WILKES COLLEGE ALUMNUS

On the Cover

During the Homecoming game with Ursinus, high spot of the game during the mid-time break was the presentation by the Lettermen-past, present and future-of a photograph of Dean George F. Ralston. The Lettermen singled out Ralston for his intense loyalty to both the college and to the teams of the college. The presentation came as a complete surprise to the Dean. Hogen Oh, Alumnus staff photographer, trained his camera lens on Dean Ralston and Dr. Farley in the president's office. The portrait is between them.

15th ANNUAL HOMECOMING -- GREAT SUCCESS

Approximately 450-500 alumni returned for the 15th Annual Homecoming festivities on October 12 and 13. Various planning sessions by the General Chairman, Attorney Eugene Roth '57; Co-Chairman, Paul A. Klein, '60 and Attorney Gifford Cappellini, '45; by the Alumni Association officers: President, Russell Williams, '50; Vice-President, Leonard Mulcahy, '58; Secretary, Anita Janerich, '52; and Treasurer, Attorney Eugene Roth, '57 and by the Executive Committee were held prior to the big event. All of these efforts became a reality when the Homecoming Weekend "kicked-off" with the annual Warm-up Party on Friday evening, in the Alexander Room of the Host Motel. Co-Chairman, Dr. Frank Gazda, '59 and Dr. Carl Urbanski, '57 worked diligently to keep the evening's program running smoothly. Faculty members, alumni and guests from the Wilkes-Barre area and from all of the alumni chapter areas filled the Alexander Room. Renewing acquaintances and discussing careers highlighted the social informality of the evening. Appropriate decorations were provided by Theta Delta Rho, women's sorority at Wilkes.

A brief organizational meeting of Theater Alumni took place at 10:00 p.m. in one of the Host's dining rooms. Prior to the Warm-up Party, a committee of alumni judges headed by Leonard Mulcahy, Attorney Joseph Farrell and Attorney Thomas Brislin completed a review of all Homecoming displays in preparation for the awards presentation the following day.

Hollenback Hall, men's dormitory, won two trophies for the second straight year, one for the best over-all display, the other for the best display of men's dormitories. Catlin Hall, women's dormitory, won the trophy in that area, and the Biology Club captured the award in the campus organization's area.

Homecoming activities on Saturday got off to a fast start with the Wilkes-Fairleigh-Dickinson soccer game at 11:00 a.m. Many alumni watched the Wilkes soccer-men drop a hard-fought game by a 3-1 score.

In the afternoon a large crowd of alumni, students, and friends of the College witnessed the outstanding football victory of the Wilkes "Colonels" over the Ursinus "Bears." The thrilling goal-line stand by the Colonels in the closing seconds of the game netted the team a 12-6 victory. Prior to the game, the student car caravan arrived at the athletic field with the Homecoming Queen and her court. Miss Rowena Simms, a sociology major, was crowned Homecoming Queen 1962 by Dr. Farley. Homecoming princesses were Miss Jean Mattern an elementary education major, and Miss Elaine Kozemchak, an art education major. Gifts were presented to the Queen and the princesses by the Alumni Association, the Student Government, the Beacon, and by the Sophomore, Junior and Senior Classes.

At half-time a colored portrait of George Ralston, Dean of Men, was presented by the Lettermen's Club to the College. Ralston, who was unaware of plans for the presentation, was given a standing ovation by alumni and friends as he walked out to mid-field from the sidelines.

The Alexander Room at the Host Motel was the scene of the class reunion dinners on Saturday evening. Attorney John Doran, '57, presided as master of ceremonies. Guests of honor Dr. and Mrs. Farley were seated with the reunion committee members at the head table.

Alumni from classes of '37, '42, '47, '52 and '57 listened to Dr. Farley speak of the immediate and long-range goals of the College, and of the ever-important need of continued and growing alumni support.

Later in the evening hundreds of alumni gathered in the spacious Dorian Room for the Annual Homecoming Dance, the final social event of the weekend.

Election of officers took place during the Saturday festivities. Elected to guide the association for the following year were: Russell H. Williams, '50, Advertising Manager, Eberhard Faber, Inc., President; Leonard Mulcahy, Certified Public Accountant, Charles S. Rocky Company, Vice-President; Anita Janerich, Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare, Secretary; and Eugene Roth, Attorney, Treasurer.

Color movies of Homecoming activities were taken. It is the plan of your alumni association to show these movies and others at various chapter meetings throughout the year.

ATTORNEY HARRY R. HISCOX
Miners National Bank Building
Wilkes-Barre, Penna.

Dear Fellow Alumni:

As Chairman of the 1962 Annual Alumni Campaign and on behalf of Wilkes College, I would like to express my appreciation and sincere thanks to all Wilkes alumni who participated in the recent scholarship campaign.

Although our goal of $12,500 was not reached, the campaign surpassed last year's results with an alumni increase of 4.7% in participation and $2,595.04 in total amount pledged by alumni. This demonstration of increased support makes us confident that even more alumni of Wilkes will participate in next year's campaign.

The comparison chart shown below indicates the continued growing support of Wilkes College by her alumni.

Once again, on behalf of our College, I extend my heartfelt thanks.

Sincerely yours,

Harry Hiscox

BLIND WILKES GRADUATE SHOWING THE LIGHT TO ALCOHOLICS AT DANVILLE

Featherman Has Sympathy But No Pity For "Alkies"

"It is strange that men should see sublime inspiration in the ruins of an old church and see none in the ruins of a man!" This passage from one of G. K. Chesterton's writings looks up provocatively from the desk top of the assistant director of Social Service, assigned to the Alcoholic Unit of Danville State Hospital. He is Roland Featherman, a native of Shickshinny and a graduate of Wilkes College, Class of 1955 . . . he is sightless. This is his story. It is also the story of the only comprehensive program for the alcoholic, specifically geared to his illness and supported by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

There is no accurate count of those with an alcoholic problem. Accepted estimates, however, place the national figure at 5,500,000. In Pennsylvania, the count is in the neighborhood of 300,000 and in Luzerne County, between 11,000 and 12,000 men and women suffer from this illness which draws into its immediate circle of tragedy more than 50,000 people county-wise. On a national basis, this figure jumps to a startling, approximated 11 million.

It is quite apparent at this point that any nation with a health problem affecting directly and indirectly 11 million of its citizens eating its way into every facet of the structure of its society—economic, mental, spiritual and physical—has a job on its hands which demands immediate attention.

The understandably apathetic attitude on the part of the people and the government toward alcoholism delayed action until the 1930's; and it was not until 1953 that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania recognized the problem. It was in this year, under the gubernatorial leadership of John S. Fine and the dogged efforts of a member of Alcoholics Anonymous and newspaper publisher that the Legislature of the state enacted a law providing rehabilitation funds for alcoholics. Even then, Pennsylvania was 37 states behind the rest of the nation!

A few pilot alcoholic rehabilitation centers were established. One of them was within Clark's Summit State Hospital. In 1958, it seemed a practical move to locate this unit with Danville State Hospital where today it embraces two buildings—one for women patients, the other for men. And it was in 1958 that Roland Featherman joined the staff as a psychiatric social worker.

It is a well-known fact among those who work with problem drinkers that they are constantly running away from themselves. This characteristic Roland Featherman has in common with the alcoholic and his understanding of the "runner" has formed the basis for his outstanding success in being able to help them. For, Featherman too was a "runner," but for different reasons. He began running when he discovered at the age of four that he was going blind. Finally, when he was in eighth grade, he accepted blindness as part of his life.

"Before, it was one desperate search after another, from doctor to doctor, hospital to hospital, and all the same story—no hope. I think I know also how it feels when you stop running and accept things as they are, not what you would like them to be."

And he points to the prayer which every member of Alcoholics Anonymous knows: "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change; courage to change the things I can, and wisdom to know the difference."

After Roland Featherman stopped "running," he learned to read and write braille in six months, graduated from Shickshinny High School, earned a degree in sociology from Wilkes College in 1955 and a master's degree from Pittsburgh in 1957.

"The State Council for the Blind helped me to get through college and aided me in getting me a scholarship for graduate work. The Council also paid readers, generally fellow students, and I took class notes on a Braille puncher."

George Ralston, dean of men at Wilkes College, recalls Featherman. "We lived four years on the same floor in Butler Hall where I was proctor. Roland had a tremendous personality and warmth which endeared him to his fellow students. And his sense of humor was something to write home about—literally. He was like leaven in the dormitory; he made it rise. Life was better for his being there. He never lacked for dates—and with sighted girls. Men were closely attached to him; he was no handicap or drag. He carried his weight at all times. And he was an excellent student, placing on the Dean's List several times."

Michael Barone, guidance counsellor at Coughlin High School and at one time secretary to the late Judge Ap- onick, also remembers Featherman. His seat was next to his in several classes at Wilkes. And Barone verifies Dean Ralston's picture.

"Good study habits got me through school," the Wilkes graduate will tell you. "The same habits help me on the job. It's just a matter of one step at a time, setting a tentative goal, attaining it, and then striking out further. There's less chance of falling down along the way." Featherman sees the work of the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Unit to be of major importance.

"This is a pilot program which may lead to some fairly great things in the treatment of alcoholism. It will take time, of course, to learn whether we are on the right track. But of this much we are sure, the problem drinker is of serious concern to the community and to the nation. Past methods of handling the problem are inadequate. Jails do not help alcoholics. Neither do sober-up periods in hospital wards. There must be something else, and we hope this 'something' can be found here."

Featherman is convinced that somewhere, somehow a solution will be found to a condition which causes more broken homes, more crime, more juvenile delinquency than any other cause in America. Much of this conviction passes on to the alcoholic during those first interviews with this sightless man.

Alcoholics generally are loaded with self-pity, but they find no pity from Featherman. And it is not too long afterward that most of them with the help of people like Featherman, find none in themselves. Sympathy, yes; but not pity.

During the last four years, Danville State Hospital has tried to help more than 60 alcoholic patients. They live in two comfortable buildings; the women in the former nurses home which accommodates 15 patients. This Featherman reports, is never filled to capacity.

Men occupy a building with a capacity of 35 which is filled most of the time. About 25% of these come from Philadelphia.

Repeaters, says Featherman, are few. In 1961, there were 147 admissions 12 of whom were women; 135 were men. All women came to Danville voluntarily; 71 of the men were also voluntary patients. None of the women returned, although 13 men did. Qualifiedly, Featherman pointed out, some of these former patients may have been returned to other drying-out spots, but Danville has no such record, so it is assumed the report is correct.

Dr. Joseph Adlestein, former Danville State Hospital staff physician and chief of the Behavioral Problems Division of the State Department of Health for several years, believes in the need for such programs as the Alcoholic Unit, and more intensive investigation into the problem of alcoholic addiction. Dr. Adlestein, now director of the Bureau of Mental Health Services, Department of Welfare in discussing the alcoholic, says: "In the past, facilities for treating alcoholics have been greatly inadequate or even non-existent. Few attempts were even made to get to the core of the complex problem. "Now we're coming to realize that alcoholism itself constitutes a serious medical and public health problem. Hospitals are faced with the necessity not only to accept alcoholics on the same basis as other patients, but also to improve the quality of their methods and the scope of their services."

Roland Featherman's success at Danville State Hospital is due greatly to the interest he takes in his patients. Above, Featherman conducts a "jaw" session.

Roland Featherman's success at Danville State Hospital is due greatly to the interest he takes in his patients. Above, Featherman conducts a "jaw" session.

Featherman amplifies somewhat on this: When asked whether there was any Pennsylvania law prohibiting general hospitals from accepting alcoholics as patients, he replied in the negative. As to why they hedge on accepting those suffering from what the American Medical Association has accepted as a disease, he responded that this policy of rejection has been built up over the years.

Featherman also believes in community help in the form of councils or committees on alcoholism.

As to where the money might be found to help combat the problems of alcoholism, Dr. Adlestein says: "If we in Pennsylvania can spend annually over 287 million dollars at State Liquor Stores, and an undisclosed amount across our favorite bar, I'm sure there must be a little around somewhere to help fight a major personal and community calamity."

Roland Featherman also emphasizes the fellow of alcoholics in the treatment therapy of alcoholism. In his own words, AA is one of the finest and most successful organizations. "It really gives the alcoholic something to latch on to."

There is no cure for alcoholism. It can only be arrested. In the process, Roland Featherman, a sightless Wilkes College graduate and the Danville State Hospital are contributing their share.

After six months of rehabilitation, a patient leaves to put into practice What Featherman and his staff have taught him.

The 38,176 square feet added to Stark Hall will form an L, one section moving south to Chase Theater; the other moving west to Dennison Hall. The rear porch of the latter has been razed to allow the new Center to be erected flush with Dennison.

When completed, Stark Hall and the new center will represent a financial outlay of $2,140,000.

ALUMNUS is arranging its publishing schedule to give full coverage of the Center when it is completed. Publication date should be in the April, or certainly not later than the July deadline.

The photograph at right shows forms built to receive the concrete. Buildings in the rear of the photograph are properties fronting on South Franklin Street.
