

THE DRUM LITHOGRAPHS: 1960-1963

THE DRUM LITHOGRAPHS: 1960-1963

Exhibition Curated by Stanley I Grand Catalogue Essay by Clinton Adams
Foreword by Jules Sherman

November 13-December 20, 1994

Sordoni Art Gallery
Wilkes University
Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania
© 1994

Essay © 1994 by Clinton Adams

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Stanley I Grand

I first met Jules and Lorraine Sherman while working on my dissertation. They invited me out to their Long Island home and, during the course of our visit, introduced me to the Drum Lithographs. At the time, I thought that these little-known lithographs would make an excellent exhibition. In 1993, their son Michael and his wife Kim donated 121 of the prints to the Sordoni Art Gallery, Wilkes University. This exhibition is drawn primarily from that generous gift.

I am particularly grateful to Clinton Adams, whose knowledge of lithography and twentieth-century American lithographers is unrivaled, for writing the catalogue essay. He has been a delightful person with whom to work.

Ken Showell photographed the lithographs at Christopher and Yvette Deeton's New York studio.

The Metro Agency designed the catalogue, which was printed by Penn Creative Litho.

Finally, I wish to express my thanks to the Sordoni Art Gallery staff, Friends of the Sordoni Art Gallery, and the Gallery's Advisory Commission.

FORWARD

Jules Sherman

I remember it as a dark, winter evening in late December 1959 or early January 1960—I can't say exactly—when Reginald Pollack entered my shop, and my life. Reginald, recently returned from Paris, had telephoned a few hours earlier to propose establishing an experimental lithographic print program.

An Atelier! In a commercial litho plant!

I phoned my wife, canceled dinner and awaited his arrival with no doubt that a personal dream was about to be fulfilled. Several hours later, a lifelong friendship had begun and Collectors Graphics was born.

We began work almost immediately, devoting weekends to experimenting with zinc and aluminum plates, coatings and etches, and other contemporary lithographic techniques and materials. Nothing worked. Finally we custom ordered special press-size paper plates. Designed exclusively for short runs on small Multilith equipment, the paper plates were unstable, fragile, and temperamental; but they functioned magnificently — beyond our wildest expectations. With the basic production problem now resolved, the print program began in earnest.

We agreed, at the very beginning, that no restrictions would ever be imposed on the artists or their work; that all costs would be absorbed by the shop so that the artists would not be inhibited by financial considerations; that our aim in printing was solely educational and joyous and that the ultimate product would reflect this philosophy.

Collectors Graphics was to be a self-sustaining love affair!

Jacques Lipchitz, Master, friend of Modigliani, Picasso and their contemporaries, realized the freedom of Collectors Graphics and brought forth its soul. We had scheduled an evening's production; everything was in order when the phone rang. Sick at home with the flu and deeply apologetic about his inability to be present at the printing, Jacques was nonetheless reluctant to break the schedule. I was at press side and asked him if he would permit me to be his eyes: I would describe what I saw and he would respond, through me, to the waiting pressman. He agreed!

Later that evening, I delivered the prints to his home. This gentle giant of a man was overwhelmed. He left his bed, hugged me and said in his endearing French accent, "Jules, you have given me new hope for a life in art!"

With undying love for Reginald, who taught me to See.

With undying love for Merrill, his identical twin, who taught me to Share.

With undying love for Lou, their brother, who taught me to Feel.

THE DRUM LITHOGRAPHS: 1960-1963

Clinton Adams

As has often been the case in the history of artists' lithography, a fortuitous meeting between an artist and a printer made possible the fine prints produced at Drum Lithographers between 1960 and 1963. The artist was Reginald Pollack, who had been making lithographs in New York and Paris since 1941; the printer was Jules Sherman, who offered to print Pollack's hand-drawn offset lithographs "for the sheer joy of it."¹

Pollack had first encountered lithography while an apprentice to Moses Soyer in 1941; soon thereafter, he and some friends had printed lithographs from stone, using presses and equipment at East Side House in Manhattan. In 1948, after military service during World War II, Pollack went to Paris for study, with support from the G.I. Bill. He soon met the French printer Gaston Dorfinant, who permitted the young artist (he was then twenty-four) to draw his stones at a work bench once used by Toulouse-Lautrec. While living in Paris, Pollack continued to exhibit in New York, most often at the Peridot Gallery, established by his brother Louis in 1949. To earn money on the side, he began buying prints in Paris—on the quais and at auctions—acting as agent for Louis Pollack, Charles Stern, and the print dealer, Peter Deitsch. In the late 1950s, he made several color lithographs in Paris, including one on commission from William S. Lieberman, then Curator of Prints at the Museum of Modern Art.²

Simultaneously, a new interest in lithography was developing in the United States. In New York, Margaret Lowengrund opened the Contemporaries Graphic Art Centre (predecessor to the Pratt Graphic Art Center) in 1955, and Tatyana Grosman began her collaboration with Larry Rivers and Frank O'Hara in 1957. In Los Angeles, June Wayne, with a grant from the Ford Foundation, established Tamarind Lithography Workshop in 1960.³ Each of these workshops had its own character and objectives. At Tamarind, a primary goal was the training of a new generation of master printers who, in concert with "artists of diverse styles . . . [might] restore the prestige of lithography by actually creating a collection of extraordinary prints."⁴

Reginald Pollack, however, had come to believe that collaborative lithographic workshops were caught up in a "quagmire of lithographic technology" that caused art to lose its spontaneity. "It was the technology that was of interest, rather than the work of art."⁵ This conclusion (which would be contradicted by history) caused Pollack to seek simpler ways to make prints. Soon after returning from Paris to New York, he began work with the printer Martin Levitt, who introduced him to the Multilith process, a form of offset lithography that makes use of plastic-impregnated, paper-base plates.

Pollack worked with Levitt to create a suite of small black-and-white and color lithographs, "Interiors and Exteriors," later boxed and distributed by the Peridot Gallery. Meanwhile, over lunches in New York, Pollack had conversations with Tom Hess, editor of ArtNews magazine; Walter Bareiss, a noted collector; and journalist Kermit Lansner about the possible ways to stimulate use of lithography by other New York artists. Had it come to fruition, the project they discussed—"Editions New York"—would have involved collaboration between artists and poets (and was thus parallel in intention to the portfolio 21 Etchings and Poems, a historic publishing project begun in 1951 and completed in 1960).⁶

Precisely because of its lack of technical complexity, Pollack saw the Multilith process as an ideal means for such collaborations. In Multilith printing there are few technical barriers: what the artist draws or the poet writes appears just as drawn or written, without reversal of the image.⁷ "We were tilling the ground," Pollack remembers, "but nothing came of our conversations. The interest was there, the spirit was there, but the mechanism was not."⁸

It was then that Pollack met Jules Sherman, a printer whose commercial business, Drum Lithographers, was located on East Twentieth Street in Manhattan.⁹ As Pollack had not been satisfied with the small size of the plates on which he and Levitt had worked, he was delighted to discover that Sherman was able (by special order) to secure larger ones:

[Sherman] was interested in my research to create prints, and offered his friendship and his presses. In the course of that year, using the larger paper plates, I created a suite of prints with the poet John Hollander. They were done in my studio; John would write on the plates, the poetry, and I did drawings and washes. The suite was entitled "A Beach Vision" and was never put on the market.¹⁰

For Jules Sherman, the collaboration with Pollack—and soon with other artists—provided a welcome break from business: "My shop, commercial during the week, was transformed into a joyous atelier on weekends, where the magic of creating prints transcended commercialism."¹¹ They began work early, usually at six o'clock in the morning. "At the end of each day's work," Pollack remembers, "we were all hot, dirty, and fired with the sense of doing something important." Because few of the artists visited the pressroom ("only those who were most curious about the process"),¹² there was little direct interaction between the artists and the printer.¹³ "We provided the artists with instructions about the plates and about the transparent inks used in lithography, but nothing was proofed; the plate went on the press, and that was it.”¹⁴ Whether in black and white or in colors, the plates were printed as drawn, without change or corrections.

As a means to distribute the lithographs, Sherman and the Pollack brothers decided to form a new corporation, Collectors Graphics, Inc., and to invite a number of artists—including some who were represented by Peridot Gallery—to make lithographs. They hired artist Joel Goldblatt to serve as a liaison: “He would visit artists’ studios and go over the technical requirements with them, then, a week or two (or three) afterwards, [he] would collect the plates and deliver them to the press.” After printing, Goldblatt would return the completed editions to the artist for signature.

We concentrated on artists who were being pushed aside in the ferment of the abstract expressionist heyday, and the bulk of the art we chose was figurative. . . . Lou persuaded Milton Avery to do a color print; Drum also did a three-color print for Jacques Lipchitz, which was donated to the State of Israel.¹⁵ I contacted and invited Larry Rivers, Marisol, Fairfield Porter, and others to contribute.

More than 100 editions were soon completed, and on 17 April 1961 an initial exhibition was presented at the Peridot Gallery. The announcement stressed the “new technique of lithography” that had been employed in the making of the prints, a point widely echoed in reviews of the exhibition.¹⁶ Writing in Village Voice, Suzanne Kiplinger spoke of the “vigor and spontaneity” of the prints:

[They] make one realize with relief that, after all, vigorous drawing hasn’t disappeared, it’s simply submerged for the moment. As one who enjoys rehearsals, sketches, run-throughs—anything in its nascent, budding state—I recommend this exhibit to others who have grown a little tired of full orchestrations.¹⁷

Clearly, it was this quality of improvisation that most attracted many of the artists who participated in the project:

Highly personalized prints resulted. Fairfield Porter enjoyed the entire concept, an approach that allowed maximum spontaneity and a freedom comparable to drawing in his own sketchbooks. He liked the loose, fingerprinted, almost haphazard look of the finished lithograph. The direct quality of the medium, the paper plates, made it possible for him to select the best drawings.¹⁸

In November 1962, a number of editions were purchased by Vincent Price as an agent for Sears, which advertised them for sale as “Collector’s Contemporary Graphics at Attractive Prices.” Price, an astute and informed collector, wrote in a foreword: “Art is meant for everyone, and now can be bought at Sears by everyone. I have personally selected every item offered. . . .”¹⁹ Jules Sherman estimates that roughly half of the lithographs produced at Drum Lithographers were sold either to Sears or other volume purchasers.²⁰

A second exhibition of the prints published by Collectors Graphics was held at Peridot in December 1963. It included works by twenty-six artists who, the gallery announced, “were selected on the basis of their drawing ability. . . . The styles and subjects range from Reginald Pollack’s humorous and metaphorical renderings of puppeteers, to Milton Avery’s broadly blocked landscape.”²¹ The reviewer for the Herald Tribune thought the prints “more spontaneous and free than more difficult lithography on stone. Large color prints by Freilicher, Hillsmith, Frasconi and Cicero have the lively quality of watercolors.”²² Writing in ArtNews, Valerie Petersen praised Frasconi, who “lets himself forget his stringent sense of design and opens up unlabored forms, crowded and turbulent.”²³

The 1963 exhibition proved to be the project’s swan song. Reginald Pollack had moved to Los Angeles during 1963, and in his absence, Sherman says, “the energy collapsed. When Reggie said, I’m leaving, I said, okay, that’s it. It had been great fun—a love-making project with no commercial implications—but it was over and done with.”²⁴ By 1965, Louis Pollack’s health was deteriorating, and in December of that year, he consigned the remaining lithographs to the F.A.R. Gallery, where they would be sold as the “Collectors Graphics Collection”;²⁵ later, he sold Peridot to Joan Washburn.²⁶

In the past thirty years the lithographs included in this exhibition have been little known and little seen, eclipsed by the larger, more complex lithographs that came from the presses at Tamarind, U.L.A.E., and other workshops across the country. Today, however, as we look at them anew, we are struck by their immediacy: by the “exemplary lyric economy” of Mary Frank’s linear drawings;²⁷ the lively expressionism of Jane Freilicher’s landscapes; the force of Robert Goodnough’s tangled time-and-motion studies; the power of James Brooks’s brush drawing; the “extraordinary facility” of David Levine’s Animal Kingdom;²⁸ and by many other accomplished and fresh statements. Taken together, there can be no question but that these vibrant lithographs constitute an important (and too long neglected) chapter in the history of American lithography.

NOTES

1. Sherman to Adams, 17 June 1994. I express my gratitude to Jules Sherman and Reginald Pollack for their generous (and indispensable) assistance in the writing of this essay.
2. Lieberman had multiple interests in the field. As a director of the Print Council of America, he was closely associated with Theodore J. H. Gusten, its executive secretary. Gusten was simultaneously Director of the International Graphic Art Society (IGAS), which commissioned and distributed editions of prints by American and European artists, and a member of the Pratt Graphic Art Center's advisory board. Also a member of that board, Lieberman sought Ford Foundation support (through diversion of funds from Tamarind to Pratt) for a program to bring French master printers to New York.
3. See Clinton Adams, American Lithographers, 1900-1960: The Artists and Their Printers (Albuquerque: University of New Mexico Press, 1983), pp. 182-206.
4. June Wayne, "To Restore the Art of the Lithograph in the United States," a proposal submitted to the Program in Humanities and the Arts of the Ford Foundation, 1959.
5. Pollack, in a telephone interview with Joan Ludman, 8 August 1979. I thank Joan Ludman for providing a transcript of this interview.
6. See Lanier Graham, "The Rise of the Livre d'Artiste in America: Reflections on 21 Etchings and Poems and the Early 1960s," Tamarind Papers 13 (1990): 35-40.
7. As in all offset printing, the image is twice reversed: once upon transfer to an intermediary "blanket," and again upon transfer to the paper. It thus appears on the paper as the artist draws it on the plate, without the mirror-image reversal encountered in other forms of printmaking.
8. Pollack, in telephone conversation with Adams, 23 July 1994.
9. James Thompson has mistakenly written that the Drum lithographs were printed by "a commercial printer in New York City [Sherman] who invited artists to visit his home on Long Island in the early 1960s and use the lithographic facilities he had there" (Thompson, in the exhibition catalogue, Undereposed [Cullowhee, N.C.: Department of Art, Western Carolina University, 1992], p. 1). Sherman confirms that all of the lithographs were printed at Drum Lithographers in Manhattan and that his work with Pollack began early in 1960. Each lithograph was assigned a Collectors Graphics number, beginning with seven prints by Carmen Cicero, four of which are dated 1960.
10. Pollack to Adams, 4 June 1994. Except as otherwise noted, all quotations are from this letter.
11. Sherman to Adams, 17 June 1994.
12. Pollack, in telephone conversation with Adams, 23 July 1994.
13. Sherman and Pollack remember that Harvey Dinnerstein, David Levine, Jacques Lipchitz, Paul Resika, and Alvin Ross were among those who came to the pressroom.
14. Sherman, in telephone conversation with Adams, 26 July 1994.
15. Lipchitz made a total of three lithographs at Drum.
16. In fact, American artists had made original, hand-drawn, offset lithographs since the 1930s. Jean Charlot's Picture Book (1933) was printed by Will and Lynton Kistler in Los Angeles; the following year, while teaching at the Florence Cane School in New York, Charlot acquired a Multilith press and, together with Albert Carman and Emilio Amero made a number of Multilith prints (1934-35); the historic portfolio published by American Abstract Artists (1937) was printed on the Cane School press. Carman subsequently printed many color offset prints for "The Artists Color Proof Associates" (ca. 1936-41) and for Marc Chagall's The Tales from the Arabian Nights (1945). In San Francisco, Richard Diebenkorn (and others) made lithographs for the portfolio Drawings (1948), printed by Multilith. See Adams, American Lithographers (cited n. 3), and Janet Flint, Art for All: American Print Publishing Between the Wars (Washington: Smithsonian Institution, 1980).
17. Village Voice, 27 April 1961.
18. Joan Ludman, Fairfield Porter: A Catalogue Raisonné of His Prints, Including Illustrations, Bookjackets, and Exhibition Posters (Scarsdale, N.Y.: Highland House, 1981), p. 16.
19. Price wrote: "We're really tremendously thrilled at having these [lithographs] to add to the collection and I just wanted you to know how really wonderful you were about everything" (Price to Louis and Reginald Pollack, 9 November 1962).
20. According to Sherman, the Rock-Hill-Uris Group, a hotel chain, purchased "several thousand prints" on 12 October 1961. Sears made payment of $53,531.50 for 3,540 impressions on 19 November 1962. Editions purchased by Sears included Carmen Cicero, Abstraction; Robert Goodnough, The Chief; David Levine, Coney Island; Reginald Pollack, Old Man at Table, Mario as Arab, Still Life with Garlic, and Actor; 3/4 View; Paul Resika, Seated Girl; and Larry Rivers, Webster (sales catalogue published by Sears, 1964).
21. Transcript of announcement on WNEW-TV, 30 December 1963.
22. Unsigned review, New York Herald Tribune, 14 December 1963.
23. "Collector's [sic] Graphics, Inc.," ArtNews 62 (December 1963): 55.
24. Sherman sold Drum Lithographers in 1970.
25. Letter of agreement between Collectors Graphics, Inc., and F.A.R. Gallery, Inc., 28 December 1965. I thank Joan T. Washburn and Jay Grimm for making available this letter and other materials contained in the Peridot Gallery scrapbooks.
26. Louis Pollack (b. 1921) died in 1970.
27. Hilton Kramer, quoted in Undereposed (cited n. 9), p. 5.
28. Undereposed, p. 11.

MILTON AVERY, Landscape, color lithograph, 22 x 27 3/4.

ROSEMARIE BECK, Violinist Sketches, lithograph, 12 3/4 x 10.

JANICE BIALA, Interior, lithograph, 12 1/2 x 10.

JAMES BROOKS, Black and White, lithograph, 10 x 14.

CARMEN CICERO, Bird Lives (1960), lithograph, 9 x 13.

MARY FRANK, Woman Figure, lithograph, 10 x 12 3/4.

ANTONIO FRASCONI, Field of Scrap (1963), color lithograph, 29 x 23.

JANE FREILICHER, Landscape, lithograph, 23 x 28 3/4.

PAUL GEORGES, Winter Landscape (1963), color lithograph, 22 1/2 x 28.

JOEL GOLDBLATT, Still Life with Dark and Light, lithograph, 13 5/8 x 10.

ROBERT GOODNOUGH, Horseman [Black & Sepia], color lithograph, 23 x 29.

BURT HASEN, Face Constellation (1963), lithograph, 28 x 21 1/4.

JOHN HELIKER, Self-Portrait, lithograph, 12 5/8 x 9 5/8.

WOLF KAHN, Nude, Head Thrown Back, lithograph, 10 x 14.

ALEX KATZ, Double Portrait [Ada], lithograph, 10 x 12 1/8.

DAVID LEVINE, Animal Kingdom (1963), color lithograph, 17 1/4 x 29.

JACQUES LIPCHITZ, Title Unknown, lithograph, 27 x 20 3/4.

MARISOL, Foot and Faces (1961), lithograph, 13 1/8 x 10.

RICHARD MAYHEW, Trees, lithograph, 10 x 12 3/4.

MICHAEL MAZUR, Untitled [Adult Holding a Child with Book], lithograph, 23 x 29.

RICHARD MAYHEW, Trees, lithograph, 10 x 12 3/4.

MICHAEL MAZUR, Untitled [Adult Holding a Child with Book], lithograph, 23 x 29.

MARK MCAFEE, You Will Never Catch Me, color lithograph, 28 x 23.

WALTER TANDY MURCH, Bricks, lithograph, 23 x 19.

CONSTANTINE NIVOLA, Two People in Bed (1963), color lithograph, 29 x 23.

PHILIP PEARLSTEIN, Landscape, lithograph, 23 1/8 x 29.

REGINALD POLLACK, Landscape with Clouds, lithograph, 9 7/8 x 12 3/4.

FAIRFIELD PORTER, Child Writing [Lizzie Drawing], lithograph, 10 x 14.

PAUL RESIKA, Child Playing with Top (1963), lithograph, 14 x 10.

LARRY RIVERS, Webster (1961), lithograph, 21 x 28.

ALVIN ROSS, Fishing on the Arno, color lithograph, 23 x 28 7/8.

TOBIAS SCHNEEBAUM, Jungle [Black], lithograph, 29 x 23.

BURTON SILVERMAN, Toledo at Nightfall, color lithograph, 20 3/4 x 27 3/8.

REUBEN TAM, Monhegan Shoreline, lithograph, 22 1/2 x 28 5/8.

JANE WILSON, Landscape, color lithograph, 26 x 22.

CHECKLIST OF THE EXHIBITION

Dimensions are given in inches, height precedes width.

Milton Avery (1893-1965)

Landscape

color lithograph, 22 x 27 3/4
signed lower left and numbered 4/118
Courtesy of an anonymous private collection

Rosemarie Beck (b. 1923)

Violinist Sketches

lithograph, 12 3/4 x 10
signed lower right and numbered 30/85
Collectors Graphics #81

Janice Biala (b. 1903, Poland)

Interior

lithograph, 12 1/2 x 10
signed upper right and numbered 37/95
Collectors Graphics #175

James Brooks (1906-1992)

Black and White

lithograph, 10 x 14
signed lower right and numbered 73/75
Collectors Graphics #85

Carmen Cicero (b. 1926)

Bird Lives, 1960

lithograph, 9 x 13
signed upper right and numbered 68/85
Collectors Graphics #2

Mary Frank (b. 1933, England)

Hand

lithograph, 10 x 12 3/4
signed lower right and numbered 44/74
Collectors Graphics #187b

Mary Frank (b. 1933, England)

Woman Figure

lithograph, 10 x 12 3/4
signed lower right and numbered 61/67
Collectors Graphics #184

Antonio Frasconi (b. 1919, Uruguay)

Field of Scrap, 1963

color lithograph, 29 x 23
signed and dated lower right and numbered ed./109
Collectors Graphics #169

Jane Freilicher (b. 1924)

Landscape

lithograph, 23 x 28 3/4
signed lower right and numbered 26/97
Collectors Graphics #151

Jane Freilicher (b. 1924)

Landscape

color lithograph, 28 5/8 x 23
signed lower left and numbered 22/104
Collectors Graphics #168

Paul Georges (b. 1923)

Landscape

lithograph, 10 x 13
signed lower right and numbered 57/76
Collectors Graphics #181

Paul Georges (b. 1923)

Standing Child

color lithograph, 29 x 22 1/2
signed lower right and numbered 18/112
Collectors Graphics #149

Paul Georges (b. 1923)

Winter Landscape, 1963

color lithograph, 22 1/2 x 28
signed lower right and numbered 17/117
Collectors Graphics #139

Joel Goldblatt (b. 1923)

Still Life with Dark and Light

lithograph, 13 5/8 x 10
signed lower right and numbered 25/85
Collectors Graphics #15

Robert Goodnough (b. 1917)

Horse and Rider, 1960

lithograph, 10 x 14
signed lower right and numbered 69/85
Collectors Graphics #18

Robert Goodnough (b. 1917)

Horseman [Black & Sepia]

color lithograph, 23 x 29
signed lower right and numbered 35/75
Collectors Graphics #22

Robert Goodnough (b. 1917)

Nomads, 1960

lithograph, 10 x 14
signed lower right and numbered 68/85
Collectors Graphics #17

Burt Hasen (b. 1921)

Face Constellation, 1963

lithograph, 28 x 21 1/4
signed lower right and numbered 25/104
Collectors Graphics #138

John Heliker (b. 1909)

Landscape

lithograph, 10 x 12 3/4
signed lower right and numbered 84/90
Collectors Graphics #178

John Heliker (b. 1909)

Self-Portrait

lithograph, 12 5/8 x 9 5/8
signed lower right and numbered in blue pencil 70/85
Collectors Graphics #26

Wolf Kahn (b. 1927, Germany)

Nude, Head Thrown Back

lithograph, 10 x 14
signed lower left and numbered 69/85
Collectors Graphics #84

Alex Katz (b. 1927)

Double Portrait [Ada]

lithograph, 10 x 12 1/8
signed lower right and numbered 69/85
Collectors Graphics #32

David Levine (b. 1926)

Animal Kingdom, 1963

color lithograph, 17 1/4 x 29
signed upper right and numbered 19/105
Collectors Graphics #157

David Levine (b. 1926)

Fat Girl, 1963

lithograph, 17 5/8 x 13 1/8
signed and dated upper right and
numbered 110/122
Collectors Graphics #133

Jacques Lipchitz (1891-1973, Lithuania)

Title Unknown

lithograph, 27 x 20 3/4
signed lower right and annotated artist's proof
Courtesy of an anonymous private collection

Jacques Lipchitz (1891-1973, Lithuania)

Title Unknown

lithograph, 24 x 19
signed lower right and annotated artist's proof
Courtesy of an anonymous private collection

Marisol [Escobar] (b. 1930, France)
Foot and Faces, 1961
lithograph, 13 1/8 x 10
signed lower right and numbered 68/85
Collectors Graphics #72

Richard Mayhew (b. 1924)
Trees
lithograph, 10 x 12 3/4
signed lower left and numbered 19/89
Collectors Graphics #207

Michael Mazur (b. 1935)
Figure Group
lithograph, 23 x 28 3/4
signed lower right and numbered 48/88
Collectors Graphics #154

Michael Mazur (b. 1935)
Untitled [Adult Holding a Child with Book]
lithograph, 23 x 29
unsigned and unnumbered, edition of 85
Collectors Graphics #145

Mark McAfee
You Will Never Catch Me
color lithograph, 28 x 23
signed lower right and numbered 35/112
Collectors Graphics #141

Walter Tandy Murch (1907-1967, Canada)
Bricks
lithograph, 23 x 19
signed lower right and annotated artist's proof
Collectors Graphics #68
Courtesy of an anonymous private collection

Constantine Nivola (1911-1988, Sardinia)
Two Beds, 1963
color lithograph, 28 7/8 x 22
signed in plate, dated and numbered 16/125
Collectors Graphics #144

Constantine Nivola (1911-1988, Sardinia)
Two People in Bed, 1963
color lithograph, 29 x 23
signed center and numbered 16/127
Collectors Graphics #131

Philip Pearlstein (b. 1924)
Landscape
lithograph, 23 1/8 x 29
signed lower right and numbered 69/75
Collectors Graphics #69, Landwehr #1

Reginald Pollack (b. 1924)
Connecticut Landscape
lithograph, 10 x 12 3/4
signed lower right and
numbered 44/55
Collectors Graphics #187

Reginald Pollack (b. 1924)
Landscape with Clouds
lithograph, 9 7/8 x 12 3/4
signed lower right and numbered 20/65
Collectors Graphics #176

Reginald Pollack (b. 1924)
Southampton Beach
lithograph, 10 x 12 7/8
signed lower right and
numbered 56/80
Collectors Graphics #185

Fairfield Porter (1907-1975)
Child Writing [Lizzie Drawing]
lithograph, 10 x 14
signed lower right and numbered 76/85
Collectors Graphics #94, Ludman #12

Fairfield Porter (1907-1975)
Snow Landscape
lithograph, 8 1/2 x 13
signed lower left and numbered 30/85
Collectors Graphics #87, Ludman #14

Paul Resika (b. 1928)
Child, 1963
lithograph, 12 3/4 x 10
signed lower right, dated and
numbered 36/82
Collectors Graphics #192

Paul Resika (b. 1928)
Child Playing with Top, 1963
lithograph, 14 x 10
signed lower right, dated and
numbered 105/111
Collectors Graphics #206

Paul Resika (b. 1928)
Seated Child, 1963
lithograph, 12 3/4 x 10
signed lower right, dated and
numbered 74/80
Collectors Graphics #191

Paul Resika (b. 1928)
Standing Boy
lithograph, 14 x 10
unsigned and unnumbered
Collectors Graphics #205

Larry Rivers (b. 1923)
Webster, 1961
lithograph, 21 x 28
signed and dated in the stone, lower right
Courtesy of James Goldman

Alvin Ross (1920-1975)
Fishing on the Arno
color lithograph, 23 x 28 7/8
signed lower right and numbered 35/86
Collectors Graphics #163

Tobias Schneebaum (b. 1921)
Jungle [Black]
lithograph, 29 x 23
signed lower right and numbered 16/98
Collectors Graphics #153

Burton Silverman (b. 1928)
Retired
lithograph, 14 x 10
signed lower right and
numbered 42/60
Collectors Graphics #77

Burton Silverman (b. 1928)
Toledo at Nightfall
color lithograph, 20 3/4 x 27 3/8
signed lower right and numbered 29/120
Collectors Graphics #158

Reuben Tam (b. 1916, Hawaii)
Monhegan Shoreline
lithograph, 22 1/2 x 23 5/8
signed lower right, titled and
numbered 55/71
Collectors Graphics #114

Reuben Tam (b. 1916, Hawaii)
Surf
lithograph, 22 1/2 x 28 5/8
signed lower right, titled and
numbered 39/53
Collectors Graphics #115

Jane Wilson (b. 1924)
Landscape
color lithograph, 26 x 22.
signed lower right and annotated artist's proof
Collectors Graphics #124
Courtesy of an anonymous private collection

ADVISORY COMMISSION MEMBERS

Freddie Bittenbender
Christopher N. Breiseth, Ph.D.
Joseph T. Butkiewicz
Lou C. Conyngham
Marian M. Conyngham
Mary Lee Cuscela
Virginia C. Davis
Doris Fordham
Stanley I Grand, Ph.D.
Robert J. Heaman, Ph.D.
Sylvia A. Hughes
Keith A. Hunter, Esq.
Anne Marie Kennedy
Susannah Kent
J. Michael Lennon, Ph.D.
Melanie Maslow Lumia
Ken Marquis
Constance R. McCole
Hank O'Neal
Arnold Rifkin
Kim Ross, Chair
Charles A. Shaffer, Esq.
William Shull
Helen Farr Sloan
Andrew J. Sordoni, III
Sanford B. Sternlieb, M.D.
Diane M. Ushinski

STAFF

Stanley I Grand, Ph.D., Director
Nancy L. Krueger, Coordinator
Earl W. Lehman, Preparator

Donna Bytheway, Gallery Attendant
Shellene Dixon, Gallery Attendant
Joanna Hagan, Gallery Attendant
Marybeth Jenkins, Gallery Attendant
Paula Lettiere, Gallery Attendant
Deborah Tibel, Gallery Attendant

