Hoover takes over as Dean

by Elizabeth Mazzullo

Art Hoover has been involved with campus life at Wilkes since he started as a student in 1951. Now in his 32nd year in Wilkes' administration, Hoover has taken over from another Wilkes tradition--Dean George Ralston--as Dean of Student Affairs.

Hoover said that after Ralston's retirement was announced last spring, the College opened a national search for a new Dean of Student Affairs. According to Hoover, he was one of three finalists chosen from "something like 102 applicants from all over the country." Hoover said he then went through two days of interviews before he was offered the position May 15.

Hoover started as Dean of Student Affairs on June 1, moving up from his former position as Associate Dean of Student Affairs.

Since last year, Hoover explained, "the area of Student Affairs has been broadened" to include two Associate Deans, the Residence Life Office (RLO), Student Activities and Career Services. The Health Services Office, the new Campus Counseling Services, Testing Services, Cooperative Education and Inter-collegiate and Intramural Athletics are also under Student Affairs.

Previously, Student Affairs encompassed the two Deans, RLO, Activities, the Health Services Office and Financial Aid.

Hoover said he has made changes in the Student Affairs Council. Under this "modified approach," the Student Affairs Council is made up of members of the Student Affairs professional staff and the presidents of four student organizations: Mark Snyder, Student Government; John Jankowski, Inter-Residence Hall Council (IRHC); Charlanne Stanton, Commuter Council (CC); and Debbie Pavlico, Circle K. Rachel Lohman also sits on the council as a "resource person," according to Hoover.

The Student Affairs Council now meets alternate Tuesdays from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. The Student Affairs staff meets the other Tuesdays to consider "training, staff development, and concerns."

Hoover explained that "underlying [these changes] are my concerns about opening communication."

Hoover has made other efforts to increase campus communication, including sending a letter detailing student services to all students in August.

He has also set up several ad-hoc committees to examine "areas we need to look at" on campus. Hoover said these committees, which met for the first time last Thursday, will report back to him in three weeks.

Topics the committees will address include a review of discipline and discipline

Gym plans nearly complete

by Michelle Munday

According to Charles R. Abate, Director of Business and Facility Operations, the plans for the Sports/Conference Center "are for the most part finished."

If everything holds to schedule, the "major" construction of the gym should begin sometime in March. Abate commented that the plans are "98 to 99 percent" complete. Any changes that have to be made will be small mechanical changes, such as the widening or the narrowing of a room.

The present gym has been used since 1950 when Wilkes College only had approximately 750 students.

Wilkes now has over 3,000 students and is in need of a new, better, and larger facility that will "stress recreation and fitness," commented Thomas B. Hadzor, Director of Capital Campaigns.

The new gym will not only be a place of fitness and recreation. It will also be a learning center.

Eugene Roth, National Chairman of the "Wilkes Tomorrow" campaign, commented at a recent press conference, "The need for this complex (Sports/Conference Center) at Wilkes College has been evident since the mid 1960's, and we have now broadened those plans to fulfill several other needs. For example," he said, "there is a crucial need for more classrooms, for more office space, for space sufficient to accommodate convocation and commencement exercises as well as seminars, conferences and community activities."

Roth continued, "Students must have space for recreation and they must

Wilkes students: Get off the bandwagon!

The four years that one spends in college are certainly a time of learning, experiencing, and growth, both academically and personally. By many, they are considered to be "the best years of your life."

It seems that many of the students of Wilkes College are not taking advantage of these precious years by developing themselves to the fullest. There is an apathy problem among the students, and it must be dealt with.

As students, we are given the opportunity to explore our own boundaries and discover our limits. We should be evaluating and re-evaluating our values, goals, and beliefs. We should be using this time to learn more about ourselves and those with whom we associate.

This growth can be aided by opening ourselves up to all areas of interest. It is upon this very idea that the philosophy of Wilkes is based. A liberal arts education requires that students become well-rounded individuals through not only learning but through experience as well.

The source of the problem is not very clear, so a definite or easy cure cannot be suggested. There are, however, a number of recommendations that can be made in order to alleviate some of the more severe symptoms.

Students of Wilkes are offered a great number of organizations to join and activities in which to participate.

There is always a lecture to be found somewhere on campus. These lectures deal with a variety of topics ranging anywhere from biology to history. Why not attend a biology lecture despite the fact that you're an English major?

The Dorothy Dickson Darte Center frequently houses a visiting musician or shows off talent found right here on campus among our own students. Or, check out the exhibits at the Sordani Art Gallery. A little bit of culture never hurt anyone--in fact, it may do some of us some good.

Other activities are available involving student publications. The Beacon, the Amnicola, and the Manuscript are always looking for a few good people. These organizations enable students to develop writing and other skills.

Students should get involved with the college by making it a point to attend the social functions on campus. Social skills are also important and contribute to the development of a "well-rounded" person.

The Programming Board has a full schedule of exciting events planned for the year. Students should show their appreciation by attending the coffeehouse concerts, and other activities.

The organizations listed here are just a handful of what is available to the students of Wilkes College. It is now up to them to make the next move by getting involved. Perhaps each student should jump off the bandwagon of apathy and be less afraid to develop his/her individuality.

First step done in clean-up

by Joe Kultys

"This was just the first step. The second step is to turn it into something of use for the community," said Dr. Kenneth Klemow, talking about the recent project for the clean-up of the Tubs.

The Tubs are a series of seven glacial potholes over which the stream Wheelbarrow Run flows. They are located off Route 115 in Wilkes-Barre. "It is geographically and ecologically interesting to everyone," states Klemow.

Klemow takes some of his Field Botany and Plant Ecology classes to the Tubs for experimentation and he feels that there are many benefits in cleaning up the Tubs.

"It's a nice place to go swimming," said Klemow, "but unfortunately, there is a lot of dumping garbage that goes on. It is a good place for recreation and natural education."

There have been clean-up projects at the Tubs before and there have also been studies done on the area, one in 1980 by Dr. Berryman of Wilkes College.

There are also efforts being conducted to make the Tubs a county park. These efforts are being undertaken by the Wilkes-Barre Green Committee, The Chamber of Commerce, and the citizens from the surrounding area.

"It would be nice to have a park there," said Klemow, "since there is nothing close to the Wilkes-Barre area. Francis Slocum and Ricketts Glen are at least a 15 minute drive away."

Four organizations from Wilkes College participated in the clean-up effort: the Biology Club, the Earth and Environmental Science Club, the Air Force ROTC, and the Circle K Club.

"Along with other groups," commented Klemow,

"there were around 150 people there, usually 70 to 80 at one time."

Klemow feels that they cannot limit access to the park, but the dumping has to be prevented.

Klemow also stated, "The students put a lot of effort into this project. They took time out from their own studying."

The second stage of the clean-up project would be to do something constructive with the Tubs. If this happens, Dr. Klemow and Dr. Redmond would be consulted about determining the future use of the Tubs.

Paul Adams, the Associate Dean of Student Affairs, was invited by the Committee on Economic Growth to enlist the support of the student organizations at Wilkes.

"This project was a perfect opportunity for all of the students to get together and give something back to the community," said Adams.

According to Adams, there was a "very enthusiastic response" from all the clubs, especially from Circle K. Circle K was contacted by the Committee on Economic Growth separately.

Adams also commented on the efforts made by members of the community. "[They] made a great commitment by supplying equipment and manpower. The progress was evident, and you had a sense that you were doing something of significance."

Adams expressed a personal interest in the project, since it was many students' first contact with the Tubs. "It is a very beautiful national resource. If you've been up there once you want to go back again."

Writing Lab adds hours, new services

Writing Lab tutor Karen Natishan helps a student type a paper on one of the Lab's new Macintoshes. The Macintoshes are one of the Lab's new services for students.

by Ellen Campbell

The Wilkes College Writing Lab has changed more than its location this year.

According to Dr. Patricia Heaman, director of the Writing Lab, the Writing Lab has a "new spot, a larger location, and longer hours to accommodate students who are unable to come during the day."

The Lab, now located in Kirby 107, began a new schedule of hours this week. Heaman announced the following hours: Monday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Tuesday 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Wednesday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Thursday 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Friday 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

In addition, appointments can be made for alternate hours. Heaman emphasizes, "It is a good idea to make an appointment because we are already getting quite a few drop-ins." The Writing Lab may be reached by calling ext. 418.

This year the Writing Lab contains five Macintosh computers and two printers. Heaman said, "We hope to develop more and more software to be used for writing instruction."

The Lab now employs 13 tutors. The tutors will attend mandatory in-service meetings every two weeks. "We talk about the writing process so that our tutors know how to help with prewriting, composing, reviewing, and revising," said Heaman.

During these meetings the tutors also discuss assignments referred to the Lab by various disciplines. Heaman said, "Currently, the Lab is acting as a resource for writing assignments in History, Accounting, Physics, Engineering, Nursing, and Communications. We also work on specifics such as lab assignments, abstracts, and summaries." She added, "We see students from just about any course where there is writing."

Planning for the future, Heaman would like to see the Writing Lab become central to the preparation of all students who become graduates of Wilkes. Heaman concludes, "As more and more disciplines see writing as essential, the Writing Lab will serve as a resource for both students and faculty."

Alumni phone-a-thon to begin Monday

by Jim Evelock

It will soon be time for the annual Wilkes College alumni phone-a-thon. Phone-a-thon volunteers will start dialing on September 29 at 6:30 p.m. and they will continue nightly until October 23.

The phone-a-thon has a special goal this year. The Surdna Foundation has offered Wilkes a challenge grant.

The conditions of the grant are as follows: if an alumnus contributed last year, and he increases his donation, "Surdna will match the increase dollar-for-dollar." If the alumnus has donated before, but not recently or is contributing for the first time, Surdna will also match those gifts "dollar-for-dollar." The 1986 goal of the phone-a-thon is $151,201.

Elizabeth Ackourey, Director of Annual Giving, is in charge of the phone-a-thon this year and has hopes of reaching approximately 13,000 Wilkes graduates.

Ackourey stated that the phone-a-thon format works because "some people can be reached other ways, and lends a personal touch, having alumni phone alumni."

Ackourey is active seeking student and alumni volunteers. Anyone interested should contact her extension 442.

As an added incentive, the conclusion of the phone-a-thon, volunteers will be permitted to make one free phone call anywhere in the United States.

have space for classrooms. This new space is essential if we are to produce well-rounded individuals with physical as well as mental proficiency."

After reviewing the plans for the new gym, it is apparent that there will be more than enough space to promote fitness, recreation, and learning.

The basement level of the new complex will have floor hockey and wrestling practice areas, along with an exercise/dance room, a weight room, a steam room, a sauna, and men's and women's locker rooms. There will also be Faculty/Official locker rooms located on this level.

The first floor of the gym will have several classroom offices, storage rooms, conference rooms, a duplication room, racquetball courts, kitchen, a ticket booth and the lobby.

The second floor will include a viewing gallery, conference and seminar rooms, multipurpose room, projection room, and interior and exterior balconies.

In addition to being a place to learn and work that will benefit the Wilkes population, the new Sports/Conference Center will also benefit the community.

memory of Dr. Grace Kimball, who was a member of Wilkes' Biology faculty from 1963 to 1974. The scholarship is part of an endowment which also provides for maintenance and operation of the College's Scanning Electron Microscope.

The Reif Scholarship is awarded each year to two senior Biology majors. Now in its third year, the scholarship was established by alumni in the Biology Department to honor Dr. Charles B. Reif, professor emeritus of biology, who was a member of the faculty for 41 years.

Charnetski named as chairman, plans student research

by Karen Natishan

Dr. Carl Charnetski was recently named as the new chairman of the psychology department, replacing Dr. Robert Riley who has held the position for the past 30 years.

A member of the Wilkes family for 10 years, Charnetski received his bachelor's degree in psychology from Wilkes, and both his master's degree and Ph.D. from Temple University. His post-doctoral education includes studies in stress and coronary artery disease at Albert Einstein University in New York, in chronic pain at Allegheny Hospital in Pittsburgh, and in anxiety at Hahnemann Medical School in Philadelphia. He also studied hypnosis with Dr. Theodore X. Barber, one of the top names in the field, and human sexuality with Masters and Johnson.

With all this under his belt, Charnetski still considers himself to be a "student of psychology."

"I try to educate myself continually," he said, and because of his desire to do so, he and his students are helping provide answers to questions that have puzzled researchers for years.

Sparked by research which began at Harvard, Charnetski's main interest lies in behavioral medicine, an aspect of psychology which examines the relationship between psychological parameters and their effect on the body. But Ivy League schools are not the only ones making new discoveries. Wilkes can also be added to the list.

In one experiment recently completed in collaboration with Dr. Lester Turoczi and Dr. Penelope Padgett, Charnetski and his students administered stress tests and self-esteem tests to a group of student volunteers. These same students were then measured for the amount of Immunoglobulin A (Ig. A), a protein which produces the cells that help fight infection, in their bodies. The results of the research indicated that students exposed to high levels of stress had significantly lower levels of Ig. A in their bodies than students under less stress. By the same token, students with high self-esteem had higher levels of Ig. A in their bodies than students with low self-esteem.

"What this told us," Charnetski explained, "is that the better your self-concept, the better you're able to defend yourself, by way of the immune system, against illnesses ranging from the common cold to cancer."

Undeclared and proud of it

by Amy Hancock

Because I was totally uncertain about what I wanted to do with my life, other than make a lot of money, of course, I entered college undeclared. I knew I wanted to attend (and finish) college, but I had such a variety of interests that pinning down only one was virtually impossible. Knowing that the core curriculum would keep me busy for a while, I entered Wilkes College as what I like to call a "generic" student.

The advantages of being undeclared far outweigh the disadvantages. Oh sure, I feel like a total blockhead when someone asks me what my major is. Usually I just say that I don't have one. (Sometimes I would like to say my major is The Beacon because it takes up so much time.) Needless to say, it would be nice if I could give myself an identity--some way to classify myself among the rest.

Another unpleasant side effect of having a no-name major is the more-than-occasional wave of severe insecurity, which makes me feel like my entire life is going to disintegrate. It usually strikes while I'm browsing through the Wilkes College Bulletin, in search of a major. To be honest, nothing ever appeals to me. Although this experience has repeatedly taken its toll on my emotional and psychological states of mind, I have yet to give up.

Nevertheless, being undeclared does have its bright spots. Last year, I watched countless friends and acquaintances change their majors. I wallowed in the delight of knowing how wise I was to give myself time to explore my options. (The average college student changes his major something like five to eight times in his college career. I don't want to be average.) While I leisurely complete the core requirements, which everybody has to do eventually, many of my comrades mull over the terrible mistakes they made by choosing inappropriate majors.

The undeclared major gives a student time to identify his strengths and weaknesses. By the time he has finished all the core requirements, a student should know where his interests and talents mesh. Then, for the rest of his college career he can concentrate on his chosen major.

Fret no more, all ye disillusioned and distraught undeclared majors. In time, everything will come together by itself.

Everyone deserves a day off

by Ellen Campbell

I did not intend to sleep the day away on Saturday, but that is exactly what I did.

My Friday plan for Saturday was to get up, tackle the mountain of wash sitting on my laundry room floor, cheer our youngest onto victory in his third soccer game of the season, can the basket of tomatoes that has been waiting for me all week on the back porch, and then iron a week's worth of shirts.

The actuality of Saturday only included two of the previously planned five--I got up and went to my son's soccer game. The rest of the day I was lazy. After a crazy week, I rationalized, I deserved a day off. Sunday, I promised myself, I would catch up.

But Sunday did not see the pace substantially quicken. I went to church with my family, pattered around the kitchen, and dozed over Shakespeare. Finally, around five o'clock I began to feel a surge of energy as I mentally checked my weekend accomplishments against my Friday intentions. I started on the tomatoes first, realizing that one more week of the porch would render them unintentional sauce. I finished the last load of laundry haphazardly washed over the weekend and placed the last pair of socks in its respective drawer. While my children pulled out backpacks to complete their homework, I looked over my own books which had remained unopened over the weekend. We all began schoolwork together.

By eleven o'clock Sunday night I had finished Shakespeare and wrapped up Poe--not too bad for a weekend of rest. Some weekends are for family, some weekends are for study, and some weekends are for me!

Newsflash! Last Sunday the Wilkes College gymnasium was the scene of a violent shark attack. No, not the sharks of "Jaws" fame, but the Sharks of a musical variety--and Wilkes will never be the same!

Sunday, a day notoriously known for peace and quiet, was disrupted by the energetic, hard driving music of The Sharks. I had never before seen The Sharks, but by the second song it was as though I had been a fan forever. The audience, too, for the most part felt the same way. Much of the crowd was up and dancing, no surprise because the Shark's music is very hard to sit still to.

Although the music is the main reason a person would come to see The Sharks, the show was complimented by the interaction on stage. It was obvious that these guys really enjoy playing together. Their onstage presence alone was a very big attraction. The band's interplay with the crowd was also important in the success of the show. The Sharks are the type of men that would make a girl leave home--at least overnight.

The audience never felt as if they were inadequate. For a less professional band playing for a small crowd might have interfered with the performance. The Sharks, from their first song to their last, gave their all.

Although many people are not aware of this, The Sharks have quite an extensive recording history in addition to their present release, "In a Black and White World." Their winning video was voted number twenty-six of the year on the MTV countdown for 1985.

Future plans for The Sharks include a new album being recorded at Kajen Studios. Three tracks have already been laid down but the work is far from over. They are still writing new songs and estimate that the new album will be out in five or six months. They also plan to play a few larger clubs and a college circuit in Lancaster and Connecticut.

It was obvious from the show on Sunday that The Sharks are most certainly an imposing force in the future of music in the Eighties, Ninties, and beyond.

Those students attending the concert were afforded a chance to catch a star definitely rising in The Sharks' favor. Those of you out there not lucky enough to catch the show, for whatever reason, missed the chance of a lifetime--you may never get the chance to see the Sharks as up close and personal again. Think about it.

Circle K members attend convention

The four Wilkes College Circle K members now holding positions on the state executive board are: (left to right) Bob Orlando, John Walsh, Leo Geskey, and Debbie Tippins.

WILKES-BARRE--The Wilkes College Circle K club now has members who are acting officers at both the Pennsylvania District level and the International level of the Circle K organization. The announcement was made by club president Debbie Pavlico.

Leo Geskey, from Wilkes, was elected to one of the nine vice president positions while at the International convention, held in Boston in August. He was elected by 480 delegates representing clubs from the United States, Canada, Mexico, the Caribbean, and the Bahamas. Geskey councils the New England, Nebraska-Iowa, and Illinois-Eastern Iowa regions. While at the convention, Geskey was presented with the Outstanding Governor award for his work as Pennsylvania District Governor last year.

On the District level, the Wilkes College club now has four members on the executive board for Pennsylvania, which is the third largest district in the International Organization. These four board members are: Governor Joe Andes, District Secretary Bob Orlando, District Treasurer Debbie Tippins, and Lt. Governor of the Eastern Division John Walsh.

The driver's point of view

by Marilyn Gruenloh

Although I first read the article entitled "The More Mature Student's Ten Commandments" on the same page of last week's issue, my eyes soon turned to the right. What did I behold but a picture of my left rear car window with my "DOG ON BOARD" sign. (I like to think I recognized it by the obvious shape of the sloping roof above it, but I must admit the blurriness of the picture indicated it was taken through much road dirt, and I'm definitely not a regular customer at the local car wash.)

Of course I immediately perused the article. Being a 37 year old widow who is raising three teenagers on Social Security benefits while pursuing a higher education, I naturally assumed some bright, young, wealthy pre-veterinary student saw my sign and wanted to offer the owner of the car, who obviously must have experience with canines, a high-paying job as an assistant in some research project.

Alas! As I read into the meat of the article, specifically the paragraphs dealing with "irritating things," things that irk the writer, and "silly signs," I realized that my property was being used as no more than a visual aid to enhance the writer's opinion of what he considered an important issue.

Well, Mr. Beacon-Contributing-Writer, I'm no fool. I lived through the tumultuous sixties, I know that an opinion on a college campus can become a burning national issue. What shall I expect next week, a picture of you burning my 99-cent "DOG ON BOARD" sign, in protest, on the pages of the recently revived Life magazine?

Before such drastic measures become reality, perhaps I should take issue with one of the points you made in your article. Although you refer to a "BABY ON BOARD" sign, you, in fact, use my sign as an example. You find these signs irritating, especially when what the signs indicate worry about is not "delivered." Well, Mr. Beacon-Contributing-Writer, my sign, which you so frivolously chose as an example, refers to a large Alaskan Malamute, a German Shepherd, and two large Dobermans. As you said, "fair's fair." You asked that the car sign not only warn, but "at least deliver." If you let me know your address or dorm and room number, I'll be happy to "deliver" (faster than Domino's.)

Quite seriously, though, I followed the tenth commandment for mature students--

"relax and enjoy." I would like to thank the writer the article for considering my '84 Escort with part of front bumper missing, "yuppie mobile" (I always thought of it as transportation.)

If my sign (on the window so as to not obstruct my view of the rear while driving), still offends "irks" you as the "yuppie" or "tackiness" of a generation, please understand that it was given to me as a gag gift by my teenage children. Many times they had to wait until I returned from a trip to the vet in order to have one-and-only "yuppie mobile" for their purposes.

What could be more relaxing during a hectic day than a little music and some light entertainment? This Tuesday, September 30, you can wind down to the sounds of Dave Wopat, the featured performer in the second selection in the "No RSVP" series, sponsored by the Programming Board.

Wopat will be appearing at 11 a.m. in the Stark lobby. This affords everyone a chance to take advantage of the entertainment that the Programming Board has planned just for the Wilkes College Community. Having the concert in the middle of the day gives a little lift to what would otherwise be a very routine Tuesday.

Wopat, a seasoned composer and guitarist, will entertain the Wilkes College crowd with his own original material and a few old favorites thrown in for good measure. Wopat has played in a variety of venues including clubs in New York City and Los Angeles. He has also extensively toured the college circuit.

Expect his set to include a mixutre of ballads and uptempo songs. He will definitely have something for everyone. So if you need a little respite from the hustle and bustle of classes, if you would like to revamp your outlook on the entire day, catch Dave Wopat in action. He is sure to provide the Stark Lobby with something new and different—with or without coupled with findings of similar nature, may eventually be published in psychological, biological, and medical journals. This may be one of the reasons Charnetski's plans for the Psychology Department include "beefing up the research students do." Other plans, although only in the thinking stage, include "building a bridge" between the business and psychology curriculums by focusing attention on certain electives in each major. Charnetski and Theodore Engel, Dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, believe there is a demand for psychology in business and a plan such as this would better prepare our students to meet this demand.

"No other major changes are planned for the near future," Charnetski stated. "We prepare our students for graduate school and they get an education that's second to none. The department has run quite well so far and what I'm interested in is maintaining that level of quality."

Hoover added that he wanted to ask the four student presidents to "get a group together to look at and elevate school spirit."

Hoover encouraged any students interested in working on any committee to see him.

Lady stickers post two wins

by Debbie DeCesare

The Wilkes field hockey team had a great week, as the stickers brought their record up to 3-2. On Thursday, the ladies hosted East Stroudsburg and with strong offense and defense, the ladies came out with a 1-0 win.

The goal was scored in the first half with a powerful hit across goal by Sharon Domzalski with Sue Dicton, in perfect position, deflecting the ball into the goal for the only score of the game.

The entire team played tough and with alot of enthusiasm in keeping East Stroudsburg from scoring.

On Saturday, the stickers defeated Albright. Both teams came out aggressively, and after the first half there was no score. In the second half, however, Wilkes came out psyched and scored the only goal of the game.

Sharon Domzalski hit the ball toward goal and Yvonne Pierman was there to deflect the ball toward the goalie's pads where Sue Dicton collected the ball and pushed it in for the winning goal.

The second team on Saturday played well but time did not permit any score. The game ended in a 0-0 tie, despite many shots taken by Alisa Geller and Maria Saracino. Tara Haas also had many close shots. Tara tipped a ball in off a free hit but it was said that the ball never touched her stick so the goal was called back. Excellent defense was shown by Dede Palin, Diane Schmitz and Brenda Fyfe.

Thursday the ladies will play at Lebanon Valley and Saturday will find them travelling to Delaware Valley.

De Chirico, Keohane lead Harriers

by Jane Brown and Tom Urso

On Saturday, the women's and men's cross country teams travelled to Delaware Valley College for a tri-meet competition against King's and Del. Valley.

The girls had a strong showing in their victory over King's by a score of 20-35 while edging Del. Valley 30-25. Wilkes top runner, Kathy DeChirico, placed fourth overall with a time of 24:24 on a 3.25 mile course. Other contributors to the effort were Jane Hydro, Jane Brown, Tracey Hebron and Mary Gould, placing second, third, fourth and fifth respectively for the team.

This gets the girls off to a good start; after two meets they have a record of 4-1.

Even though the boys showed determination, they were not able to overcome their opponents. The guys did, however, improve on last weeks performance. Against King's they lost 39-20 and scored 39-22 against Del. Valley.

The number one runner, Mike Keohane, had an impressive time of 29:39 on the tough 3.25 mile course. Other points were scored by Tom Urso, Doug Lane, Murnal Abate and Pete Huber. This brings their record to 1-5 with room for improvement in the final four meets.

Despite their defeats this week, the Wilkes cross-country teams will be ready for action at their next meet on October 4 against Lycoming College.

Bowling Club

The Wilkes College Bowling club is in action once again this year. The club bowls every Friday at Chacko's Bowling Lanes on South Main Street.

For the ladies, high scoring honors go to Mary Consugar 451, Crystle Coy 416, Lori Ott 395, Cindy Pieloch 380, and Steph Stine 370.

Bo Jackson 'bored' by football

By Jim Pyrah

News flash-- a Heisman trophy winner is bored by football. Former Auburn tailback and Heisman trophy winner, Bo Jackson, said recently he was bored watching the Alabama-Vanderbilt game.

Actually, what he said was that he couldn't care less if he sees another football game.

Somebody take that boys' temperature! Better yet, take his trophy. How can Jackson talk that way about the sport that was so very good to him, the sport that made him the focus of national attention?

Sure he still had baseball, but without his football glory he would have been just another face in the sea of prospects.

The fact of the matter is that Bo Jackson just may have wimped out. He turned down a $ 5 million offer to play pro football to accept a $1.06 million offer to play baseball. Why get decked by a 6'3" 265-pound mountain of meat when you can shag fly balls and kiss babies in Kansas City?

I just can't understand how a man can win an award for being the best in the country in a sport and then turn around and take a pay cut to play another sport.

The National League playoffs could prove more interesting than most people think. The Mets' pitching staff has received more publicity than any staff this year but, it is the staff of the Houston Astros that has more shutouts, strikeouts, and saves than the Mets.

The Mets do hold an edge in ERA, they sport a 3.19 ERA compared to the Astros 3.29 mark.

REUNITED above are Bernie Kusakavitch, Fred Klein and Dave Roebuck

Local trio leads Wilkes

by Jim Pyrah

When the curtain closed on the 1982 high school football season, it was the Grenadiers of G.A.R. who stood at center stage. The tough-as-nails bunch from the Heights section of Wilkes-Barre owned a 10-1 regular season record. Victories in two more post season contests allowed them to lay claim to the Eastern Conference Championship. The team was voted sixth overall in the state and number one in division two.

Fred Klein, Bernie Kusakavitch, and Dave Roebuck, were seniors on that team. Fred started at wingback and outside linebacker. He was named as an honorable mention All-Scholastic. Bernie rotated with Fred at the wingback spot as well as playing guard and defensive end. Dave was the team leader at quarterback and safety. Both Dave Roebuck and Bernie Kusakavitch were selected as All-Scholastics that year.

Just as these three players led the Grenadiers to a championship four years ago, they are leading the 2-0 Wilkes College Colonels this year. You see, all three are starters on the Wilkes defense which has allowed only ten points in two games.

You will find them as numbers 31, 32, and 33 in your program.

Bernie Kusakavitch, an All-American selection at his defensive end spot for the past two years, is in fine form for his senior season. Fred Klein will be part of the starting rotation in the defensive backfield. Finally, Dave Roebuck, one of the most consistent performers for the Colonels, returns at the safety position.

Kusakavitch and Klein were the Colonels' top tacklers in the season opening shutout of Lebanon Valley. They each had eight hits including four solo tackles for Bernie and three solos for Fred. Last week against Upsala it was Dave Roebuck who stepped into the hero's role. Roebuck picked off three serials and recovered a fumble to lead Wilkes to victory.

Charlie Fick is the head football coach at G.A.R. and he remembers coaching this talented trio. "Dave and Fred have been real close all their lives and they are both good kids," Fick commented. "As a matter of fact they both still come up on Friday nights to work the chains for us. Roebuck was a character, he kept everyone loose."

Coach Fick remembers his team's semi final game against Honesdale. "We were watching the films and there was something about Dave that just didn't look right. Finally we realized he had his jersey on backwards. Dave Roebuck played the entire game with his jersey on backwards."

Bernie Kusakavitch was a transfer student from Bishop Hoban. Coach Fick describes him as the "missing link" that G.A.R. needed that year.

Another member of that 1982 G.A.R. team was Rich Macko. Macko was voted the league MVP. Rich played football for Wilkes in 1984 before getting involved in his own business.

Incidentally, Coach Fick was a fullback on the 1972 Wilkes MAC championship team.

Ironically, G.A.R.'s only loss of the '82 season came at the hands of the Pittston Patriots. Pittston was led by quarterback Carl Deluca. Deluca, also is now a member of the Wilkes Colonels football team.

There are also two other players presently on the Wilkes roster who hail from G.A.R. They are Pat O'Brien and Mike Vessick.

The trio of Klein, Kusakavitch, and Roebuck has risen from the "Heights" to lead Wilkes College down that championship road -- a road they know well.

Colonels raise record to 2-0

by Jim Pyrah

Behind a defense that limited Upsala to 236 total yards, the Wilkes Colonels won it's second straight road game.

The defense was led by senior safety Dave Roebuck who picked off two Spencer Lester passes and recovered a fumble. Steve McKaig had eight solo tackles and five assists from his linebacker spot. Mark Habeeb also added an interception.

QB Brad Scarborough broke another school record in the game. He attempted 44 passes in the game, completing 24 of them. This gives Scarborough 320 career attempts and the record.

Despite the heavy reliance on the air attack, Coach Bill Unsworth gave freshman Dean Ambosie the ball 23 times. He produced 69 yards and scored one touchdowns for the Colonels. The offense totaled 290 yards with a 34 yard field goal in the second quarter.

Upsala came back with six play, 88 yard drive to take a 7-3 lead. Colonels scored once more a six yard run by Ambosie to take a 10-7 into the locker room.

Upsala managed a goal in the second half, wasn't enough as Ambosie put the game on ice with one yard plunge late in game. The final was 17-10.

The Colonels will face a major test this week defending champs Lycoming come to town. The game on Saturday at Ralston at 1:30. Make sure you there supporting Colonels.
