university is working to turn the Diversity Action Plan into reality, it has been led by Provost Maravene Loeschke. When she arrived at Wilkes three years ago, one of her primary goals was to increase diversity—and appreciation for diversity—at the university.

"We knew this would be challenging in this geographic area," she said. The 2000 U.S. Census tallied the Scranton/Wilkes-Barre/Hazleton metropolitan area population at 96.8 percent white; at that same time, 96.4 percent of Wilkes University students were white. Meanwhile, the makeup of the broader U.S. economy in which students will work and live is changing dramatically. U.S. Census projections indicate that people of color will make up one-third of the U.S. population by 2015 and nearly half of the population by 2050.

Loeschke set up a diversity task force, which recommended creating an administrative position responsible for diversity. In March 2003, Alan Zellner '72 was appointed the university's first director of diversity. The former head wrestling coach had served as coordinator of minority affairs from 1989 to 1995.

Zellner's first major task was to write the Diversity Action Plan, with input and approval from the president and academic community. Loeschke noted, "We're very proud that the faculty unanimously approved the Diversity Action Plan."

The final plan was approved in June 2004. The document lays out the overall goal of promoting and supporting a culture of increased diversity at the university and in the community, noting that "we are motivated by the belief that students who experience a more diverse learning environment are better prepared for personal and professional success in a global and diverse world." The plan's view of diversity and multiculturalism encompasses not just ethnicity but also religious belief, sexual orientation, age, gender, and ability.

The Diversity Action Plan outlines five primary goals:

- Create a more supportive campus community that respects and celebrates cultural, ethnic, and racial experiences.
- Recruit, retain, and graduate a racially and ethnically diverse student body.
- Recruit and retain a racially and ethnically diverse faculty and staff.
- Ensure that the Wilkes undergraduate experience is racially and ethnically diverse.
- Assign accountability to achieve the long-term progress envisioned in this plan.

Visible Results

The Diversity Action Plan has been in place for a little more than a year, yet achievements are already being made. The primary reasons for such quick progress, according to Loeschke, are Zellner's "energy" and the fact that faculty believe in the importance of a diverse culture.

"This shows the commitment of management—from the president on down—to ensuring that everyone who comes to our campus feels welcome and safe," Zellner said.

Thanks to proactive measures, one-fourth of new faculty hires for the 2005–06 academic year were from diverse populations, including Chinese, Japanese, Bahaman and Indian. The faculty search manual outlines new procedures such as advertising positions in publications with large minority readership. "We're not leaving it to chance that we will get a diverse applicant pool," says Josephine Panganiban, vice president of human and organization development.

Panganiban noted that, once faculty from underrepresented populations are hired, further measures work to help them become accustomed to the Wilkes environment. New faculty members are assigned a mentor, for example, but now the department chair also follows up with activities such as having lunch with the new hire and his or her spouse.

"The biggest challenge is that Wilkes-Barre itself is not a very diverse population in terms of race, although it is very diverse in terms of religion, ethnicity, and culture," Zellner said. "Therefore, enticing people of color to come into the area is a major challenge for everyone." As people from diverse cultures move to the area—whether to live and work or to attend college—he noted, it's important both to help current residents be sensitive to change and to assist newcomers in becoming comfortable.

The university is making great progress. The number of students from diverse populations increased from 4.7 percent in fall 2000 to 6.9 percent in fall 2005.

The Diversity Action Plan is also moving into a new phase, as the university considers recommendations of the Multiculturalism Across the Curriculum Task Force for making multiculturalism a part of studies across campus, said Gina Zanoli Morrison, committee chair and assistant professor of education. "People are already doing wonderful things in their courses," she said. For example, the voices of women and minority authors are being examined in literature classes, and teacher candidates take a multicultural education course "so they are prepared for America's classroom," Morrison said.

From curriculum to hiring procedures, diversity is being built into everyday life at Wilkes University.

"I know from experience."

Loeschke said, "a diverse campus is a richer campus." ■

Alumni, Friends Take Grand Tour of Italy

More than 60 Wilkes alumni, staff, and friends traveled to Italy this summer for a 10-day excursion. The group visited sites from the Amalfi Coast to Venice and along the way established great new friendships, had many laughs, and created new memories.

The travelers toured the canals of Venice, took gondola rides at sunset, visited landmarks including the Statue of David in Florence, the famous leaning Tower of Pisa, and the Roman Coliseum, and explored the ruins of Pompey. The trip included guided tours, dinners, and transportation throughout the country.

"This is the place where legends were made, every story was a fairy tale, and I knew I would never want to leave," said Michele Diskin '95, associate director of alumni relations.

The tour ended in Rome where each traveler took an illuminations tour of the streets of Rome and made wishes in the fountain. Perhaps some of the wishes were for another European adventure? The alumni office can certainly oblige! (See sidebar.)

Faculty-Mentored Research Hits the West Coast

One normally associates DNA fingerprinting with detectives trying to solve a crime, but at Wilkes University this scientific research technique is used to determine how oak forests regenerate.

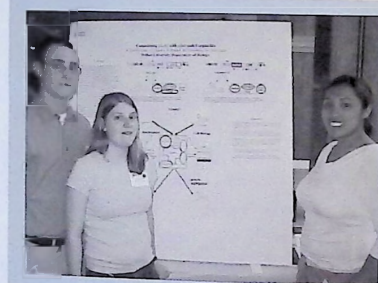

Research on oak forest regeneration, as well as research on chilling sensitivity of certain plants and the use of genetic engineering to trick plants into making colored intracellular structures, were part of a larger presentation by 13 Wilkes University biology students at the annual American Society of Plant Biologists (ASPB) convention in Seattle this summer.

Kristy Hicks, Kamran Kalim, Drew Layer, Christopher Pray, Jennifer Ramil, Cassie Sailus, David Scordino, Shuja Shafqat, Deana Mikhalkova, Ashley McBrearty, Benjamin Palachick, James Bochicchio, and Ashley Moore were accompanied by Dr. William B. Terzaghi, associate professor of biology, who served as faculty mentor in the research.

Wilkes students gave five different presentations in both a special undergraduate session and during the main meetings. Wilkes University had the largest undergraduate contingency among

Wilkes Names Recipient of Prestigious McGowan Scholarship

Senior accounting major Denise Cole has been named the 2005 William G. McGowan Scholar. She will receive a one-year, full-tuition scholarship to Wilkes for the 2005-06 academic year. The William G. McGowan Scholarship is named in honor of the humanitarian and telecommunications pioneer who founded MCI Communications Corporation. The scholarship provides select colleges and universities with a way to identify outstanding business students.

Cole is president of the university's award-winning Students in Free Enterprise (SIFE) organization and holds membership in the business and accounting club and Students for the Advancement of Management (SAM). Cole is a Dean's List student and a resident assistant. She is a coordinator for Volunteers in Tax Assistance (VITA), a group of accounting majors who prepare tax returns at no cost to lower income and elderly individuals. She also volunteers with REACH, a program that helps at-risk families gain financial knowledge. Cole is the recipient of an accounting scholarship from the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants and is a two-time recipient of both the Presidential Volunteer Service Award and Service Leadership Award.

Pharmacy Practice Faculty Author New Column in Local Newspaper

The 15 faculty members in the Nesbitt College of Pharmacy and Nursing Department of Pharmacy Practice are serving as experts and guest authors for a new column in The Times Leader. The column, titled "Rx Answers," appears twice a month in the newspaper's Health section. Faculty answer questions submitted by Times Leader readers on a variety of topics, including issues relating to generic drug use, drug interactions, and general health and wellness.

The column allows pharmacy faculty, all of whom are advanced-practice pharmacists, to provide an educational service to the local and regional community.

Members of the Colonels football team lent a hand to more than 400 freshmen resident students as they moved into campus dorms for the start of the fall 2005 semester.

Sporting t-shirts that read, "If we can't move it, it can't be moved," the team helped students and parents carry boxes, computers, clothes, and furniture.

"This was a great opportunity for the players to meet incoming students and parents and interact with all facets of campus," said Frank Sheptock, head football coach. "We want our students to take pride in the university and take a leadership role in the mentoring of freshman teammates and the student body as a whole."

Nearly 950 freshmen and returning students reside on campus this academic year, up from 860 last year.

General Colin Powell (Ret.) and Bob Woodward Highlight Upcoming Lectures at Wilkes

Former Secretary of State General Colin L. Powell, USA (Ret.) will speak at Wilkes University's Outstanding Leaders Forum on December 6, 2005 at 7:30 p.m. The event will be held at the EM Kirby Center on Wilkes-Barre's public square and is presented by the Jay S. Sidhu School of Business and Leadership.

The Outstanding Leaders Forum features the inspiring insight and experience of recognized national and international leaders who embody the principles of authentic leadership and strategic excellence.

General Powell became the 65th Secretary of State in January 2001, bringing extensive experience with him to his office. Before becoming Secretary of State, he served as a key aide to the Secretary of Defense and as National Security Advisor to President Reagan. He also served 35 years in the United States Army, rising to the rank of Four-Star General and serving as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (1989-1993). During this time, he oversaw 28 crises, including the Panama intervention of 1989 and Operation Desert Storm in the victorious 1991 Persian Gulf War.

General Powell is the author of his best-selling autobiography, My American Journey.

Tickets for the event are $35, $25, and $15 and are on sale at the Kirby Center Box Office: 570-825-1100,

On Sunday, April 23, 2006, award-winning investigative reporter Bob Woodward will deliver the 25th Annual Max Rosenn Lecture in Law and Humanities. The event is free and open to the public.

Woodward is an assistant managing editor of The Washington Post and the only contemporary American writer to author or co-author at least eight #1 national best-selling non-fiction books. In 1973, The Washington Post won the Pulitzer Prize for the reporting of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein on the Watergate scandal.

The New York Times has said, "Bob Woodward is the most famous investigative reporter in America." Newsweek has excerpted five of his books in headline-making cover stories and three of Woodward's books have been made into movies.

His most recent book, The Secret Man: The Story of Watergate's Deep Throat, is a riveting look at the historic Watergate scandal and the revelation of former FBI operative Mark Felt as the infamous Deep Throat.

Dr. Cox Donates $150,000 to Establish Annual Speech and Debate Tournament

Dr. Harold Cox, professor emeritus and university archivist, recently donated $150,000 to establish an annual forensics tournament at Wilkes. The communication studies department held the first Harold Cox Invitational Forensics Tournament in February. The two-day competition included 12 national-level speech and debate events and brought colleges from throughout the mid-Atlantic region to the Wilkes campus.

Dr. Cox's gift will provide invaluable funding for the speech and debate team as it competes in regional and national tournaments. Since its founding in 1935, the Wilkes Debate Society and its members have won more than 1,500 awards in intercollegiate competition.

Wilkes Announces Nanotechnology Guaranteed Placement Partnership

Wilkes and Luzerne County Community College (LCCC) have entered into an articulation agreement to offer LCCC students guaranteed placement into the university's bachelor of science in applied and engineering sciences program.

Under the agreement, students earning an associate's degree in either nanofabrication manufacturing technology or electronics engineering technology from LCCC will be awarded transfer and advance placement credits, allowing them to matriculate into Wilkes' engineering program as a third-year student.

Three nearby public school districts have also entered into the cooperative 2+2+2 agreement, allowing students interested in electronics and nanotechnology to move seamlessly from their high school through LCCC, then on to Wilkes University.

Wilkes University's instructional programs meet the needs of both graduates and employers by providing appropriate academic preparation, experences, and competencies required for baccalaureate-level employment in the expanding fields of nanofabrication technology, nanomanufacturing technology, and biotechnology. Nanotechnology refers to the design and production of extremely small electronic devices and circuits built from atoms and molecules.

"There is strong, active interest in this program among area high school students," said Dr. David Wells, chairman of the engineering and physics department at Wilkes University. "Our expanding engineering programs enable students to develop expertise in new technologies that are so central to the region's developing industry."

Recently, the 2+2+2 program held a NanoCamp at Wilkes University where students from local high schools were given extensive hands-on electronic experience, toured several area industries, and learned about technologies that are opening significant new career opportunities in Northeastern Pennsylvania and nationwide. The camp is part of a larger program to help students more effectively navigate the path from high school through college to careers in developing technologies.

The agreement is also encouraging news for the region's manufacturers including Fairchild Semiconductor, the leading global supplier of high performance products.

"This program will be a benefit to local technology companies such as Fairchild by providing a great resource to recruit qualified and well educated graduates," said Dr. Rodney S. Killek Sr., staff engineer at Fairchild Semiconductor. "It will also be a benefit to the community potentially providing the graduates an opportunity to remain in northeast Pennsylvania." (1)

Kickin' Around in Europe:

Women's soccer team experiences teambuilding through travel

BY DOUBA TALANCO '08

Straussburg, Stopping, spelunking, and soccer. These entities topped the itinerary of the Wilkes University women's soccer team's week-long European vacation this August.

One of coach John Sumoski's goals when he came to Wilkes in 2002 was to offer this type of experience to his team.

"I think it should be a part of their educational experience to see another culture," said Sumoski.

After two years of fundraising, 15 teammates, Sumoski, a trainer, and a parent chaperone spent 10 days visiting Belgium, the Netherlands, and Germany. The team stayed at the Sittard Sports Hotel, complete with soccer fields onsite, and took day trips to various tourist attractions.

"We went to many of the big cities. In Cologne, we saw the cathedral—this huge, massive church. It was just incredible. In Amsterdam, we took a boat tour of the Rhine River," he said. "In Walkenburg, we toured caves made out of sandstone that were used as hideouts during the war."

The cave excursion was considered to be a team-building experience, as the team had to help each other navigate through the dark caverns by boat and by foot. Still wearing hard hats with flashlights, they also rode bikes through the caverns. Other points of interest Sumoski recalls are 800-year-old windmills in Holland, a sprawling winery in Germany, and a friarland cemetery where

8,000 American soldiers were buried.

This was not the first time senior forward Adrienne Richards, a communication studies major, was in Germany. However, she says, this trip allowed her to see more of Europe and play against the Europeans.

"The most appealing thing about the trip was the opportunity of playing four international matches," she said.

The women participated in four friendly games, playing against two Dutch teams, one Belgian team, and one team from Germany. Although Wilkes lost to each of the European teams, Sumoski said the games prepared his players for the upcoming season.*

"It's good to get that kind of experience and a few games under the belt," said Sumoski, adding that the European teams are quite good. "The women play very good soccer because they grow up watching it. They have a good understanding of it; it's part of their culture."

Richards was impressed with the ability of their European counterparts.

"The European players were very skilled athletes. Most girls play on a coed team until they were 15. The one German team we played had a German National player on their team. These teams and the games of soccer themselves were unlike anything we'll ever experience in the states," she said.

The team took a break and became spectators, watching a professional soccer game at Rhoda JC in Holland.

Sumoski is planning another trip for 2008. Trips are planned far in advance to give students plenty of time to raise funds for travel expenses (upwards of $2,000 per person). Through personal fundraising, last year's efforts raised about $10,000.

"This trip brought us closer together by sharing this once-in-a-lifetime experience with once-in-a-lifetime friends," said Richards. ■

Kickin' Around in Europe:

Women's soccer team experiences teambuilding through travel

BY DONNA TALARICO '06

SIGHTSEEING, SHOPPING, spelunking, and soccer. These entries topped the itinerary of the Wilkes University women's soccer team's week-long European vacation this August.

One of coach John Sumoski's goals when he came to Wilkes in 2002 was to offer this type of experience to his team.

"I think it should be a part of their educational experience to see another culture," said Sumoski.

After two years of fundraising, 15 teammates, Sumoski, a trainer, and a parent chaperone spent 10 days visiting Belgium, the Netherlands, and Germany. The team stayed at the Sittard Sports Hotel, complete with soccer fields onsite, and took day trips to various tourist attractions.

"We went to many of the big cities. In Cologne, we saw the cathedral—this huge, massive church. It was just incredible. In Amsterdam, we took a boat tour of the Rhine River," he said. "In Valkenburg, we toured caves made out of sandstone that were used as hideouts during the war."

The cave excursion was considered to be a real team-building experience, as the team had to help each other navigate through the dark caverns by boat and by foot. Still wearing hard-hats with flashlights, they also rode bikes through the caverns. Other points of interest Sumoski recalls are 800-year-old windmills in Holland, a sprawling winery in Germany, and a Holland cemetery where

8,000 American soldiers were buried.

This was not the first time senior forward Adrienne Richards, a communication studies major, was in Germany. However, she says, this trip allowed her to see more of Europe and play against the Europeans.

"The most appealing thing about the trip was the opportunity of playing four international matches," she said.

The women participated in four friendly games, playing against two Dutch teams, one Belgian team, and one team from Germany. Although Wilkes lost to each of the European teams, Sumoski said the games prepared his players for the upcoming season.*

"It's good to get that kind of experience and a few games under the belt," said Sumoski, adding that the European teams are quite good. "The women play very good soccer because they grow up watching it. They have a good understanding of it; it's part of their culture."

Richards was impressed with the ability of their European counterparts.

"The European players were very skilled athletes. Most girls play on a coed team until they were 15. The one German team we played had a German National player on their team. These teams and the games of soccer themselves were unlike anything we've ever experienced in the states," she said.

The team took a break and became spectators, watching a professional soccer game at Rhoda JC in Holland.

Sumoski is planning another trip for 2008. Trips are planned far in advance to give students plenty of time to raise funds for travel expenses (upwards of $2,000 per person). Through personal fundraising, last year's efforts raised about $10,000.

"This trip brought us closer together by sharing this once-in-a-lifetime experience with once-in-a-lifetime friends," said Richards. ■

family, friends, and benefactors have played a sustaining role in the future of the University and its students through bequests and other charitable estate planning techniques. The Marts Society recognizes the increasing number of contributors participating in gift planning programs to benefit Wilkes University. Membership in The Marts Society is attained through the commitment of any number of planned gifts, including bequests, charitable trusts, gift annuities, gifts of property with retained life estate, life insurance policies and retirement plan accounts. Many of these gift vehicles allow donors to contribute cash or appreciated assets to benefit Wilkes while earning income during their lifetime.

The Marts Society was named in honor of Dr. Arnold C. and Anne McCartney Marts. Dr. Marts became President of Bucknell University in 1925 and was instrumental in obtaining Bucknell University Junior College in Wilkes-Barre during the Depression years. Because he believed in the service offered to the young people of the Wyoming Valley, Dr. Marts provided the support and leadership the fledgling institution needed to become self-sustaining. Dr. Marts established a trust in 1964 which provided a lifetime income for Mrs. Marts after his death. Upon her death in 1994, more than $2 million was gifted to the University, which helped to make possible the addition of a campus of the Arnold C. Marts Sports and Conference Center.

For more information on becoming a member of The Marts Society, please contact the Development Office at 717-406-4500 or 1-800-WILKES-UN, ext. 4301.
