WOW! celebrates its 50th episode

by CHRISTINE
WONDRICK

Beacon Staff Writer

Since 1993, Wilkes University and WBRE-TV 28 have been joining forces to write and produce WOW!, an educational television program for kids ages 6-14. The show, has reached a television plateau with the recent airing of its 50th episode.

The special episode was filmed at the Pennsylvania Academy of Dancing in Edwardsville and focuses on the accomplishments of the area's young and talented performers.

"WOW! is about what kids can do. What a better way to showcase than to do our 50th show on their accomplishments," said executive producer and writer, Dana Alexander Nolf.

Featured will be a six-year-old tap dancer, a ten-year-old singer and a fourteen-year-old ballerina, all of whom will demonstrate their talents for the camera as well as explain how they came to perform at an advanced and demanding level.

According to WOW! intern Carrie Bruno, this episode puts the spotlight back on a vital part of the show, the audience.

"The 50th episode will be special because it's not only for the kids, it's about the kids," said Bruno.

WOW!, the only locally produced educational television program for kids, is currently finishing up its fourth season

Kids from WOW! on an earlier adventure on the air. The show has covered a diverse range of topics this season including whitewater rafting down the Lehigh Valley River, and visits to the Wilkes-Barre post office and fire department, all of which were inspired by the show's goal which is to make learning fun for area children.

"WOW! is serving a vital purpose in Northeastern Pennsylvania. It not only broadens the knowledge base of children, but it is entertaining as well," said WOW! host and Associate Professor of Education, Dr. Diane Polachek.

The special 50th episode of WOW! is scheduled to air at the end of March.

Tuition decision finalized

by COLLEEN HERRON
Beacon News Editor

Wilkes University's Board of Trustees met Friday, February 28, to decide upon the tuition increase for the 1997-1998 academic year.

"We have had the lowest rate of increase over that period of any other college in Pennsylvania and are between $3,000 and $5,000 below most of our competitors in the Middle Atlantic Conference who don't offer the breadth and sophistication of our academic programs," said Wilkes University President Christopher N. Breiseth in a release sent to students and their families over spring break.

The agreed upon rate for the upcoming year is $14,474, fees of $617, and room and board charges of $6,564. The increase is up $1,327 from the 1996-1997 tuition rate. The Board of Trustees approved an increase in financial aid to more than $7.6 million in an overall budget of $37 million.

"Each student's precise financial requirements can only be determined after he or she files an updated FAF with the Financial Aid Office so that Rachael Lohman and her staff can make the official calculation," said Breiseth. "I urge students to carry through with this process as early as possible this spring."

Students interested in further talks on the issue are welcomed to attend the forum slated by President Breiseth and Student Government President Paula VanFossen for March 25th at 11 a.m. in SLC 101.

Concerned students are encouraged to contact Wilkes University's suggestion line, suggest@wilkes.edu.

Athletic survey focuses on gender-equity

WILKES-BARRE — Wilkes University athletic director Phil Wingert and associate athletic director Addy Malatesta have announced that the Wilkes athletic department will be conducting a survey of all undergraduate women who are registered full-time this semester.

The surveys will be mailed to students on March 17. Women who reside on campus should be sure to check their campus mailboxes, while off-campus students will have the survey sent to their local address.

The survey is being conducted to give the female students an opportunity to express their opinions on the policies and programs available to them in athletic activities and sports at the University. Some of the questions being asked about policies include:

- Are the needs and desires of female students being met?
- Are there programs or activities that should be added or dropped?
- Is too much or too little emphasis being placed on intercollegiate athletic programs?
- Are men and women being treated equally?
- What changes, if any, should be made?

So that the results will fully represent the thinking of the female students at Wilkes, it is important that the women complete and return the questionnaire. Completion of the questionnaire should take no more than 20 minutes, but it is crucial to the future development of the programs that will meet the needs of the female students at Wilkes.

"This gives the women on campus an opportunity to voice their opinion and to be pro-active on issues that pertain exclusively to them," said Wilkes athletic director Phil Wingert. "Our concern is to address gender-equity issues and to be certain that the athletic administrators continue to meet the interests and needs of female students. We hope that participation in this survey will give clear indication of where to begin to initiate significant improvements."

Students can be assured that the survey will be held in complete confidence since it is being conducted in conjunction with Scott Bodfish, the director of Institutional Research and Planning Support at Wilkes.

Wilkes to host women in history presentation

WILKES-BARRE — "A Look at Femininity in the 1930's and 1990's," will be the topic of a special presentation hosted by the Wilkes University Faculty Women's Caucus on Thursday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m. in room 214 of the Arnaud C. Marts Conference Center on South Franklin Street.

Dr. Madelyn Gutwirth, research associate at the Alice Paul Center for the Study of Women, University of Pennsylvania, will be the speaker. The presentation, which is co-sponsored by the Pennsylvania Humanities Council's Commonwealth Speakers program, is free and open to the public.

Dr. Gutwirth's lecture/slide presentation will deal with how social concepts of femininity have changed. She will examine the messages major popular works conveyed in the 1930's and 1990's about women in intimate life and the work world. The audience will be invited to review selections from movies and works of fiction and song lyrics will also be explored to determine how changes in portrayals of femininity have affected our generation of grandmothers, daughters and granddaughters.

The author of several books on women novelists and artists during the French Revolutionary period, Dr. Gutwirth was a professor of French and Women's Studies at West Chester University before accepting her current position with the Alice Paul Center.

She received her B.A. in French and English from Brooklyn College, and her M.A. and Ph.D from Bryn Mawr College in French Literature.

The Wilkes Faculty Women's Caucus will host a reception for Dr. Gutwirth following the presentation. For further information call the Wilkes Faculty Women's Caucus at 831-4565.

Lucas enlightens Wilkes audience

By GLEND A RACE and COLLEEN HERRON

Beacon Copy Editor and News Editor

Despite a fast approaching spring break, many students attended the February 27 presentation with James Lucas, celebrating black history month at Wilkes University's Dorothy Dickson Darte Center for the Performing Arts.

Sponsored by the Multicultural Coalition of Wilkes University, "Reflections: A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.," turned out to be a success.

Lucas captivated the audience with tales of his own life. He said that his father was a great inspiration in his life. He went on to tell that despite laws which forbid blacks to vote, his father with support from the family registered anyway.

Lucas stated that it was following the March on Washington in August 1983, during which a tape recording of King's voice was played that he got the idea to recreate the dramatic readings of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. He felt the recording was a real "let down."

Following the presentation there was a question/ answer period. Students posed questions ranging from what Dr. King would think if he met Malcolm X or Louis Farakhan as well as what Lucas thought King would think of society today.

Lucas travels nationwide reciting Dr. King's speeches to private businesses, professional organizations, churches, schools and universities. He was invited to deliver renditions of King's speeches at President Clinton's inauguration in 1992.

Wilkes University Multicultural Awareness Week will be held April 14-19. For more information contact Gina Morrison at ext. 4731.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the Editor guidelines:

Letters should include your name and phone number. They should be no longer than 250 words and must be signed in order to be printed. Letters will be printed in the order they are received and must be submitted by 4:30 p.m. on the Tuesday prior to publication.

To the Editor,

After reading the various news reports and comments in the February 27 issue of The Beacon, relative to the possible tuition hike here at Wilkes, I feel the urge to comment.

Dr. Breiseth commented that, "There was great sensitivity in the financial aid office" alluding to the possibility that financial aid packages may be enhanced.

Indeed, one financial aid source that has been here at Wilkes for 25 years, continues in the form of the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (AFROTC), Detachment 752 in Slocum Hall. While I cannot say that AFROTC is enhancing its financial resources in response to a possible tuition hike, we are a significant source of financial aid in the form of scholarships, incentives, and/or stipends for motivated students who desire to be active duty Air Force Officers.

A common misconception is that in order to participate in AFROTC, you must be a high school scholarship recipient. Actually, most of our cadets are not high school scholarship recipients, but are competing for, or recipients of, the college scholarship program. This includes undergraduate and graduate students in any major, although we are especially in need of technical and nursing majors. In fact, any student with at least two-years (one year in some cases) of undergraduate or graduate studies remaining is eligible for AFROTC. After a lull of a few years, we are also actively pursuing any academic major interested in flying as a pilot or navigator; and 20/20 vision is no longer a requirement!

Finally, 100% of all AFROTC graduates are offered full-time active duty commissions as Second Lieutenants with the United States Air Force.

The AFROTC department can be reached by telephone at 831-4860 or 831-4866, by stopping by our offices in Slocum Hall or by e-mail at det752@wilkes1.wilkes.edu.

Assistant Professor of Aerospace Studies

To the Editor,

On June 1, 1996, the Wilkes University Facilities Management Department officially took over as caretakers of the campus. Besides changes in management and personnel, the switch generated a significant change in departmental attitude—a determination not only to maintain, but to restore and rebuild.

More important to us than the real estate, however, are the occupants of these buildings, the students themselves. Because many of us in this Department are part-time students or have children who are studying at Wilkes, we can relate to the financial and scholastic pressures you are experiencing. Endeavoring to make you contented and satisfied with your investment is our primary concern.

But we can't fix what we don't know is broken! Too often repairs are not made simply because we were unaware of the problem. If there is a problem in your home and these dorms are your homes, please contact your Resident Assistant. If you don't receive a response from us within a reasonable amount of time, please call us directly at ext. 4995. The security officers in SLC, ext. 4999, can contact us at any hour if you need emergency assistance when this Department is closed.

Many improvements have already been made, and even more are on our agenda. I could elaborate further on our future plans, but Vince is calling for heavy dew tomorrow, and it's my turn to salt the steps at McClintock.

Cordially yours,
Jack Zikoski
Director, Facilities Management.

Have you ever wondered if the road you've chosen is the right one? Did you ever wake up in the morning and wonder what the hell am I doing with my life?" If I've counted correctly, in the past year alone, I've probably asked myself that same question at least 150 times.

There's nine weeks left until graduation. How many seniors have May 17 marked in big red letters on their calendars?

It's 65 days to be exact. I'm just a little anxious. Can you tell?

But that's besides the point. I'm now asking you, the Wilkes University student body — how are you preparing yourself for your future?

I remember being a little kid. Go figure, brain cells still exist. And I recall being asked on several occasions what I wanted to be when I grew up. At times, I'd say a teacher like my mom and dad. That dream faded quickly. For awhile I thought of law school, but it takes more than just a loud mouth to be a good lawyer. So here I am, all grown up, two months away from a Bachelor of Arts degree, and I have absolutely no idea which path I'm taking. At this point in my life, I've done so many things wrong, I don't know if I can do right... a little bit by Tracy Chapman.

So now I stand at the fork in the road, as I'm sure most of us do, and I can't for the life of me figure out which way I'm headed.

Notice, I am not blaming Wilkes University. Instead I point the finger at myself. Damn me for being so indecisive. But should've, could've and if's won't change a thing.

The best advice to myself and anyone else in this position is to put one foot in front and just keep walking. Don't question yesterday because the past can only haunt you. Don't look towards tomorrow because you'll only be wasting the precious time of today. Face each moment as it comes. By the time you get to the crossroads, you'll be wiser and more certain of the decisions that await you.

And while you're at it, smile. It takes more muscles to frown.

The Near Side

with Rick Tym

Hi everybody. Hope your spring break was good. As everybody can probably agree, no matter where you were, the break was relaxing, fun, but a bit too quick. I turned around and here it was Friday, the whole week gone. I'm sure it went faster for those of us that were somewhere warm.

Well, now we're back after a little break from the action. When I got back on Sunday, I parked in the usual place at my dorm (which is McClintock Hall, for those of you that don't know), in the driveway of the church next door. For those of you that aren't familiar with my neck of the woods, let me tell you something: for a bunch of God-fearing people, the administration of this church are pretty bitchy about the parking scene. It's a Sunday afternoon, there's not another car anywhere else on their property, I don't even think there's a priest around—and I still have to move my car within five minutes of parking there. If I don't, the alarms will be sounded and the dogs will be released. Now, I could understand this kind of mentality from a church if they held services there every day. But from what I've seen, the only services at which more than five people (and thus, more than one car) show up is during weddings or funerals.

As I was mulling over this little benefit of living on the edge of campus, I noticed something very interesting. During the break, facilities had been at work again, this time ripping up part of my backyard and installing their own little driveway. It's pretty nice, too — smooth gravel surface, nice wooden divider from the rest of the property. Too bad they put up a chain that says "Facilities Management Only" (or something like that). At least they won't park on my lawn anymore — or what lawn I have left after they got done with it (it was small to begin with).

Now, here's my beef: why couldn't they knock a little bit more of the backyard out and put in another parking space? It wouldn't have been that difficult. I'm sure the resident assistant of that dorm deserves his own parking spot (just like the resident assistant of Rifkin does, hint hint). You know, give him a key to the chain, put up a sign that says "Resident Assistant Parking Only." Or how about a personalized parking sign? You know, "Rick Tym's Parking Only?" I'll tell you this much: I'd pay for it.

Well, I guess that's enough sarcasm for this week. Remember, whoever it is that's either taking me seriously or making a complete fool of me, I'd like to hear from you. Send your letters to the editor. Don't be scared. What are ya, chicken? And if you are taking me seriously, get me that parking spot behind my dorm, will ya? They'll be an extra C-note in your check next week if you do.

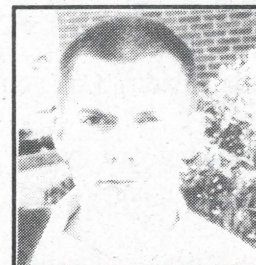

That's all for now, ladies and gents. Any questions, comments or complaints, direct them through a letter to the editor or contact me personally at my e-mail address. Have fun, let your body detoxicate for a week, and I'll talk to you again soon.

takes up 17 acres and weighs 46 tons. More than eight million people have visited the display nationwide.

A man by the name of Clive Jones wanted to find a way to express the loss that he and his friends experienced when over 1,000 people from San Francisco died from AIDS between 1980 and 1987.

Since the government would not help, Jones got together with a group of neighborhood residents and they came up with the Quilt idea.

The group stitched

2,100 panels were displayed.

Wilkes University, along with other community

Wilkes' three losses came from Alvernia College 6-2, Widener University 17-11 and Northwood College 17-8.

Banter in the Booth with Michael Noone

After a few weeks off for spring break, the banter makes its return just in time for the madness. The NCAA Men's Basketball Tournament is arguably the most exciting event in all of sports and one of the most analyzed.

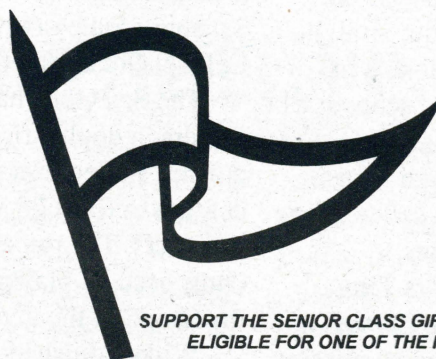

So without further ado, here's my in-no-way expert opinion. Hey, I was right about the Super Bowl.

The upset special of the first round is 14th seed Tennessee Chattanooga over third seed Georgia. Also in the Southeast region College of Charleston will extend the nation's longest winning streak by upsetting Maryland.

Overall, two number one seeds will advance to the final four while two number two seeds will make it to Indianapolis.

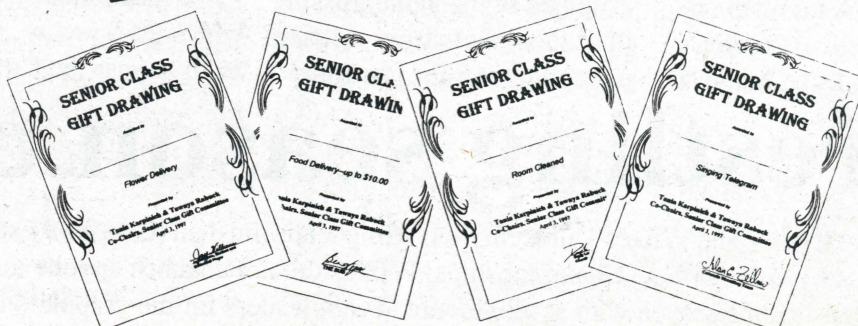

Out of the East region look for North Carolina to beat their neighbors to the south, South Carolina, to get to the Final Four. In the Southeast region Kansas will cruise by Duke to earn a spot in the Final Four. Out West, Utah will upset the defending national champion Kentucky Wildcats. In the Midwest, Minnesota will fall to Clemson in the Sweet 16 and UCLA will beat the Tigers to advance to the Final Four.

Kansas and Utah will face off for the title and the Jayhawks will give Roy Williams his first national championship.

Colonels bounced from playoffs by Salisbury State

By MICHAEL NOONE
Beacon Sports Editor

The Wilkes University Colonels basketball season ended with two consecutive playoff losses to Lebanon Valley and Salisbury State.

The Colonels dropped their last game at the Marts Center on Thursday, February 27, against Lebanon Valley in the Middle Atlantic Conference semifinals.

The 85-83 overtime loss ended the Colonels' quest to repeat as MAC champions. The Dutchmen's Andy Panko, the MAC Commonwealth League MVP, poured in 33 points including the one-handed game-winner, at the buzzer, falling away from 18-feet out.

Panko, a six-foot-eight sophomore, almost lost the ball out of bounds while being guarded by Wilkes' Mike Barrouk, but almost doesn't count. The desperation shot sent the Dutchmen into an ecstatic celebration and crushed the stunned Colonels' championship hopes.

The loss ended Wilkes' ten game playoff winning streak at the Marts Center. Lebanon Valley earned a spot in the MAC championship game with the win while the Colonels had to wait for an at-large bid to the NCAA Division III playoffs.

Lebanon Valley lost to Widener in the championship game but earned their way into the NCAA tournament with their impressive play.

Freshman Dave Jannuzzi

scored a career-high 34 points for the Colonels. Wilkes held a 72-66 lead with 4:07 remaining in regulation when Panko scored seven of Lebanon Valley's final eight points to tie the score at 74-74 and force the overtime.

The Colonels were held scoreless for the final 3:20 of regulation. Their last bucket points.

The loss dropped the Colonels to a fifth seed in the Middle Atlantic Region of the 64 team NCAA Division III national tournament.

Wilkes had to travel four and a half hours to take on the Salisbury State Sea Gulls in Maryland. This season marked the third consecutive year the Colonels appeared in the won twenty or more games.

Salisbury State improved to 23-5 with the win and earned a shot at Widener, the MAC Champions, in the second round. The Sea Gulls defeated Widener and will take part in the Sweet 16 round of the tournament this weekend.

The Colonels opened up an early 6-2 lead and held the 45-44. Dave Clancy scored to put Wilkes up three at 47-44, but Salisbury State's John DeRichie drilled a three-pointer to tie the score at 47-47.

The Sea Gulls' George Robinson followed with a basket that gave Salisbury State their first lead since the game's opening bucket, 49-47. After that the largest lead the Colonels could post was 58-53 with 14:13 remaining in the game.

After a Barrouk basket at the 13:45 mark that made the score 60-54, the Sea Gulls switched it into high gear.

Salisbury State went on a 16-4 run that moved them from a six point deficit to a six point lead with 10:19 remaining. The Sea Gulls never looked back from that point outscoring the Colonels 64-48 in the second half.

Salisbury State was led by Bill Lancaster with 23 points and Robinson with 22 while DeRichie added 16.

Barrouk led the Colonels with 22 points, four rebounds and four blocked shots. Jannuzzi added 17 points, a career-high ten assists and three rebounds. Williams added 16 points, grabbed five rebounds and dished out five assists. Gryboski scored 10 points and pulled down three boards.

Seth Meyers added nine points and two rebounds off the bench, while Scott Cleveland scored six and ripped down a team high seven rebounds. Seniors Tim Burlew and Dave Clancy each finished with four points. Clancy pulled down six rebounds and Burlew hit the glass for four.

Lebanon Valley went on a 7-3 run to open the overtime behind five of Panko's 11 points in the extra session. Barrouk scored four straight points for the Colonels in overtime to tie the score at 81-81 with 2:07 remaining. Panko and Jannuzzi then traded buckets to set the stage for Panko's heroics.

Wilkes' seniors Tim Burlew and Dave Clancy struggled in the game missing all of their shots from the field and combining for just four tournament but it was the first time they opened on the road.

Wilkes' streak of two consecutive years advancing to the Elite Eight round of the tournament ended when Salisbury State ran past the Colonels to a 101-90 victory.

The Sea Gulls had four players in double figures and utilized a relentless pressure defense to force 28 Wilkes turnovers. The run and gun Sea Gulls used 12 players to force the tempo of the game.

Wilkes finished its season with a 20-6 record, the fourth straight year the Colonels have lead for the remainder of the first half, up 42-37 at halftime.

Wilkes' largest lead of the first half was nine points with 6:03 remaining in the first. During the first half, the Colonels executed their game plan by holding the fastbreak Sea Gulls to just 37 first half points. Coming into the matchup, Salisbury State was 12-2 when they scored over 100 points in a game and averaged 94 points per game.

Early in the second half Salisbury State scored seven straight points to pull within
