Rules adopted for House use

by Joe Kultys

The Annette Evans Alumni and Faculty House is a beautiful facility available for Wilkes students and outside organizations. Keeping the House clean is everyone's responsibility. Guidelines and procedures have been adopted to ensure the further use of the Alumni House by everyone.

Anthony Shipula II, Director of Alumni Relations, is responsible for the usage of the Alumni House. Together with President Brimeth, he has developed a set of guidelines which has been adopted for using the House.

"The guidelines are more for control than anything else," said Shipula, "to make sure that the people who use the facility also clean it when their done."

The list of guidelines and procedures was just adopted on November 3, 1986. Organizations wishing to use the facility must make reservations and fill out a form. This form must be signed by a department chairman and a set of guidelines is attached to each form.

Some of the guidelines are as follows: reservations must be made in advance, catered events must not conflict with other events which may be held on the same day, the sponsoring group is responsible for cleanup after the event, and any perishable trash must be taken out to the trash receptacle in the back of the House.

Reservation forms may be obtained by calling the Office of Alumni Relations at ext. 325. "It's a nice facility," said Shipula, "and we want it to stay that way."

Shipula also stated that they are not limiting the usage of the House, but that student organizations are encouraged to use the Student Union Building.

The guidelines stress the importance of clean up after each event, which is the responsibility of the group sponsoring the event.

"The students are as important as the alumni," said Shipula, "but we don't want to encourage regular usage of the House." Shipula suggested that regular meetings of clubs and organizations be held in the Student Union Building, since that facility is for the students, and the Evan Alumni House is for the alumni and the faculty.

Numbers to appear on schedules

TBA' mystery explained

by Elizabeth Mazzullo

"TBA." If you hadn't noticed, this year's Master Schedule, printed in last week's Beacon, has these three letters written in where room numbers should

But there is a reason for this according to Dr. Robert Heaman, associate dean of Student Affairs.

Since class cards were difficult to know just how many students were on campus.

"It's not a question so much of getting the students to pay their money, but a question of getting an accurate count," Heaman explained.

The new system, Heaman said, will be the "equivalent" of picking up class cards.

This system was explained in a statement from Registrar Doris Barker.

The statement says the omission of room numbers was done "ostensibly" to cut down on confusion caused by room changes.

But it also says that "another good reason" for omitting the room numbers was "to insure that all students must 'check in' when they arrive on campus for Spring, 1987 courses."

At that time, students can pick up copies of their class schedules. These schedules will list the room numbers assigned for the classes.

According to Heaman, this will give the College "a better sense of who's here." Since schedules will be available for all students who registered, the number of schedules which are not picked up "gives an indication of how many no-shows there are," he said.

Resident students will pick up schedules from their Resident Assistants (RAs), according to the statement. RAs will then inform the Registrar's Office of students who have not returned.

Commuter students will pick up schedules in the lobby of Stark Learning Center.

Students with "holds" on their registrations must be processed through the Finance Office and Registrar's Office.

Class schedules with room numbers will be available to students from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 12, to Friday, Jan. 16.

students to pay their tuition bills. Only when a student runs out of his dollars does he get his room and board. The Beacon has pointed out, again correctly, that students will easily circumvent this scheme by merely taxing their ingenuity in the process.

Don't get me wrong. I have nothing against students paying their bills on time; they should. But why does the administration have to treat students as if they're simply commodities, simply things to pay money to keep the college running? That's exactly what this plan does: it treats students as if they're not giving students credit for any intelligence and students, consciously or unconsciously, will get the message. Perhaps this alienation, added to previous instances, will be enough to make students real aliens. They'll leave Wilkes. When I leave the administration and its empty coffers?

When will the current Wilkes administration realize the purpose of an educational institution--and of an educational institution--is not to educate people because of a fish standpoint, but to bring them together on the basis of integrity and truth? Soon, I pray.

its great function, is Wells, Democracy

(CPS)--American colleges have not yet suffered the long-expected Great Enrollment Drop of the Eighties mostly because they've learned how to sell themselves better, a new report released by the Educational Testing Service (ETS).

Some public colleges now spend an average $30 per student on recruiting. Private colleges may spend as much as $500 per student.

"An unprecedented marketing and recruiting effort by the nation's post-secondary institutions during the first half of the decade" has helped avoid the big enrollment drop--thought to be as much as 30 percent by some observers--expected during the eighties, says an ETS researcher.

Public four-year colleges have boosted their recruiting budgets by 63 percent or more since 1980, more than double the inflation rate.

Schools figure they have to recruit students aggressively if they want to survive.

"Everyone fights for (students)," says Leroy Twilley, Western Illinois University's admissions director. "In Illinois last year, we graduated some 138,331 high school students. Figure that about one-half of those go to college. Next year, we project about 138,900 students. Then the slide begins."

"In 1991, we'll be down to about 119,951 graduates. That's quite a drop," Twilley admits. "College enrollment is closely allied to high school graduates."

Adds Dr. Gerald Bowker, Twilley's counterpart at the University of Tennessee, "We are all competing for the top high school graduates."

Bowker figures the new emphasis on recruiting is here to stay. "Colleges really need to work on developing their image, regardless of whether we are in good times or bad times. It doesn't stop because last year was a good year."

WIU's Twilley came up with a "Western Advantage" ad campaign.

Twilley hosted a banquet for about 100 potential students, and is preparing a direct mail campaign.

"We are doing everything," he says, "from buying mailing lists from national testing companies, sending letters, inviting people to college activities, college tours, high school visitation, telemarketing, etc."

Such campaigns, regardless of ETS's findings, don't always work.

The University of the District of Columbia announced its enrollment this fall is down by 1,000 students, continuing a seven-year slide.

The slide has cost UDC about a quarter of its student body despite a hefty $257,000 marketing campaign designed to "stop the hemorrhaging of enrollment," says spokesman John Britton.

"I'm afraid we have a serious problem. Attracting students has become much too competitive for us not to maintain an aggressive position," says N. Joyce Payne, chairwoman of the UDC board of trustees.

The campaign, including radio, newspaper and bus ads, produced over 15,000 mail and telephone inquiries, but the number of applications fell.

Students visit Science Expo

Hundreds of area high school students attended the 1986 Wilkes College Science Expo, held recently on the Wilkes campus. The annual event is designed as an opportunity to introduce students from throughout the region to the scientific facilities, research projects, and programs currently in operation at the College.

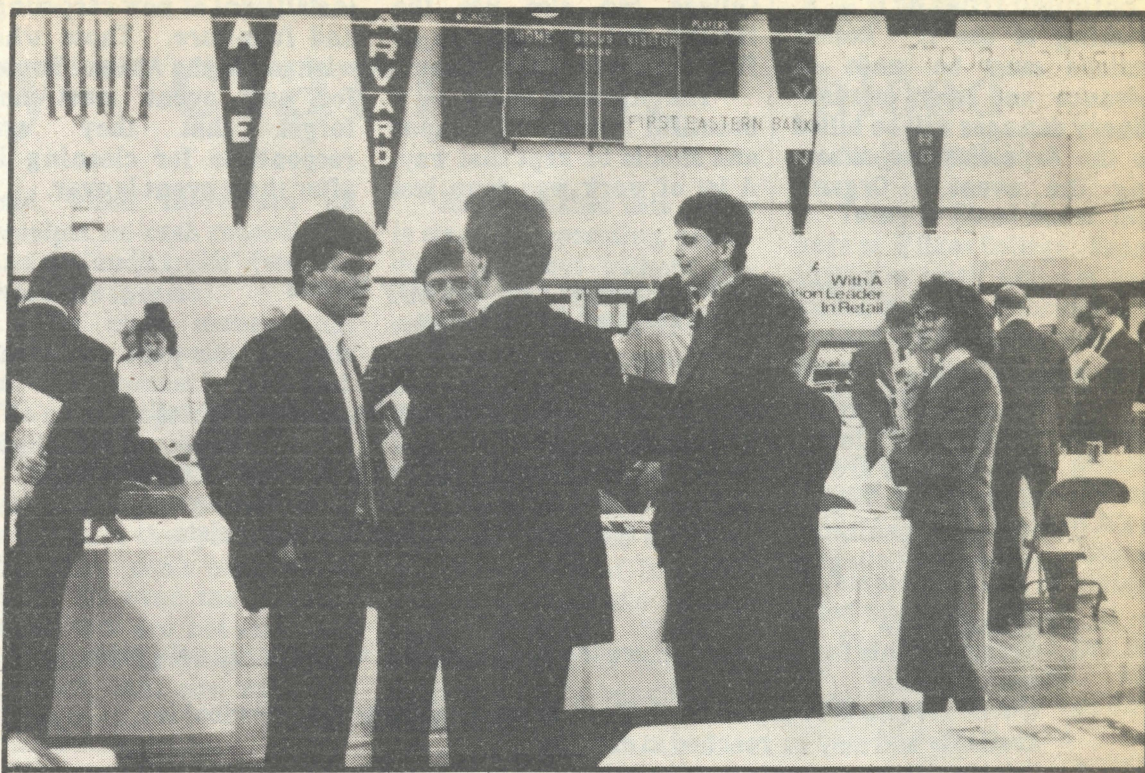

This year's Expo featured a welcome by President

Christopher N. Breiseth, and a presentation entitled "Can We Control Our Weather?" by Dr. Francis K. Davis, Dean of Sciences at Drexel University.

Following the morning program, student were led on guided tours of the Wilkes Departments of Mathematics, Aerospace Science, Biology, Chemistry, Computer Science, Earth and Environmental Sciences, Engineering, Health Sciences, Nursing, Physics, and Psychology.

Co-chairpersons of the Wilkes College "Science Expo 86" were Dr. Jerome Kucirka, of the Wilkes School of Engineering and Physical Sciences, and Assistant Professor, Marian Sherman of the Wilkes Nursing Department.

Who's Who applications due

by Jim Evelock

The Wilkes College Who's Who committee is currently accepting applications for Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. The final date to submit an application is Friday, November 7.

Who's Who has been honoring students with outstanding academic and extracurricular achievements for the past fifty-three years. The Who's Who honor is presented to students in more than one thousand schools across the nation.

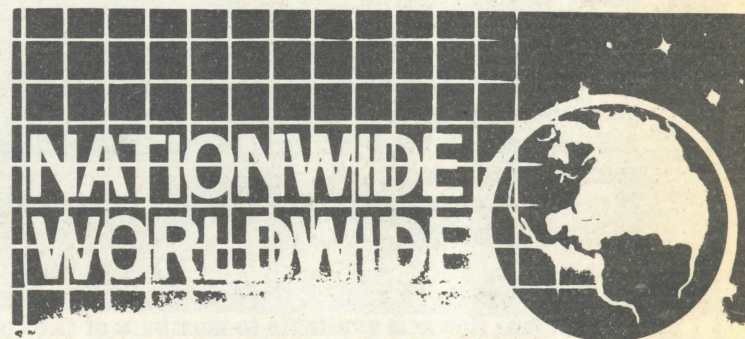

Students can be nominated for the award by themselves, by a friend, or by a faculty member. The nominations are then reviewed by the college's Who's Who committee and then the school's nominees are selected.

These selections are then sent to Who's Who and the students will be notified directly if they are chosen for the honor.

Paul Adams, Associate Dean of Student Affairs and a member of the committee, states that this is an honor not based as much on academic achievement, but on contribution to student life and activities.

Anyone interested in applying for Who's Who should see Dean Adams immediately.

Policies and Guidelines

I. Reservations

- Reservations are necessary; a reservation form may be obtained by calling the Office of Alumni Relations at ext. 325.
- Reservations are confirmed only upon return of the countersigned reservation form. (NOTE: Reservations are not required for use of the faculty lounge area.)
- Student organizations can make reservations through an appropriate authorized College official.

II. Food Services

- Arrangements for food service are the responsibility of the group using the Alumni House.
- If food service is required, M.W. Wood, Inc. (the College food service) is available and may be reached at ext. 336.
- Catering arrangements must be scheduled so that setup and cleanup will not interfere with other groups using the Alumni House.
- Caterers are to be notified by the sponsoring group that all perishable trash is to be removed from the Alumni House and disposed of in the trash receptacle located in back of the Alumni House.

III. Cleanup

- Cleanup is the responsibility of the group reserving the Alumni House.
- Furniture, if moved, is to be returned to its original setting. The dining room table is not to be moved under any circumstances.
- When a College event is scheduled, the responsible College staff member should be present during the meeting and supervise cleanup after the event is completed, including trash removal from the premises.
- A vacuum cleaner is in the coat closet if needed.
- Extraordinary cleanup and/or damage charges incurred will be billed to the appropriate department. The Director of Alumni Relations will determine the necessity of imposing extraordinary charges.

IV. Security

- The Alumni House is to be attended at all times.
- The responsible member of the College staff is responsible for ensuring that the building is secured at the end of the event.
- ABM will secure the building at the designated time as requested on the reservation form.
- If the event ends earlier than expected, please notify ABM by calling Globe Security at ext. 399.

V. Fees

- The Alumni House is available to members of the College community for College use at no charge. A department/organization account number and authorized signature are necessary in the event of extraordinary cleanup charges and/or damage costs.
- There is a $50.00 fee for College Family members and alumni who use this facility for personal activities.
- There is a $50.00 charge for outside groups using this facility.

Last week a memo concerning "recording of income cash receipts" was sent to all College personnel by President Christopher Breiseth.

The memo states that "all income (regardless of source) will be recorded in general College revenue accounts." It also provides that if "additional resources above budgeted amounts are required, requests will be submitted through normal organizational channels for approval."

What does this mean for organizations, clubs and departments at Wilkes?

Comptroller Joseph Chisarick explained that this memo was simply a "restatement of existing policy in written form."

Chisarick added that this policy does not cover student accounts but concerns the operating accounts of the College; it is meant to cover the College budget.

Under this policy, an organization has a budget allotment under the general College revenue account, and if it needs funds over its budget allotment, it must get the request approved first.

Income generated by these organizations will go into the general account as well.

This will not affect anyone "who has an approved budget and cash receipting process," O'Hop said.

Chisarick added that the policy will not affect anyone who has a "traditional" source of income. If a department has a history of being able to generate revenue, then nothing will change, he added.

Chisarick explained one reason for the policy. "No one should have the right on their own determination to receive income and lay claim to it without prior approval," he said.

Paul O'Hop, vice-president for Business Affairs and Auxiliary Enterprises, explained that if a transaction has been approved, there are "no difficulties."

Problems arise, O'Hop

said, when there are no receipts, no cash recordings, and no "audit trails" (ways to track the income).

"We must incur that there are adequate controls in the system," he said. "We're attempting to set up legitimate processes."

O'Hop explained, "What we're trying to effectively do is to insure that people know that they don't have slush funds all over the organization that are not auditable and that are perhaps subject to theft, that are basically uncontrolled."

He added that this policy is standard operating procedure now, but without enforcement. "Basically," he said, "what we're attempting to do is to be consistent in our enforcement."

O'Hop added that the College is "not drastically changing anything."

President Christopher Breiseth explained that this policy is a way of "tightening up to make the College more efficient." What is needed, he said, is "one uniform system for handling all money."

by Wendy Holden

Today is Blood Donor Day here at Wilkes College. From 10:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. the students and the faculty are invited and encouraged to donate blood in the gymnasium.

Dean Arthur Hoover commented on the event. "People have a responsibility to their fellow man and it's a good idea to begin developing a habit of giving blood while in college."

The goal for the day is 240 units of blood. All students and faculty are encouraged to participate.

Macophobia claims its first victim

by Lorri Steinbacher

I hate computers. I know that in this day and age such a statement may seem a little strange, even backwards. It's okay, though, because computers and I have a mutual understanding. They hate me almost as much as I hate them, if not more.

There is no doubt in my mind that computers were put on this Earth for some divine purpose and I'm sure that for most people they are the next best things since the invention of the wheel. But for all the aggravation that these little machines give me I would rather carve out my term paper with a chisel and a stone tablet than sit down in front of a Mac for two or three hours.

You might have noticed that I talk about these machines as if they were human. Well, I have some shocking news for you. Contrary to popular belief, computers are alive and they do have minds and wills of their own. Nothing makes a computer happier than socking it to a poor computer illiterate like myself.

If you know anything about them, computers treat you as an equal. They do have some respect for you. They know that you are knowledgeable and make no attempts to make your work any harder than it has to be. If, however, you approach a Mac with anything less than total confidence, the machine's sensors begin to roll. They KNOW that you don't know what you're doing and they plan to take full advantage of your ignorance.

I admit that the first time I sat in front of a Mac I was excited. After all, this was a computer--a miracle of modern engineering and science. I was impressed. Computers like you to be impressed with them, it feeds their formidable egos. Gradually, though, this euphoric infatuation with computers came to an abrupt end. I had contracted Macophobia.

Macophobia manifests itself in different ways, depending on the afflicted individual. My personal symptoms could best be described as scary. If I came within two feet of a Mac I began to get hives. Just thinking about a computer could start me itching. I had nightmares about Macs chasing me down dark alleys, their "mice" poised and ready to beat me senseless while their screens flashed, "This document cannot be opened, this document cannot be opened," over and over again.

I dreaded the times every week when I had to sit down at the Mac and type my articles. I knew that Mac was there, waiting for me with his sinister grin when I popped in my disk.

And it never failed either. No matter how hard I tried to be nonchalant, no matter how confidently I pounded those keys, that Mac always knew how to get to me. I honestly believe that someone starved the Mac before I sat down to type a paper because, regardless of how gentle and careful I was, the stupid thing would always eat my creation. Now, I wouldn't begrudge a meal to a hungry Mac but the little thing was always hungriest when I was composing a ten page thesis paper, forgetting to "save" after each paragraph.

Physical abuse of a computer doesn't help either. Many times in a fit of anger and frustration I have raised my hand to a Macintosh. In rare moments I have bashed, struck, and even kicked my terminal, swearing the entire time. This only amuses the computer all the more. Profanity and violence are actually the ultimate goal of a Mac. The angrier they can get you, the happier they are.

Nothing is more frustrating, however, than nearing the end of a term paper and then accidentally hitting the plug with your foot and totally obliterating the entire document. I don't care what anyone says, if computers are so wonderful why can't they save material after you remove their power source? No, scratch that. They can save things. We just haven't discovered this ability yet. They have all of my lost articles and papers in a file marked SUCKER and once a month the computers get together, have a couple of beers, and laugh about the little people they make to each week. I'm sure I have had more than my fair share of laughs over

I am confident, however, that my Macophobia can be controlled. After all, this icle is coming to you now from The Beast, my very own Mac. The road to full recovery is a long one, though, and I doubt I will ever be entirely comfortable with a computer. Until then, I will swallow my pride, grab my hard hat, and forge ahead, using that important technique for computer illiterate each of us: he or she turns on the Mac--keeping my fingers crossed.

It's time to grow up

by Amy Hancock

If the majority of American college students are anything like the majority of students at Wilkes College, our great nation is in deep trouble. If today's students are supposed to be tomorrow's leaders, wonder if there will be a future at all.

Looking around our campus, the aftermath of the raucous partying of the inconsiderate slob students here is plain to see. Small bottles all over the sidewalk, beer cans where bushes are growing, and peddled from windows above, the stench of butts burying the grass, smell multiply by themselves. Beer cans where bushes are growing, and peddled from windows above, the stench of butts burying the grass, smell multiply by themselves. Beer cans where bushes are growing, and peddled from windows above, the stench of butts burying the grass, smell multiply by themselves.

I didn't want to bring this up because I know everyone is tired of it. But this sloppy negligence is undoubtedly another form of the terrible disease called apathy. Kiddies there is more than enough to be apathetic. Not brushing teeth in the morning is apathy. Everybody you talk to as a freshman (your teeth!) We all must understand that keeping our environment clean indoors and outdoors, clean and habitable is just as important as good personal hygiene.

Why are so many students unable to pick up after themselves? Was it their parents' fault? Let their children run wild and have havoc wherever they went? It is because their parents are too round to guard over them and used to something worse.

Wilkes orators take the cake

The members of the Wilkes College Speech/Debate Union brought double honors home to the College last week. For the first time in recent memory, Wilkes' forensic coach and director, Dr. Bradford Kinney, sent his public speaking squads to two different intercollegiate tournaments.

The first squad traveled to the Great Eastern Tournament, sponsored by Southern Connecticut College and hosted by Luzerne County Community College. The second squad traveled to the Collegiate Forensic Association's (CFA) fall tourney hosted by Shepherd College in Shepherdstown, West Virginia. Between the two groups, nine major trophies and awards were brought back to campus.

In the Great Eastern Tournament a newcomer to the Wilkes squad, Christine Kiesinger, made a very impressive showing by winning first place in the Prose Interpretation of Literature Competition. She also took a third place award in Poetry Interpretation. She and her partner, Diana Petrini, came in sixth overall--out of the fifteen schools in the competition.

In the CFA Fall Tourney, hosted by Shepherd College, the Wilkes unit won seven trophies and awards in the two day competition. The outstanding speaker for Wilkes was Jeff Eline. He won an award in every event that he entered. He won a Certificate of Superior Speaking in Informative Speaking, third place overall in Improvised Competition, and third place in Prose Interpretation of Literature.

With his partner Polly Kunkle, Eline won second place in the Duo Dramatic Interpretation of Literature. This marked the second consecutive tournament in which Eline has been so successful. Polly Kunkle, besides winning the second place award for Duo, was honored with a Certificate of Superior Speaking in Prose Interpretation of Literature.

Jennifer Douglas entered and won a fifth place trophy in the very difficult area of Original Oratory, or Persuasive Speaking, as it is commonly called.

Andrea Kocerha and Brian Dorsey combined with the other members of the squad to raise Wilkes College to fifth place overall team award. There were fifteen senior colleges and universities in the competition.

In the last three weeks the public speaking team, advised by Professor Kinney, have won thirteen trophies and honors while representing Wilkes College. Based on the past weekend's victories, Wilkes now qualifies to participate in the CFA's International Tournament to be held in Montreal, Quebec, in January. The Wilkes team will try to continue its winning streak with competition at Shippensburg University next week.

Looking around our campus, the aftermath of the raucous activities of the inconsiderate slob who lives here is plain to see. Smashed beer bottles all over the sidewalk dropped from windows above. I didn't want to bring it up because I know everyone is sick of it. But this sloppy negligence is undoubtedly another form of that terrible disease called apathy. Yes, kiddies there is more than one way to be apathetic. Not brushing your teeth in the morning is apathetic (to everybody you talk to as well as to your teeth). We all must understand that keeping our environment both indoors and outdoors clean and inhabitable is just as important as good personal hygiene.

Why are so many students unable to pick up after themselves? Was it their parents' fault? Did they let their children run wild, to wreak havoc wherever they went? Maybe it is because their parents aren't around to guard over them like they used to. Something went wrong somewhere along the way.

Then again, the indifference displayed by Wilkes students in and around campus buildings is mirrored by many members of the rest of society. Go off campus and you will still see piles of trash, newspapers flying in the wind, and rusty cans on the side of the road. It only shows how self-centered and indulgent people are.

I'm not saying we should all turn around and become straight-laced and boring just for the sake of keeping our world clean. A happy medium must exist. When you go out you can have just as much fun bringing the empty bottles home with you as you did taking them out.

Bushes and the little patch of grass between the road and the sidewalk were meant to be bushes and a little patch of grass between the road and the sidewalk, not the town dump. Next time you have a little celebration in your home or room, keep the bottles on the inside windowsill. Wait until trash collection day rolls around to pile the aftermath of your get together outside your door. It may get it out of sight but it certainly doesn't make life pleasant for those who happen to walk by.

If more people would show respect for nature and each other we would see an incredible difference in the world. So many of the unpleasant things which surround us would disappear. Attitudes would change because the world would not only look better, but it would be better. Maybe then, when life seems worth living, apathy would disappear along with all the other garbage.

Gemini--Don't pick fights

Aries—A friend may seek your advice sometime this weekend. Be as helpful as you can because you might someday need help from this person. On Saturday, beware of any Leo friends.

Taurus—Cheer up and don't let your shyness get the best of you this weekend. If you hesitate in saying or doing something because you feel insecure, you'll make a big mistake.

Gemini—You'll be tempted to pick a fight with a friend. Save your defenses for when a certain Aries seeks revenge on you. When you least expect it, he'll attack!

Cancer—Little by little, all your work is finally getting done. It's definitely time for a wild and crazy night out on the town. However, be selective of the people with whom you socialize.

Leo—You're finally going to pay for your egotistical attitude this weekend. The people who know the real you will demand an end to your ridiculous behavior.

Virgo—Although it will be a long time before you have as much fun as you did last weekend, you'll find good times wherever you go this weekend, too. A Sagittarius will make good company.

Libra—Your pent-up feelings of anxiety will have to be voiced sometime soon, so go ahead and say what's on your mind. Everybody involved (especially you) will feel much better. Lighten up!

Scorpio—Relax! If you would take life one day at a time, all of the things you worry about would just take care of themselves. You have a lot more going for you than you think.

Sagittarius—You may begin to see a casual acquaintance more as a close friend. It's about time you enlarged your miniscule circle of friends anyway. Get some rest (real sleep) this weekend.

Capricorn—If you're making a drastic change in your plans for next semester, wait a little longer before making it final. Listen to what your friends think. Their objective outlooks will make you see it differently.

Aquarius—Let your inhibitions run wild for a couple days. You've been wasting too much time worrying lately. For just a little while, give yourself a break from all the tension and pressure in your life.

Pisces—A memorable weekend is in store for you, Pisces. You'll be full of energy and enthusiasm. Clear up any misunderstandings you may have had with friends in the past few days.

More macaroni, less glue

Campus eateries need facelifts

by Bill Barber

"Well, everything's deteriorating," my friend suggested. "You really shouldn't expect so much." We had just come through the SUB lunch line where the bill of fare was a glue-like substance with macaroni ends sticking out of it. I handed it back as I exchanged evil eyes with a work-study co-ed. Sitting with my friend at the front window, I took a sip of my weak coffee and disagreed.

"Did you see the macaroni and cheese?" I demanded. "I had to hand it back with a 'thanks, but no thanks.'"

"You mean that that glop on a cheap paper plate was macaroni and cheese?" my friend asked.

"Precisely!" I enthused. "How is anyone going to meet his daily nutritional requirements with that stuff?" I asked him.

"You could have gotten a BLT on rye for a buck twenty-five," he said sarcastically. Having spent all day schlepping a backpack full of books from the CPA to the YMCA and back, I needed something slightly more substantial.

"We don't have any choices here and the help seems to revel in that," I grumbled. "Did you see the look on that woman's face when I handed the macaroni back to her?"

"Maybe it was the way you said, 'Would you eat this?'" that upset her," he suggested. We both chuckled about that for a second, but I was undaunted. "It's a damn monopoly," I blurted as my friend took his last swallow of a dry tuna hoagie. "It's gastronomical despotism!" I said flatly.

"Umm," my friend allowed. "Sort of like 'Let them eat Tastykake?'"

"Exactly!" I stated. I wanted food. I wanted fairness. I wanted Sidney's 'Golden World,' piping hot and delivered to my table by smiling waitresses. And I wanted to pay no more than $1.60.

"Maybe you should open your own restaurant on campus," my friend suggested. "Call it 'The Utopian Grill!'" I could see I was getting no sympathy at all--weak coffee and no sympathy. I watched a long line slowly forming at the cash register and could see the little limp piles of macaroni on thin paper plates, definitely not steaming, waiting to be paid for by students who deserve more sustenance than that. Nutrition, after all, is a part of education.

"Maybe we could open our own collective restaurant," I wondered out loud.

"Shall I start forming an ad hoc committee, sir?" my friend asked.

I ended up reluctantly back in line, ordering a BLT on rye.

Ellen's Column

A different perspective

Step into the space age

by Ellen Campbell

Some of us "old timers" die hard. This fall I stepped into the age of technology--I cooked my first meal in a microwave oven and word processed my first paper on the Mac.

For years I refused to wish for a microwave oven. I saw little use for the gadget other than an expensive coffee maker or a quick warmer for leftovers. I paid no attention to microwave zealots and I never read recipes suggested for this alternate cooking method. I felt comfortable with my trusty electric oven and rangetop. After fourteen years of cooking for a family, I was not interested in exploring another way of cooking.

Fortunately, my family is much more adventurous than I. They decided that since my crazy class schedule and the family dinner hour were at odds, a microwave oven might expedite matters. Luckily, my birthday coincided with a microwave oven sale and so the very day I turned thirty-four I walked into my kitchen to find a new way cooking sitting on a counter.

It took me twenty minutes to learn how to boil water for my tea and about a half hour to figure out how to cook a hot dog. But by the end of the first week I was totally sold on microwave cooking that I could go door to door selling them.

My friendship with the Mac followed a similar course. All last year I marvelled at the neat papers my Mac-expert classmates produced while I still struggled with my twenty-year-old Smith Corona and a bottle of white out. I persisted in pounding away at the typewriter even though it resulted in a letter from my children about the impropriety of sweating. Finally, after a computer crack friend presented me with my very own disk, I decided it was time to slay this dragon and conquer the mouse. Needless to say, I could also work for Apple hawkling Macs.

It just goes to show that sometimes the old, tried and true methods are always the best ones.

Barry Drake a hit on parent's day

Last Saturday, Wilkes students and visiting parents were treated to a very special evening with Coffeehouse performer Barry Drake. Characterized by a relaxed and personal atmosphere, this coffeehouse proved to be a phenomenal success. There was a beautiful give-and-take between Drake and the crowd. Holding the audience with his mastery of storytelling, smooth voice, and guitar playing, Drake proved to the Wilkes community that coffeehouses can be truly enjoyable experiences.

Wilkes College: Never-never land?

by Lorri Steinbacher and Bubbles LaRue

What is better than a Big Mac, a hot fudge sundae, and an Abe's hotdog all rolled into one? Now, now, get your mind out of the gutter, it's not what you're thinking. It's not even close to what you're thinking.

What could be better than being five years old forever? That's the ticket, folks. No decisions, no tests, no relationship problems, only the sweet embrace of Mom's ever loving arms and the sweet taste of her chocolate chip cookies lingering in your contented mouth.

Let's face it, gang, life in the older, college age group is no party. Sure, it's an occasional good time, but all in all it seems a lot more like the tenth circle of Hell in Dante's Inferno than a scene from Mister Roger's Neighborhood.

Never shall a student be allowed to spend even one week without the ever-present cloud of an upcoming test or a long overdue paper. What about a date for Saturday night? Or worrying about what you did on your date last Saturday night? Or all those mind games people like to play on you? There are too many problems associated with college life even to begin to count.

Do five-year-olds have the above problems? Of course not! Life for a five-year-old is filled with cute birthday parties, Barbie dolls, a box of sixty-four Crayolas with the built-in sharpener, Pez candy dispensers, and the fussing of aunts and uncles. Not only do these little angels have the world in their hands but they don't even pretend they give a damn.

If, by chance, the great gods in the sky bestow some luck upon you, the college student, you must jump for joy as if this is the greatest part of God's creation. Do you remember that five dollar check Aunt Matilda sent you for Halloween? Well I bet she already called you "just to see if you got it. You know these things s/ways get lost in the mail." You know as well as I do she only wants to make you feel guilty that you didn't call and thank her. No one expects a five-year-old to do anything but rip the card open, throw it down, take out the money, and eat it.

Not only that, when you are five years old you are hardly burdened with searching for the right mate. Chances are, if you're the average five-year-old, members of the opposite sex are not only distasteful to you, they are downright repugnant. Of course, that will alleviate the pressure of what to say to the cute little boy that sits across from you in Fingerpainting 101. Hurling a huge lump of Play-doh at him will usually express your feelings to the letter.

On the other hand, the gorgeous guy or gal that sits across the aisle from you in English 101 whom you're trying to impress barely recognizes your existence. And when he or she finally does, the idyllic, romantic encounter you've envisioned turns out only to be a mere lunch in the SUB. I don't know about you, but I'd rather have Play-doh hurled at me.

No commitments, no tests, no papers, no hangovers--doesn't that sound like heaven? If we can't physically be five we can at least strive to act that way mentally. So come on, folks, let's show ourselves for what we really are--the Wilkes College preschoolers!

Attention Seniors!

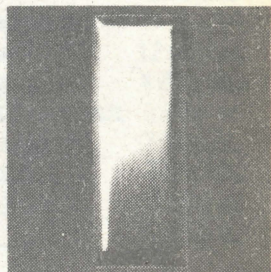

Anyone who wants a resitting for his or her senior picture may sign up on the schedule outside the Amnicola office on the third floor of the Student Center.

Photos will be taken November 12, 13, and 14.

Witczak paces bowlers

Len Witczak of the Grim Reapers has been in a groove the last three weeks. He has bowled eight games in a row over 200. This has resulted in three 600 series averages.

This performance has helped his team to a 21-7 record over the last four weeks with the seven losses coming against the Dego's this past week.

Mike Passetti and Ken Mazza of the Dego's had outstanding series. They bowled 33 and 20 pins respectively over their averages.

The only other team in Division A to win over 20 games the last four weeks is the Underdogs with a 22-6 record. This is due to the consistent bowling of Rick Santasania and Karen Beresky. The team has moved from 8th to 5th place in those four weeks.

The team with the best record the past four weeks, with a 26-2 mark, also sports the league's best record of 43-6. The O.M. Tall Boys have had consistent bowling from all team members to help maintain their number one ranking in Division B over the past five weeks.

The second place team, the G-Spots, gave the tall boys those two losses. The G-Spots sport a 21-7 record over the last four weeks with five of their losses coming at the hands of the Tall Boys.

The only other team in Division B to have over 20 wins in the last four weeks is The Four Horsemen with a 23-5 record. This places them second to the Tall Boys over the last four weeks.

The Four Horsemen have moved from 6th to 4th place in Division B. The Horsemen have been led by John Serafin, who has increased his average nine pins in those four weeks.

Colonels down Juniata

by Jim Pyrah

Last Saturday was a day to remember in Wilkes College football history. It was a day of records being broken and of ghosts being cleaned out of the proverbial closet. It was a day for pride. Wilkes pride.

It was also parents day and a large crowd was on hand at Ralston Field to watch the Colonels soundly defeat perennial power, Widener, 24-15.

This was the first victory the Colonels have posted over Widener since 1969. More than that, though, the victory assures Wilkes of its first 300 or better season in seven years.

Brad Scarborough continued his assault on the record books. He threw three touchdown passes Saturday to give him a new record of 10 for the season.

Anthony DiGrazia hauled in eight passes Saturday to break the single season reception mark. He now has 36 grabs on the year.

Despite these outstanding offensive performances, it was the defense which, once again ruled the day.

The Colonels held the Pioneers, who were ranked nationally in the preseason, to an incredible 11 total yards and no first downs. The defense sacked the Widener QB an eye-popping eight times and picked off three passes. Wilkes also recovered five fumbles to add to the misfortunes of Widener.

The first scoring strike of the day was a 32 yard Scarborough to DiGrazia TD pass with 8:39 left in the first quarter. Sean Meagley hit the extra point to make the score 7-0.

Meagley accounted for the next three points as he hit a 31-yard field goal. The score followed a Widener fumble.

The Colonels struck again before the half when Scarborough found Mike Harrison from three yards out for a score. This gave Wilkes a 17-0 halftime lead.

Widener regrouped and came out ready to play in the second half. After recovering a Colonel fumble, the pioneers scored on a 10 yard run by Kim Harris. This put the score at 17-7.

The Pioneers added a little drama to the afternoon as they closed the gap to 17-15 on a one yard plunge and a successful two point conversion.

That was all she wrote, though, for Widener. Dave Roebuck played the role of spoiler again this week when he picked off a Widener aerial and brought it back to the pioneer 17. From here Brad Scarborough found DiGrazia in the endzone for the final score of the afternoon. Meagley's extra point was good and the Colonels won 24-15.

Defensive end Joe Daches was named the MAC defensive player of the week for his powerful performance. Daches racked up four QB sacks in the contest. In addition, he forced a fumble and recovered another.

The Colonels now stand at 5-3 with only two games remaining. Wilkes will host FDU this Saturday before travelling to Delaware Valley to close out their season on Nov. 15.

Trivia time

Many thanks this week to Peter Huber. Pete correctly answered both of our Trivia Time questions and ended a one week slump we had in our contest.

We have, so far, been unable to contact Pete and so, his $5.00 prize sits waiting for him. Come on up to The Beacon office suite on the third floor of the S.U.B. to claim your prize.

If you want to know the answers to last week's questions you can ask Pete Huber or you can keep reading.

The answer to question number one was the man whose fame in soccer is only surpassed by the star status of his American Express commercials. Yes, it's true, Edson Arantes do Nascimento is Pele.

Question number two brought a variety of answers but you were only correct if you answered - The Chicago Bears. The Bears won 18 games in a row not once but twice. They did first between the 1933 and 1934 seasons.

The second time they accomplished this feat was between the 1941 and 1942 seasons. Now on to this week's questions:

QUESTION #1

From 1928 to 1971, which school dominated the Wrestling Championships winning the title thirty times. What is the name of the school?

QUESTION #2

When Leon Spivey became the heavyweight boxing champion of the world in 1978, how many professional fights did he have prior to the title bout?

If you think you can answer both of our Trivia Time questions let us know at The Beacon on the third floor of the S.U.B. The person to correctly answer both questions will receive a $5.00 prize.

Be there!

Intramural make-ups

The intramural flag football games were cancelled once again this past week due to the weather. This is now two weeks in a row that the games were cancelled.

BE SURE TO COME THIS SUNDAY, RAIN OR SHINE, AND TAKE IN THE ACTION!!!

Harassment

by Janine Bolinski

The Ad-Hoc Committee for the Development of Sexual Harassment Policy has released its proposal after a year of work.

In November of 1985, the Ad-Hoc Committee was formed and President Christopher N. Breiseth presented its mission. Its mission was to develop a fair and effective policy to deal with the problem of sexual harassment.

Wilkes College has been without a sexual harassment policy until now. According to Dr. Susan Behuniak-L... Assistant Professor of Psychology and Political Science, "Wilkes has had no policy for implementing the committee has taken a year's worth of research and has composed a thirty-two-page detailed proposal. The eight member committee worked throughout the school year and summer to create the

by Michelle Munday

Recently, three members of the Wilkes College community representing the Programming Board attended a convention to learn new ways of "livening" up college entertainment.

Amy Wiedemer, Director of Student Activities; Ann Morrell, Chairman of the Coffeehouse Committee; and Ron Zelek, Chairperson of the Novelty Committee, attended the National Association of Campus Activities (NACA) East Coast Region Conference at the Americana Hotel in Lancaster, Pennsylvania from November 2 to November 5.

The three main components of the conference were the educational sessions, the showcase performances, and
