Drafts Are Not A Joy Forever

Because of the recent military build-up of United States forces in Vietnam, selective service officials have become quite demanding in their search for qualified candidates. Last week the Beacon conducted a survey among students and faculty members. When asked: "Do you feel that the draft is necessary?", some onlookers evaded the issue. Those concerned about the issue replied:

Dr. Thomas Mizianty — Ideally, in a democracy, military service should be completely voluntary, but practically, it doesn't work, so we have to resort to selective service. Although many say that selective service is unfair, it is actually fairer than picking names of candidates at random with no regard to their value to the nation.

I believe that college students who are serious in their studies are of great value to their country and should be deferred and given the right to express their own views on Vietnam without having to worry whether their classification of 2S will be changed to 1A.

Mr. Murray Force — The draft has justified its existence in two world wars. With the modern rearrangement of military forces in peace time, it may be that the draft would be necessary. The standing organization of military services could meet their own manpower needs within their own organizations. In times of national emergency, since the draft has proven itself effective, I would favor it, if necessary — but only in an emergency.

Steve Kish — I for one am against the draft on principle. I believe that a person who in all sincerity thinks killing another man is wrong should not be forced to fight. This is a direct assault on the free will and free thought of the individual. A country which does not give the individual a choice between killing or not killing should not be considered a democracy, the form of government which he is supposedly fighting for.

Bill Webb — Since people will not volunteer to get themselves killed, I would say that the draft is necessary. Also, unless you can protect what you have, people sooner or later will try to take it from you. Eventually, most men would have to fight anyway. The draft hastens the inevitable personal conflict.

Eric Fredd — Yes. The degree to which military conscription sustains itself will always be proportioned to the personal "agreeableness" of the duties and actions involved. To this point in history such duties and actions have rarely been in accord with most men.

Simon Russin — During a state of war, the draft is necessary. More men are needed to perform all sorts of tasks not required under peaceful conditions and not likely to be undertaken voluntarily by men. However, during peacetime the draft could be eliminated. The armed services are becoming highly specialized, requiring the work of experts. The manpower needed during wartime is not needed under peaceful conditions. The needed quantity of men of quality would enter voluntarily.

Gene Santarelli — Of course the draft is necessary, because if it didn't exist, many of the men in the service wouldn't be there if the choice were theirs. Aggression and war-like tendencies are not a part of man's makings; both characteristics do exist, but not in all men. They do not exist in those who enter the armed services by force, not by chance.

Steve Gerko — I think the draft is necessary for our country to keep its image abroad. Our country must also draft men to remain great and free.

Fred Bauer — I think the draft is necessary because enlistments would not meet the demand of men needed overseas.

by Irene M. Norkaitis

The 1966 publication of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges has listed 19 Wilkes College students among those chosen throughout the nation. Nominated and recognized by the national organization, 14 men and five women have been honored for their outstanding contributions to the College and to the community. These students have maintained at least a 2.0 average throughout their college years.

In the fall each department receives a request for a list of nominees for Who's Who. The teachers suggest several names on the basis of their knowledge of the students. In order to limit the number of nominees, Dean Ralston, administrators, and department heads narrow the list and make final decisions on the nominees. The students who are finally selected are believed to represent the ideal college student.

The following seniors have been selected for listing in the 1966 publication of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Alfred Airola

President of Cue and Curtain, Alfred Airola will receive his B.A. degree in English in June. Airola, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Airola, 40 Park Avenue, Dover, New Jersey, has been a member of the Beacon staff and the varsity team of the Debate Club.

John Cavallini

John Samuel Cavallini, president of Student Government, is a mathematics major. He has been active in the Education Club, Engineering Club, Mathematics Club, and senior class executive council. He was also chairman of the Parents' Day Planning Committee. Cavallini, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ladino Cavallini, 424 East Noble Street, Nanticoke, plans to work with Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania.

Philip Cheifetz

Philip G. Cheifetz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard B. Cheifetz, 15 Pleasant Lane, Levittown, New York, plans to obtain his M.A. while working with either Humble Oil or IBM. Cheifetz has been president of the Forum for two years, president of the Mathematics Club for two years, vice-president of Hainna Hall, and chairman of Student Government elections committee. He has also placed on the Dean's List.

James Eitel

James Gary Eitel, a music education major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Eitel, 48 Govier St., Wilkes-Barre. He has been a member of the Collegians for four years and director for one year. He has been in the Chorus for four years, Madrigal Singers for four years, the College Band for three years, and a member of the cast of "Sound of Music."

Robert Ericson

Michael Konnick

Michael John Konnick, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Konnick, 222 Mayock Street, Wilkes-Barre, will receive his degree in political science. Konnick is president of the Junius Society.

Ernest Krute

Ernest John Krute, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Krute, 42 Auburn Street, Wilkes-Barre, will receive his B.S. degree in accounting.

Patrick McGarty

Patrick Noel McGarty, son of Mrs. Paul McGarty of Sagamoor Harbor, New York, and now residing at 62 West Beatty Street, Wilkes-Barre, will receive his B.A. degree in English in June. McGarty has held the positions of Manuscript editor and literary editor of Ammicola, and has merited placement on the Dean's List while at the College. His future plans include graduate work and college teaching.

COLLEGIANS Administration Rejects ENTERTAIN Council's Constitution ASSEMBLY

The Collegians, under the direction of Jimmy Eitel, performed in Assembly yesterday. The program consisted of: "Brothers Sing On" composed by Grieg; "Sweet Love Doth Now Invite" by Dowland; "John Peil" by Andrews; "Madame Jeanette" by Muray; "Praise to the Lord" by Whitehead; "Maria" from "West Side Story" by Bernstein, sung by Ed Pashinski, tenor; "Fathers and Sons" by Saint-Saens; "Old Colony Time" by Touchette; "There is Nothing Like a Dame" by Rodgers; "Onward, Ye Peoples!" by Sibelius.

Piano accompaniment was provided by Jackson Burkey.

The recently-formulated constitution of the Five-College Council has been disapproved by the College's administrative council. The members of the council felt that it was inadvisable to have a constitution, since this assumes that the policies and practices of the Five — College Council are congenial to all the member schools. These include, at present, King's, Marywood, Misericordia, the University of Scranton, and Wilkes. The recognition of a formal organization carries with it financial and political implications. Social events, such as dances, could be co-ordinated without a constitution, on the basis of tradition. The purpose of the Five-College Council is ostensibly to act as a forum, a goal which can be achieved without a binding constitution.

Plans are progressing for the Intercollegiate Hootenanny in the spring.

In the group category, first prize will be $100, second prize $50, third prize $25. In the singles category the prize will be $50. Matt Fliss and Jean Marie Chapasko are co-chairmen of the event.

Dr. Farley has suggested that the students be solicited for pledges to the fund for the new library. Student Government is considering this and alternative ideas.

Chairman of the Student Government publicity committee will be Joe Gatto, replacing Judy Simonson.

ICG was granted $125 for a conference.

Musicians Plan Concert Series

As part of their Town and Gown Concert Series, the music department will present a concert this Sunday afternoon at the Fine Arts Center beginning at 3:30 p.m. The concert will feature Raymond J. Nutaitis on the tuba and Herbert Garber at the piano.

Among the works to be performed are Vivaldi's "Sonata No. 3" and "Six Duets for Two Cellos," with Nelson Seagren playing the second tuba, and "Concerto Grosso for Three Trombones and Tuba." Donald Bohl, Ronald Daggett, and Forrest Eichmann will play the trombones.

The next Town and Gown Concert, to be held in March, will feature the woodwind ensemble under the direction of William Gasbarro, chairman of the music department.

Editorial

Taking Candy From A Baby

It is difficult to conceive of modern society operating without law. For if there were no rules governing the relationships of men, our social structure would surely disintegrate. This is also true of any organization whether it be corporation, club, or even a library.

A library has as its purpose collecting books and providing for their circulation. In order that it may perform its duties with the utmost efficiency, the library must formulate certain rules and regulations to which it expects its clients to adhere.

Thus central to the government of conduct of individuals is the idea of control. Within society, control is necessary to protect both individual and societal interests. So, too, a certain amount of control is necessary in a library to insure that the individual student is able to obtain the book needed for an extra reading assignment and that the entire student body is assured an adequate supply of source material.

Likewise, law implies an obligation of respect from those who enjoy its protection. Thus our library, which operates on an open-shelf system, trusts that the student will follow the proper procedures when he desires to obtain a book.

Because failure to follow these rules seems to be characteristic of the students of the College, we must question their integrity and responsibility. Ethics, which concerns for the most part individual morality, is an important part of the law. For a similar ethical code of a group of individuals produces community standards which in turn influence law and order.

If we were to accuse the student body of a lack of integrity in relation to the library, we might also speculate as to the general ethical standards of the student community. There is little likelihood, however, that the College is composed of moral degenerates who are all attempting to compile their own 10,000-volume home libraries with the College's books. Rather than a lack of moral standards, there seems to be a lack of responsibility on the part of the student body. For most books are eventually returned — not by students alone, however, but by maintenance men who, while cleaning the dormitories, make big finds, or through the mail from other libraries.

Student irresponsibility also reflects a lack of consideration for one's fellow classmates. It seems that the average student has forgotten or ignored the fact that the person next to him in Biology 211 also has a term paper on the yellow-bellied sapsucker, and that he may very well depend upon the school library for the same source material.

But we feel that the student is not wholly to blame. One must also consider that the physical setting of the library is conducive to the illegal acquisition of the College's books. One small circulation desk at which only one person can be taken care of at any given moment does not encourage desirable library habits to a student who is pressed for time and is last in a line of six or seven people. The alternative is to exit unnoticed through the back door, conveniently located a distance from the circulation desk.

Then too, we cannot ignore the fact that those in positions of authority have taken no effective action to combat this problem. The student situation compounds the already existing problem of inadequate space for an increasing number of books. The library can no longer adequately administer its collection of books because it cannot control it. There seems to be a feeling of indifference and perhaps helplessness, a tendency to blame the student and ignore the power of its own position among the library staff.

Certainly there is a need for a change of attitude on the part of both the student and the library staff. We can only hope that the present conditions will not set a precedent for the prospective library.

Man On Moon Won't
Solve Earth's Dilemma

by Walt Narcum

Space is in the news again. The Russians have made a soft landing on the moon and, as usual, the United States has announced that it will attempt the same feat within a few months.

It seems that whenever the Russians pull off a Space Spectacular, the U.S. must go into a mad expensive rush to accomplish the same feat. Therefore the question again arises, is it all worth it?

The militarists claim that we must not allow the moon to become Russian property. If we do, they continue, it will be used as a military base from which Russia will be able to blackmail the world. This is sheer nonsense!

The moon is absolutely useless as a military base. A rocket launched from the moon would take two and one-half days to reach the earth, while an earth-based ICBM takes only 32 minutes to reach its target.

The President claims that in order to be first on earth, we must not be second in space. The facts do not support this claim.

The pressing problems of the world will not be solved by our reaching the moon before 1970. Most of the world will still go to bed hungry. The population explosion will continue. Red China will continue its aggression and the arms race will proceed unchecked.

Right now the nation is faced with the dilemma of Vietnam, and it is an expensive dilemma. It is costing us about 3 million dollars a day.

In addition to the war in Vietnam, the President wants to continue with his economic programs here at home. His "War on Poverty", Medicare, and education programs cannot be put into effect without a considerable outlay of federal funds.

To spend all this money for these domestic programs and still support a wasteful crash space program is not justifiable in the light of the world situation today. A cutback must be made somewhere, and our wasteful program is one of the first places our economic planners should look.

Man will continue to strive to increase his horizons. This is as it should be. This striving, however, should not be at the expense of a world which is far from the best of all possible worlds.

Letter to the Editor

Candid
Classifies
Kooks

Dear Editor:

Our revolutionary age of intellectual freedom has seemingly produced on this campus a twentieth century Voltaire in the form of Mr. A. H. Kook. What do you suppose has sparked this scathing retaliation against clique-ism at the College? Rejection from his favorite table in the caf? Absence from the starting five on the basketball court? Or possibly what he may consider as non-intellectual snobbery?

Certain intellectuals are considered kooks by society's "normal" element. In this sense, the term "kook" is acceptable and even admirable. However, many individuals wear cloaks of individuality simply to protect themselves from their own prejudices and rationalizations. If they were suddenly stripped of these deceiving garments, their enlightened lips would form such frank statements as: "I am a weakling, so down with athletic cliques," or "I am an unloved cynic, so why not get revenge by attacking clique-ism?" The syllogistical minds of such pseudo-intellectuals are nourished by rationalized rather than rational logic. Intellectuals are kooks. I am a kook. Therefore, I am an intellectual. Mr. A. H. Kook, are you for real?

I would like to have my name added to those of Eglebert Eclair, Crimple Crummet, and Creamy Oreo, the self-appointed champions of teamwork (or maybe "teamism" would be more satisfying for the "ism-oriented" philosophers of our generation). The sarcastic pen of Mr. A. H. Kook sketches an idealistic literary world which is juvenalian, platonic, and quixotic in nature. His imaginary, cultured, intimate, sincere, non-conformist group of philosophers would indeed become a clique (heaven forbid!) very similar to the eighteenth century "philosophes." It seems very ironical that he summarized his argument with "Down with clique-ism!" Therefore, referring to Mr. A. H. Kook, I will paraphrase the famous (or infamous) Francois Marie Arouet and say: "Ecrasez l'infame!"

Hopefully yours,
Candid

Automation Conquers All

by Helen Dugan

The place was the Employment Office; it was dusk as I noticed a small figure seemed so pathetic that I felt obliged to stop and talk to him. Whether he was a mature man or still a lad I could not tell, for by his appearance he looked rather young, but the tone of his replies was that of a man well-weathered by experience.

He seemed almost relieved of his burden when I inquired into his thoughts and asked if I could be of some assistance. He looked up at me with a slow, wistful smile and said, "Thank you. It's nice to know there are still real people who care about real feelings."

His answer perplexed me, and motivated me to inquire about the misfortune which had brought him to a place which seemed so foreign to him. He told me of his unusual trade and his gains — in pleasure and not money. When I asked how he could consider himself truly prosperous while having such an insignificant monetary status, he looked up at me once more. But this time he was not smiling. His look was that of disappointment as he started to shake his head once again; I could feel his confidence drawing away from me.

Fearing that this small creature would withdraw completely and leave me before I understood his entrancing mystery, I hurried to mend the damage I had obviously done. "But what I mean is, what pleasure can mean so much to you?"

Starting reluctantly but adding each word with more conviction and meaning, he replied, "My pleasure sir, is that of giving hope to all men regardless of social standing, race, or religion. What man is truly happy without someone to care about his happiness? What man can succeed without a will? What man is truly prosperous who lives his life alone? I bring happiness to those destitute, a will to those suppressed, and companionship to those alone."

The more he spoke, the more confused I became. Why would a man of his magnitude be in search of a job? Although I tried to find some fallacy in his character, I could not. By simply hearing him laugh, I was convinced that he was in reality all that he professed to be.

His eyes twinkled as if he had heard my thoughts trailing through my mind. Slightly taken back but not really surprised, I heard him say, "The reason for my present misfortune is automation." Rather disappointed at such a common answer, I was ready to extend my regrets and be on my way, wondering why I thought this man such a unique individual.

But he saved me from making a hasty generalization by clarifying his seemingly simple explanation. "What with machines whirling unfeelingly through daily routines, challenging man, pushing him into a frantic climb for power and prosperity, there has been a terrible sacrifice made."

"There is no longer time for individuality, for concern, for compassion — for love. Those are my products. They are pushed aside now and are requested by only a few obsolete fuddy-duddies who are silly and old-fashioned. However, it is not my loss but that of humanity that I grieve."

At this he turned from me and started to walk toward the doors of the building; suddenly he stopped and glanced back. He had that same wistful smile as he reached into his vest pocket and extended a small white card in my direction. Awakening from my transfixion, I walked to him and took the card. He merely said, "I think there is hope in some of us who are not afraid of emotions and are not possessed by gain, and I think you might be just such a person. Feel free to call on me anytime."

As he passed through the doors I looked at his card. The bold red letters against the pure white background read: DAN CUPID — Love, Inc.

'Soc' Majors Begin 'Group' Activities

by Leona Sokash

The Group was formed primarily because of the desire of sociology majors to be part of an organization devoted to and emphasizing the principles of their particular discipline. The club's name was suggested by its vice-president, Annetta Long (stop thinking of Mary McCarthy's novel), and should be considered in the light of its sociological overtones.

According to President Ron Russo, the purpose of the organization is "to foster student interest in the field of sociology and to apply the social sciences to various fields, particularly in social work. We particularly want to extend an invitation to members of the student body, who, though not being 'soc' majors, are, nevertheless, interested in sociology." Russo continued, "Students may have some misconceptions concerning the field of sociology which may have arisen from such influences as the old television program 'Eastside, Westside.'" While conceding the value of such a program, Russo feels that it gave the impression that a social agency ordinarily deals with problems as varied as those discussed on the program. However, he said that in actuality such agencies are usually more specialized; they concern themselves with one or two social problems.

Other officers in the club include Mary Ann Story, secretary, and Julie Palsha, treasurer.

Last November The Group heard a lecture given by H. Allen Larson, field representative of the United Funds and Councils of America. Mr. Larson gave information concerning community organization and discussed opportunities available to those interested in this particular area within the concern of sociology.

Another of the club's activities was a recent field trip to the Luzerne County Juvenile Detention Center.

Navy Seeks Recruits For Training Program

On Tuesday, February 15 representatives from the U.S. Navy will be on campus to recruit students for their new Reserve Officer Candidate program. Since the removal of the high school reserve program, this new program, ROC, offers the only opportunity for young men to enter the Naval Reserve.

Open only to college undergraduates, the program encompasses their junior and senior years, beginning at the start of the junior year. Enrolled members are required to attend drills one week-end each month out of the school year and an eight-week session during each summer. These summer sessions will be held at Newport, Rhode Island. A student wishing to complete his education with graduate work may continue the program during this time also.

There are financial advantages to be had through enrolling in this program. While attending school, the student enjoys a draft-free status. For the first year he receives approximately $400, since full pay is given for the summer session, and this yearly pay increases to $600 in the second year. Upon completion of the program, the student enters active duty with a higher rank and is required to serve only three years. This program aids in selecting a preferred field on entering active duty.

To accommodate for any interested student unable to contact the representative on campus Tuesday, the Naval Reserve Training Center on Bennett and Mercer Streets in Kingston opens Monday through Friday at 8 a.m.

Cobbs, Stein Initiate Folk Singing Society

The first meeting of the College's newly-instituted Ethno-musicological Society was held in Conyngham Hall this week. The purpose of the society is to further an interest in folk music. The originators of the society are Carroll Cobbs, a sophomore from Ashley Hall, and Michael Stein, of the College art department.

Officers for the society were elected as follows: president, Carroll Cobbs; vice-president, Joe Menko; treasurer, Richard Kramer; secretary, Nancy Noterman. Mr. Stein will act as advisor. Others on hand for the meeting included Davene Sobel, Richard Frushon, Clark Bromfield, Jean Bigus, Ellen Simms, Rosanne Aguire, Margaret O'Connor, Sandy Walder, Bob Schoenholtz, and Clark Line.

The next meeting will be on Tuesday. Time and location will be announced. Meetings will be open to all students. Interest is the only prerequisite, and no musical ability is required.

IRC CLUB DISCUSSES PROBLEMS

IRC members recently selected new officers. Michael Devlin was elected president; Lewis Chere, vice-president; Penny Farrar, secretary; and John Zalot, treasurer.

Under the main topic of "Myths and Realities of American Foreign Policy — Trade and Aid," the members have been debating problems concerning the Vietnam situation and the acceptance of China as a member of the United Nations. In connection with the latter topic, IRC and ICEC have been discussing plans for a possible three-hour conference on China's acceptance. The Debate Club has also picked this problem for its assembly program. At this assembly, students will be asked to indicate on cards if they would attend the three-hour conference. Definite plans for carrying this idea through will depend entirely upon the student body. If the decision is affirmative, the conference will take place in the Center for the Performing Arts.

Art Show

The art of Betsy Jo Compton will be on display at Conyngham Annex next Monday, through Saturday, February 14-19. Her work will consist of sketches and block prints, oils and watercolor, and some sculpture. The annex will be open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. and 7-9 p.m.

Sorority Chooses Valentine Queen

Sorority President Suzanne Bellone crowns Toni Supchak, queen of the organization's annual Valentine semi-formal.

Tables decked with red tulle hearts and white candles, red cupids and hearts suspended from the chandeliers, and red punch flowing from a silver fountain provided the setting for the Valentine semi-formal of the TDR sorority, held at the Gus Genetti Hotel. Favors were mugs of wood crested in navy with the TDR insignia.

At intermission Toni Supchak, a junior from Plymouth, was crowned queen of the event by sorority president Suzanne Bellone, a senior from Forty Fort. Chaperones for the affair were: Dean Ahlborn, Mr. and Mrs. George Siles, and Dr. and Mrs. Francis Michelini.

Seventy-five women and their dates danced to the music of Lee Vincent and his orchestra in the gay holiday atmosphere.

DRAFTS

Albert Stoffio — Definitely the draft is and will always be necessary. Fifty years ago the President's greetings meant a better education for most of us being drafted. Today the draft usually means an economical and educational liability to most of us.

Vicki Ronan — Unfortunately, the draft is necessary. It seems rather incongruous that threats to world peace must be met by military readiness. Yet this is the solution that most countries which also have draft programs choose.

Carolyn Bruch — I think it's a much better idea than hiring mercenaries. An American citizen has many rights and freedoms, but these are inexorably coupled with responsibilities. One of these responsibilities is to preserve the union and guard our nebulous way of life.

Neil Brown — The selective service system is essential in maintaining the security of the American nation and the preservation of the American system of government. We must meet our commitment to combat the expansionist tendency that is inherent in international communism, and this can only be accomplished by maintaining a well-equipped and permanent army. This can only be done through a system of involuntary conscription, for America has never been a country of volunteers. If we expect to live in a free society we must be prepared to defend it.

Howie Weinberg — Being a young man of draft age, I do believe the draft is necessary, especially with the Vietnam conflict going on and the general situation the world is in. Naturally, the young men of this country do not wish to die, but I think they realize, as I do, that we must be willing to stand up for this freedom that most of us hold so dear. At this time the draft is the most efficient way to get young men in the armed forces, so if we are to defeat communism and other dangers to our freedom we must be behind the draft.

Al Airola — The draft is, unfortunately, necessary. Each of us is faced with the eventuality of being drafted; each of us has an obligation to serve.

ROOMMATES: THEIR CAUSE AND CURE

You'd think that with all the progress we have made in the education game, somebody would have found a cure for roommates by now. But no. Roommates remain as big a problem today as they were when Ethan Mather founded the first American college.

(Contrary to popular belief, Harvard was not the first. Mr. Mather started his institution some 100 years earlier. And quite an institution it was, let me tell you! Mr. Mather built schools of liberal arts, fine arts, dentistry and tanning. He built a lacrosse stadium that seated 200,000. Everywhere on campus was emblazoned the stirring Latin motto CAVE MUSSI—"Watch out for moose." The student union contained a bowling alley, a weighing machine, and a sixteen-chair barber shop.)

(It was this last feature—the barber shop—that, alas, brought Mr. Mather's college to an early end. The student body, being drawn chiefly from the nearby countryside, was composed almost entirely of Pequot and Iroquois Indians who, alas, had no need of a barber shop. They braided the hair on top of their heads, and as for the hair on their faces, they had none. The barber, Tremblatt Follicle by name, grew so depressed staring day after day at 16 empty chairs that one day his mind gave way. Seizing his vibrator, he ran outside and shook the entire campus till it crumbled to dust. This later became known as Pickett's Charge.)

But I digress. We were exploring ways for you and your roommate to stop hating each other. This is admittedly difficult but not impossible if you will both bend a bit, give a little.

I remember, for example, my own college days (Berlitz '08). My roommate was, I think you will allow, even less agreeable than most. He was a Tibetan named Ringading whose native customs, while indisputably colorful, were not entirely endearing. Mark you, I didn't mind so much the gong he struck on the hour or the string of firecrackers he set off on the half hour. I didn't even mind that he singed chicken feathers every dusk and daybreak. What I did mind was that he singed them in my hat.

To be fair, he was not totally taken with some of my habits either—especially my hobby of collecting water. I had no jars at the time, so I just had to stack the water any-old-where.

Well, sir, things grew steadily cooler between Ringading and me, and they might actually have gotten ugly had we not each happened to receive a package from home one day. Ringading opened his package, paused, smiled shyly at me, and offered me a gift.

"Thank you," I said. "What is it?"

"Yak butter," he said. "You put it in your hair. In Tibetan we call it gree see kidstuff."

"Well now, that's mighty friendly," I said and offered him a gift from my package. "Now you must have one of mine."

"Thank you," he said. "What is this called?"

"Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades," I said.

"I will try one at once," he said. And did.

"Wowdow!" he cried. "Never have I had such a smooth, close, comfortable shave!"

"Ah, but the best is yet!" I cried. "For you will get many, many smooth, close, comfortable shaves from your Personna Blade—each one nearly as smooth, close, and comfortable as the first!"

"Wowdow!" he cried.

"Moreover," I cried, "Personna Blades come both in Double Edge style and Injector style!"

"Sort of makes a man feel humble," he said.

"Yes," I said.

We were both silent then, not trusting ourselves to speak. Silently we clasped hands, friends at last, and I am proud to say that Ringading and I remain friends to this day. We exchange cards each Christmas and firecrackers each Fourth of July.

MARAUDERS SCUTTLE COLONELS' SWIMMERS

The Wilkes mermen bowed, 60-35, to a perennially strong Millersville team last Saturday afternoon at the Central Y.M.C.A. pool. The floaters' log now stands at 1-3.

The only Colonel individual first place win in the contest was copped by Bryn Kehrli in the 50-yard freestyle event with a time of 26.2 seconds. Co-captain Chuck Petrillo followed Kehrli with a second place win in this event. The Wilkesmen also took the 400-yard freestyle relay, the final event of the meet, in 4:49.5. Out of the nine individual events, Wilkes copped five second place wins.

Millersville's captain, Bob Pulcher, captured two individual first place wins for the Marauders in the 200-yard freestyle and the 200-yard butterfly events. Ironically, Wilkes swimming coach, Ken Young, taught Pulcher how to swim when the former was aquatic director at the Chester, Pennsylvania, Y.M.C.A.

This past Wednesday the Colonels swam against Lycoming College. Because of the Beacon deadline, we are unable to print the results this week. Tomorrow the Wilkes mermen go on the road to meet Pennsylvania Military College at 6 p.m. at Chester, Pennsylvania. Last year the Colonels downed P.M.C., 59-37.

WILKES vs. M'VILLE The Colonels Dick Herrmann executes a dive in the pike position in the diving competition in the Wilkes-Millersville swim meet. The Wilkesmen bowed, 60-35, for their third loss of the season as opposed to one victory. Tomorrow the mermen meet P.M.C. in an away meet at Chester, Pennsylvania.

Colonelettes Start With 1-1 Record

The Colonelettes opened their basketball season last week. Their log stands 1-1 with a 42-33 victory over Moravian and a 59-54 loss to Muhlenberg.

The Wilkes team started off slowly against Moravian and the first half ended in Moravian's favor 13-3. Although the Colonelettes came back strong in the second quarter and scored 13 points, Moravian still held the lead at half time, 21-16. In the second half, the Colonelettes scored 28 points while Moravian scored 11.

Lead scorer for Wilkes was Elaine Barbini with 15 points. Dorothy Eck and Donna George each compiled 12 points and Maureen Brady's 3 completed the scoring.

In their second game, the Colonel-ettes again started slowly, scoring 10 points to Muhlenberg's 16. Muhlenberg was outscored in the second quarter, 14-8, but scored 25 points in the third quarter. Although the Colonelettes outscored Muhlenberg from the floor, they lost the game on foul shots, making 6 out of 17, while Muhlenberg scored on 13 out of 21.

On Swimming

Since many students have had little or no contact with competitive swimming before entering college, we are publishing the rules governing a swimming meet and a description of the events held in a swimming contest. It is hoped that with this information students will take a greater interest in the College's swimming team.

General rules:

1. Each college may enter two men in each event except relays. Only one team is entered from each college in relay events. A swimmer is allowed to compete in not more than three events in a meet.
2. Scoring for relays — winning team 7, losing team 0. Scoring for all other events — winner, 5; 2nd place, 3; 3rd place, 1.
3. In the 500-yard freestyle race a gun will be shot to indicate when the leading swimmer has only 2 more lengths to complete.
4. Each swimmer is allowed one false start. A second false start will disqualify him.
5. A swimmer may swim any stroke or a combination of strokes in a freestyle race. Since crawl stroke is the fastest stroke known, nearly all swimmers swim crawl for freestyle races.
6. Diving: The first dive by each diver is the required dive for this meet. It was drawn by the referee before the meet from a required list of 5 dives in a hat. The diver may choose his next 5 dives, but must pick one from each of forward, backward, inward, reverse, and twist style dives. Each dive is assigned a degree of difficulty by the rule book according to its difficulty of performance. The diving judge scores the execution of the dive from 1 to 10 and his award is multiplied by the degree of difficulty. The result is the diver's score for the dive.

Events:

1. 400-yard Medley Relay. Four men swim four lengths each. The first swims backstroke; the second swims breaststroke; the third swims butterfly; the fourth swims freestyle. Score 7-0.
2. 200-yard Freestyle. This race is 8 lengths. Any stroke may be used. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
3. 50-yard Freestyle. Only two lengths in this race. Finishes are usually very close. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
4. 200-yard Individual Medley. Each contestant swims 2 lengths in each stroke in the following order — butterfly, backstroke, breaststroke, and freestyle. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
5. Diving. Each contestant does six dives. The judges award is multiplied by the degree of difficulty to determine the score for each dive. Each diver's total score after six dives determines the winner. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
6. 200-yard Butterfly. This event is the most difficult because it employs a new and difficult stroke. For 8 lengths the swimmer must recover both arms simultaneously over the water. He may do the breaststroke kick or the newer dolphin kick. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
7. 100-yard Freestyle. Four lengths. Any stroke or strokes may be used. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
8. 200 — yard Backstroke. Eight lengths on the back. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
9. 500-yard Freestyle. This is the longest race. It consists of 20 pool lengths. This race is more than ¼ of a mile. This event usually takes 6 minutes. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
10. 200-yard Breaststroke. The breaststroke swimmer must not put his head completely under water except on the start and on the turn. Arms and legs move in paired movements. The hand touch must be made with both hands simultaneously. No deviation from correct kick or armstroke is allowed. Score 5 — 3 — 1.
11. 400-yard Freestyle Relay. Four men swim 4 lengths each. They may swim any stroke, but all will swim crawl. A contestant may be in motion when his teammate finishes, but his feet must not leave the block until the touch. Score 7 — 0.

Grapplers Blitz M'ville For Seventeen Straight

MCCORMICK PINS Jim McCormick of Wilkes is shown working for the hold which gave him a pin over McKee-man of Millersville. The pin, one of the fastest of the meet, came in 1:57 of the first period. Wilkes defeated the Marauders 34-2 last Saturday.

Cagers Down Juniata For First League Win

by Bill Bush

Last Thursday the Wilkes cagers traveled to the home court of Scranton University. Scranton is one of the strongest teams in the M.A.C. and always provides Wilkes with tough competition.

The Colonels showed surprising team effort in the first half of play by matching the Scranton Royals point for point. Captain Joe Chanecka provided the spark to the Colonels' play during the first half. The score was tied 36-36 when the halftime whistle sounded.

Throughout the season Wilkes has been plagued by second half trouble and the Scranton game proved to be no exception. The Royals commanded the court for the remainder of the game, defeating the Colonels 83-65.

Chanecka was high man for the Colonels with 14 points. He is currently ninth in the league in foul shot percentage. Last Saturday the Colonels traveled to Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, to face Juniata College in a conference game. The teams were fairly matched as Juniata held a record of 2-9 while Wilkes posted a log of 3-10.

The Colonels, led by the scoring of Reuben Daniels and Chanecka, played a good first half Juniata matched Wilkes point for point and commanded a three point advantage at the half-time.

The Colonels, determined to gain a league victory, made a comeback in the second half and managed to contain the Juniata offense. The Colonels played an inspired second half, defeating Juniata 77-72.

A new addition to the Colonels' varsity, Ron Ridzon, tallied 23 points for the Colonels. Daniels and Chanecka tallied 18 and 14 points respectively.

This past Wednesday the Colonels, holding a 4-10 log, faced the league-leading Lycoming cagers who held a 12-4 record. Tonight the Colonels host Drew at 8:15 p.m. Tomorrow night in another home game the Colonels meet Upsala at 8:30 p.m.

Wrestlers Face Lycoming Rivals

by Walt Narcum

In the first half of a double-header tomorrow night, the Colonels' grapplers will host their traditional rivals, the Warriors of Lycoming College, at 7 p.m. The Warriors have an especially strong team this year and will be out to end the Colonels' winning streak at 17.

The Lycoming squad is probably the toughest that coach John Reese's squad has to face in its four remaining meets. If the Colonels take this one, they will be favored to finish the regular season undefeated. This should set the Colonels up as favorites in the M.A.C. Tournament which will be held at the Wilkes gym on March 4 and 5.

Tonight at 8:15 p.m. the Wilkes cagers will take on Drew College in a home game. In the second half of tomorrow night's double-header, the Colonels will meet the Greyhounds of Upsala College at 8:15 p.m. The Colonels have shown great improvement in recent games and will be out to revenge their 90-70 loss to Upsala last year.

by Walt Narcum

The Colonels' matmen rolled over Millersville State College last Saturday night with a 34-2 victory. The win was the seventeenth in a row for the Colonels and it brought their record to 7-0 thus far this season. The Colonels took all but one match and that one ended in a draw.

Before this meet the Colonels were ranked third in the nation according to the latest N.C.A.A. small college statistics. The lop-sided victory should enable the Colonels to maintain or improve their ranking.

Jim McCormick, Barry Gold, John Carr, and Al Arnold all registered pins for the Colonels. Barry Gold came up with the fastest pin, 1:27 of the first period.

In the only bout which the Colonels failed to win, Jim Coffman led his Millersville opponent, Jim Shenk, 6-4, as the bout ended, but Shenk was awarded 2 points for riding time and the bout ended in a draw.

The bout won by Yogi Michael ended with the Millersville wrestler leading 5-4. Michael, however, had succeeded in piling up considerable riding time and was awarded 2 points to give him a 6-5 victory.

John Carr showed his versatility by moving up to the 177-pound class and still registering an easy victory by pinning his man in 2:01 of the first period. In the final bout of the night Al Arnold turned in another fine performance by pinning the Millersville captain in 5:06 of the second period.

- 123—Comegys (W) decisioned Hess, 5-0.
- 130—McCormick (W) pinned McKeeman, 1:57.
- 137—Coffman (W) drew with Shenk, 6-6.
- 145—Michael(W) decisioned Warner, 6-5.
- 152—Wiendl (W) decisioned Peck, 11-1.
- 160—Gold (W) pinned Tinpale, 1:27.
- 167—Cook (W) decisioned Swift, 17-1.
- 177—Carr (W) Pinned Cramer, 2:01.
- Unlimited-Arnold (W) pinned Lawrence, 5:06.

Performance Earns Cook Beacon Title

DICK COOK

Stepping into the limelight as "Athlete of the Week" in this week's Beacon is Dick Cook, a wrestling team standout.

Cook, wrestling at the 167-pound weight class, is currently sporting an unblemished 7-0 record. Two of his bouts this year have ended by the fall route. Against Millersville State College last Saturday evening, he completely overwhelmed his opponent, out-pointing him 17-1. Decisioning his opponents in double figures has been a continuing occurrence in many of his bouts this season.

Cook, a Liberal Arts major, is from Kingston. While at Kingston High School, he starred on its wrestling team.

COFFMAN DRAWS The Colonels' Jim Coffman is pictured above in his bout with Shenk of Millersville. The bout was one of the hardest fought of the meet. It ended in a 6-6 draw after Shenk received two points for riding time. The victory over Millersville puts the Colonels at 7-0 thus far this season.

Thirty Teams Vie In IM Basketball

by Bob Thompson

An all time high number of 30 teams will be competing this year for the intramural basketball title.

This season the Independent League is divided into four divisions of five teams each. At the end of the seasonal play, the four division leaders will compete in a round-robin tournament to determine the Independent champions. The Dormitory League consists of a Blue and a Gold Division, each of which consists of five teams. The victors of the Independent and Dormitory Leagues will meet at the end of the season for the College championship.

The postponed games of January 31 will be played at the end of the regular season. The Independent League games scheduled for February 16 will be rescheduled to a later date because another event is being held at the gym on the 16th. Both dates will be announced later.

As of this printing, the Independent League leaders are: Northern—Soupy's Sensations, Southern—Trojans, Eastern—Ckinas and Adiabets, Western—Straps and F Troup. The Dorm leaders are: Gold—Y.M.C.A. and Sterling, Blue—Ashley and Miner.

Anyone who has a question concerning intramurals can contact Glen Kinger at the Y.M.C.A.
