Mr. George Elliot

George Elliot has been appointed Chairman of the Evaluation Committee, and has the responsibility of seeing that all phases of the evaluation are completed for the visiting accreditors. All the faculty and the administration are assigned to groups to each evaluate and report upon a phase of college activity. Mr. Elliot in his statement below enlists your support for the alumni report.

Self Evaluation: A Challenge, An Opportunity

The next year and one-half promises to be a period of bustling activity and progressive change here at Wilkes College. It will be a time when faculty members are investigating and discussing one another's responsibilities and achievements; when the library, the budget, the curriculum, the athletic policy, and all other phases of college life are subject to rigorous examination and review. It will be a time to find out current student opinion as to the strength and weaknesses of our constitution. It will be a time when we will call upon you, the alumni, for help in making the Wilkes College of the future a stronger and better school.

Our project is institutional self-evaluation, an analysis of Wilkes' total educational effectiveness made by its own staff, its students and its alumni — the people best qualified to do it and to whom it means the most. Our purpose is to give each of us a clearer concept of what we want Wilkes College to be, to make a realistic appraisal of our past and present performance, to devise plans for overcoming our difficulties and to try to stimulate a new surge of common effort to develop and improve our school. The challenge is ours; it is equally yours!

A real self-evaluation is a major enterprise which can be abundantly rewarding. Its results, however, are directly proportional to two things: (a.) the honesty and candor of the inquiry — its aim must really be to understand, evaluate, and improve; not to defend; and (b.) the extent to which all of us are drawn seriously into the project. I can assure you that each of your former teachers is entering into this program with enthusiasm and with sincerity. I trust that you too will demonstrate an equal enthusiasm and sincerity when your opinions and suggestions are solicited by the alumni office.

Wilkes College stands today as a testimonial to the vision, the devotion, and the cooperative efforts of many people in the community, on the faculty, and within the student body. Its achievements have been many; its reputation is secure and wide-spread; and its potentiality for progress has been well demonstrated. It is with pride, but it is also with humility and a continuing sense of dedication that we now look toward the future.

Homecoming a Rousing Success

Maximum Crowd Attends All Events

There is no doubt that the 11th Annual Homecoming was a complete success in the minds of everyone who attended. It was the best attended, and had the fullest program of any yet conceived on our campus. From Friday night's Homecoming displays until the end of the Saturday night informal dance, the alumni were completely engrossed in a schedule of festive activities. The football team made the weekend 100 per cent successful with an 8-0 victory over Ursinus.

Co-chairmen of the Homecoming Program Gifford Cappellini and Donald Honeywell are to be commended for their thorough planning of the Homecoming weekend. This year, over 400 alumni returned for Homecoming. The program has become so successful that the problem of our local group is where to hold the affairs next year. We have taxed all of the available facilities to the limit.

Homecoming decorations were again won by Gore Hall. Since the was the third time in succession, the trophy was retired permanently and presented to them. The best car decoration in the student parade prior to the game was won by Skip Gladston, '62. The 1958 Homecoming Queen was Mary Jean Broody, and the Princesses were Barbara Federer and Mary Louise Spinelli.

Over 200 alumni attended the Friday night warm-up party which was its usual success. The party was moved to a larger room in the Kingston House because of the increase in attendance. Many long-lost faces were seen and welcomed back into the fold. This party continues to be the most talked about and most successful.

Dr. and Mrs. Farley graciously offered to be hosts for a Coffee Hour in their home on Saturday morning. Over 50 alumni and friends attended and had a fine time chatting with the Farleys and many of their classmates. The alumni were served by members of the Theta Delta Rho — the Wilkes College sorority.

Members of the Executive Council of the Alumni Association met at 12:00 noon on Saturday, October 18, to discuss our current program and plan for the future activities of the association. Fourteen members were present and helped shape our policy for the coming year. The council discussed the report of the Constitution Committee and the Alumni Fund Report. Also discussed were the Graduation Award, Alumnus Magazine, Chapter Activities, Past-President Awards and the coming re-evaluation of Wilkes College in 1960. Action was taken on the Graduation Award by passing a recommendation that a $50 cash gift be given to the outstanding graduate along with the traditional pin that the Alumni Association has been giving.

An overflowing crowd at our Saturday evening informal dance witnessed the honor given to our Past-Presidents when they were awarded plaques in appreciation of their services to the association. The award read:

Thomas E. Brislin	1953
William Luetzel	1954-55
Gifford Cappellini	1957

Perhaps the true measure of a successful program is indicated by individuals who take time to personally express their views about a program. Not once, not twice, but countless times, members of the alumni who returned home for Homecoming expressed their views of "a complete success" — "the best we've ever had" to members of the various committees. We are happy to hear these statements for our plans are made with your satisfaction in mind.

TEA AT FARLEYS — Dr. and Mrs. Farley are shown playing host to members of the Alumni Association in their home during Homecoming weekend. Over fifty alumni attended the registration on Saturday morning.

Members of the Executive Council are shown above at their luncheon meeting discussing the Alumni Association's future activities. The Council consists of all Past Presidents of the Association, chapter heads, fund chairmen, and the current officers. The meeting was presided over by Joseph J. Savitz, Alumni President.

CLASS REUNIONS

Forty alumni and guests attended the first Class Reunions held by the Alumni Association at the Irem Temple Country Club on Saturday, October 18.

Members of the classes of '38, '43, '48 and '53 met at an informal dinner in a private dining room of the Country Club.

Dr. and Mrs. Farley were guests of the classes holding their reunions. Dr. Farley entertained the group with stories of the early trials and tribulations of the College and thanked them for their continued interest and support.

Reverend Reuben Rader, Dr. William Myers and Attorney Joseph J. Savitz gave brief words of welcome to their classmates and enjoined them to plan to return again in 1963 for their next reunions.

There was no official program. The Executive Alumni Secretary thanked Dr. Myers, Attorney Savitz, and William Morgan for their aid in setting up the program for their classes. The rest of the evening was spent in reminiscing and much opening of wallets to display prized family pictures.

Dr. Farley, dinner guest of the reunioning classes at the Irem Temple Country Club, is caught telling one of his humorous tales of the early days of the College to members of the classes. Over 40 alumni returned to their class reunions which were held this year for the first time.

Shown below, at the speakers table, are: Russ Picton, Executive Alumni Secretary; Mrs. Farley, Dr. Farley, Rayne Devin, and Joseph J. Savitz.

Students — The Heart of the Matter

By George Ralston, Dean of Men

Yes, I'm still here; older, if not wiser, vigorous enough and dutifully grateful to extend heartfelt greetings and best wishes to alumni everywhere.

When Wilkes invited me in 1946, there was little to suggest that thirteen very exciting years were in the offing. The time has passed as quickly and as pleasantly as a sweet dream. Possibly the world without, this era at Wilkes has been one of unimagined growth in the relationships that have meant a rich harvest in experience that has made life richer, fuller, and more useful. Those of us who have enjoyed the work and play at Wilkes for so many years have the knowledge that love is not merely an emotion or simply an idea. It is a purpose and a mission. Love is not a volitional flirtation with the thing it adores; it marries it and produces a family.

The Wilkes family is civilization — considered in all its aspects. It is wonderful — and our family is growing.

We are still here, and we say as did Daniel Webster, "It is, Sir, a small college, but we love it." John Gould, too, in his delightful essay entitled "And One to Grow On," states our case very aptly as he tells about the minister who asked all in the congregation who wanted to go to Heaven to rise. All but one man rose. Then the minister asked those who wanted to go to Hell to stand. Nobody rose. The puzzled parson stared down at the non-cooperator and asked where he wanted to go. "Nowhere," came the reply. "I like it here." And so do we. We love it, have married it, and are producing families.

Of all our families, the student family has been, is, and always will be the most important. Students are our raison d'être. In a little more than a decade we have met and come to know approximately four thousand Colonels. The privilege of working with students is unsurpassed for its savory, succulent, interesting goodness. Possibly, in every aspect, our students during the past decade have represented the full circle. In their being and in their aspirations they have traced the gamut of young human endeavor. Though we have access to few factual studies of our students other than those related to academic fare, it is probably safe to say that we could identify, with the journalistic pundits, those of our students who are of the so-called "Decade of Decision," the "Anti-Intellectual," the "Beat Generation," the "No-Nonsense Kids," etc. All of this is to say that our decade of students has reflected the times. Who can say exactly that this is true? We can but reflect and suppose that these labels have been applicable.

In the early days following the war our students were eager for "life" and education. They were in college following the arid and austere days of military effort. Their bent was for a fast education, and along with it they slaked their appetite on recreation which had been missed. Almost without knowing it they "lived it up," got their education, and entered the world of work as soon as possible. They made hurried decisions.

Then came a wave of so-called anti-intellectualism. (With the traditional dedication to high ideals of academic achievement which has prevailed at Wilkes, one can scarcely believe that this tag was prominent here. It is reasonable to believe that those who wore it did not long remain.) The depreciation of intelligence, the ridicule of the intellectual was the stock in trade of the demagogue, and McCarthy and his ilk permeated student bodies.

They are writing now about the "Beat Generation," and it is possible that we have seen it along with the despair of anti-intellectualism. In the individual student it is difficult to identify, but the traits are related and on the whole these tags may apply, for students reflected the disillusion and dissension of the times. Perhaps these slogans have come to the fore because students have lacked the deep inner conviction (they have not been convinced) that education in its broadest sense unlocks the door of our future, and that it gives us the tools without which "the pursuit of happiness" becomes a hollow chasing after triviality, a mindless boredom relieved only by the stimulus of sensationalism or quenched with a tranquilizer pill.

One outstanding trait of our students in 1958 is that they are scarcely acting at all like college students have been known to act. Those of us who have been a part of the scene over the years cannot decide to clap or wring our hands about the condition. We cannot decide whether today's students are dull, oblivious to all the potentially lethal chaos which lurks in the maze of world politics, economic paradoxes, and social riddles, or that he is simply more mature than his predecessors. It seems apparent, however, that a strange sort of cultural calm has settled over our students. We think this is good. Perhaps it is a "built-in" antibody for the protection of the species, or a sort of period for direction-finding before setting a course for the future.

Though our present students may seem passive as compared to those who have gone before, we are aware that they are not smug. Rather they are serious about the present demands that it is necessary to be brighter, more conscientious, and more in earnest than was required of students of former years. Competition looms larger than ever before, and it follows that our current students are aware of their academic records as never before. If alumni seem to remember a scramble for grades when they were in college, it is much more evident with today's crop of undergraduates. The gentleman "C" is not too respectable today. This seems to describe today's students — they are serious. Someone has labelled them the "No-Nonsense Kids."

Over the years as students have come and gone, we note that they have been and will continue to be a fine lot. It is one thing to evaluate what students have been like or what they now are, but it is more challenging to travel beyond the horizon and promote the "what ought to be." In this we as a faculty are solemnly engaged. This is a challenging venture which makes all education worth the try. Our purpose is not to produce either products or profits, but to improve the minds of students. The College exists for students, and as students change, as we have fleetingly ventured to describe, the mission of the College will be to meet the changes and still to press on toward the goals of ultimate benefit to all. We shall more and more encounter an increasingly great need for broadly educated men and women who have the intellectual ability and the moral convictions to make vital decisions. Our students will be required to have a command of the scientific and technological concepts of our world, and they will also need to know about the great moral, philosophical, and historical truth of mankind. Students and their experience with all these things, I submit, is our dedicated purpose at your alma mater.

As we go about our "day by day," we have fond memories of you who were here. We wish you well in all the interests dear to your hearts, and we summon your help to a joyous but strenuous and never-ceasing fight to strengthen your alma mater, understand it, work for it, give to it, and keep it constantly in your purposes.

Faculty Notes of interest

Vacationing in Europe

Mr. Elwood Disque and Miss Sylvia Dworski, language professors at Wilkes, spent the summer touring Europe. Both planned their itinerary to include a visit to the World's Fair in Brussels as a highlight of the trips.

Dr. and Mrs. Stanko Vujica also toured European countries this summer. They left for Europe in the early part of August after summer school finished.

Visited Canada

Dr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Bastress spent their vacation in Nova Scotia, Canada, this summer, visiting relatives.

Dr. John Doane, college physician, and his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Doane, Dean of Women at Wilkes, enjoyed a 10-day summer vacation touring Nova Scotia, Canada.

Within the 48

Dr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Farley spent their summer vacation touring the Adirondack Mountains in New York. They also visited with their son, Eugene S. Farley, Jr., and his family in Burlington, Vermont.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Chwalek spent their summer vacation in South Carolina.

Extended Research

Dr. and Mrs. Hoh-Cheung Mui spent the summer months at Yale University where they did additional work on their research project — "Tea Drinking Habit of the people in England."

Advanced Study

The following faculty members took advantage of the summer months to attend graduate schools and obtain credits toward higher degrees:

... Mr. Allen E. Bacon, Jr., Business Administration, attended Pennsylvania State University. He is working toward his Masters Degree.

... Mr. Arthur J. Hoover, Commerce and Finance, attended

Pennsylvania State University. He is working toward a Masters Degree in Education.

... Mr. John G. Reese, Physical Education, attended Pennsylvania State University. He is working toward a Masters Degree.

... Mr. Ronald D. Michman, Retailing, attended the New York University. He is working toward his Doctorate in Education.

... Mr. Benjamin F. Fiester, English, attended Bucknell University. He is working toward his Doctorate in Education.

... Mr. Robert E. Werner, Economics, attended the University of Wisconsin. He is working toward his Doctorate in Economics.

... Mr. John H. Hotson, Economics, attended U. of Pennsylvania, where he is working for his doctorate in economic theory.

Musical Comedy To Be Presented In December

On December 4, 5, 6 at Irem Temple the College will present its fourth musical comedy — the second in its affiliation with the Wilkes-Barre Kiwanis. The show is Irving Berlin's best seller, Annie Get Your Gun.

The association between the Wilkes-Barre Kiwanis and the college theater is just another indication of the warm relationship between the College and the community.

Last year Kiwanis sponsored three college shows and, as a service club interested in the welfare of community organizations, contributed the proceeds to the Boy Scouts to make capital improvements at Camp Acahela. This year the Wyoming Valley Girl Scouts will benefit.

Kiwanis support and generous community response made possible a program at the College that our budget could not fulfill and, in addition, gave opportunity to the students to perform before large audiences. The three shows were the musical comedy, Paint Your Wagon, in which the Wilkes Collegians strengthened their reputation as a major contributor to the activities program at the

Alfred S. Groh

College; Witness for the Prosecution, Agatha Christie's courtroom mystery melodrama; and Holiday, a comedy by Philip Barry. First-rate sets contributed by the Art Department assured the success of all three productions.

This year Kiwanis offered to sponsor a similar program. It was felt that until we had the necessary facilities to justify such an ambitious season the College would prepare one show — a musical. Again the production is under the supervision of Cue and Curtain and the sets under the direction of the Art Department. Since the musical is a college production, the cast has been selected from the male chorus, the mixed chorus, as well as from the theater membership. In the spring the theater will present Tiger at the Gates.

In keeping with our policy, a preview performance will be attended by area high school students. Last year's musical drew over 1000. We have already received a request from a high school in Newark for tickets to Annie.

The College is grateful to Kiwanis, a civic organization, many of whose members contribute individually to our scholarship program and gen-

Faculty Expanded for This Year

Wealth of Experience Added To College

Miss Roderick, instructor in elementary education, was graduated from Wilkes College in 1956 and later gained her Master's degree in Education at Columbia Teachers College.

Last year Miss Roderick taught in the Pennsbury school system located in Falsington, Penna. She presently resides at 128 Dagobert St., Wilkes-Barre.

Mrs. Elizabeth May, Mathematics Instructor, is the wife of E. Russell May, who is also a new member of the faculty. Mrs. May is a graduate of Purdue University where she received her Bachelor of Science degree in Mechanical Engineering. Mrs. May and her husband reside on Old River Road, Wilkes-Barre, with their two sons, ages eight and twelve.

E. Russell May is presently teaching freshman engineering and surveying at Wilkes. May previously taught for Penn State Extension and received his Master of Science in Mechanical Engineering from Purdue University.

Before coming to Wilkes, May was employed at the Dow Chemical Company and was a project engineer for General Electric. He is presently operating his own consulting engineers firm, which specializes in heating, air conditioning, and process engineering.

Chester Colson is now teaching in the Commerce and Finance department at Wilkes and is also assistant professor in the Art Education department. Colson received his Bachelor of Arts degree in Art Education from Columbia University.

Before coming to Wilkes, Colson held the position of an "In Service Teacher" in the Burlington, Vermont, School System. He is a member of the Philadelphia Water Society, and has had many one-man exhibitions throughout the United States, and he also spent one year traveling with an art show through Europe.

Colson resides with his family at 230 S. River St., Wilkes-Barre.

Martin Friedmann, a violinist with a rich background of training and experience, is presently teaching in the music department at Wilkes. Prior to accepting this assignment, Friedmann completed a year of advanced violin study in Vienna with Ricardo Odnoposoff. Friedmann began his musical education in Austria. In this country he attended the Goshen College in Indiana; received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the Juilliard School of Music, N.Y.

After his studies, teachings, and solo recitals, Friedmann traveled to Japan, India, Indonesia, Africa, Austria, and Europe, during which time he remained in Mussorie, India, for one year teaching music at the Woodstock School.

In addition to teaching at Wilkes, Friedmann is Assistant Conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra in Wilkes-Barre and also a member of the Philharmonic Quartet.

Friedmann is married to the former Laila Storch of Santa Rosa, California, a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Wilkes College Faculty Seminars Planned

The Alumni of Wilkes College need not be told about the broad and lively intellectual interests of our Faculty. Anyone who attended classes at Wilkes and took part in the campus life could not fail to be impressed with the spirit of disciplined and open-minded intellectual inquiry, so characteristic of our College. Yet, we hardly know of some other activities of our Faculty expressing the same determination to keep up with the intellectual currents of the times.

Our Faculty at Wilkes has been known for years as a capable and dedicated team always intellectually alert and ready to give their time and energy to any program that would provide them with an opportunity to enjoy a stimulating lecture or discussion.

Some of you may recall when some years ago, a number of the faculty members organized a discussion group, nicknamed humorously the "Groping Group" or simply: G. G., which gradually developed into a larger informal gathering and which had several successful discussion meetings devoted to various philosophical and scientific topics. The group was active throughout one academic year and was planning to continue its meetings. However, some changes on the Faculty, as well as the increasing responsibilities of some other members of the group, resulted in its temporary demise.

Last year, on the initiative of several members of the old group, but with a strong encouragement and support from many new members of the Faculty, a new and even more promising discussion group came into being under a more formal label of Wilkes College Faculty Seminar. The new group is somewhat differently conceived than the old G. G., but it partakes of the same spirit of intellectual adventure, interest in the new trends in science and in philosophy, and love for courteous and witty academic discourse.

The Faculty Seminar has already two successful meetings and is expecting to have ready for September a definite program of lectures and discussions. The group is not formally organized and has only one officer, a secretary whose duty it is to attend to the necessary details of its activities. However, for each meeting a presiding officer is elected in advance, and a speaker, or several speakers or discussants are chosen.

The first meeting of the Faculty Seminar was held on April 11. Dr. Frank J. J. Davies acted as a moderator and Dr. Konstantin Symmons was the speaker. The topic for the first meeting was appropriately broad and of general interest inasmuch as Dr. Symmons chose to discuss: Some Recent Comments and

Dr. Konstantin Symmons

Observations on American Culture and Personality.

After some remarks of methodological nature, the speaker presented an interesting survey of various theories interpreting the changing characteristics of American culture and of various attempts to assay American national character. He classified these theories and approaches under some five headings: 1. Historic-sophical approaches stressing the critical condition of the Western Civilization in general and the American culture in particular, earlier view of Spengler and more recent theories of Toynbee and, especially, Sorokin; 2. Psychiatric approaches diagnosing various problems of American society as symptoms of various serious social ills, the writings of such psychoanalytically-oriented authors as K. Horney, F. Alexander, E. Fromm, L. Frank and some others; 3. Various attempts to describe and to interpret American national character or personality types, the writings of anthropologists, sociologists and historians such as M. Mead, C. Kluckhohn, F. Hsu, G. Gorer, D. Riesman, D. M. Potter and some others; 4. Some segmental analyses of American society, such as M. Curti's American Paradox, B. Rosenberg and D. M. White's Mass Culture, Sorokin's American Sexual Revolution, and some others; 5. Some historical analyses of American Civilization stressing its unique features, such as recently published American Civilization by M. Lerner.

The limitation of time did not permit the speaker to discuss systematically more than the first two groups of theories. However, in the lively discussion that followed his lecture, he was able to make additional comments on some of those included in the three remaining groups, especially on works by Riesman and Lerner.

The meeting was attended by about twenty Faculty members and although no refreshments were served, the discussion lasted well into the evening.

The second meeting of the Faculty Seminar took place on May 9. Dr. K. Symmons acted as moderator and Dr. Samuel A. Rosenberg was the speaker. His topic was the field of labor-management disputes with which he is thoroughly familiar, not only in theory, but in practice as a popular mediator in local industrial disputes.

This touch of personal experience made Dr. Rosenberg's presentation vivid, realistic and very informal, so that after some half an hour, the lecture turned into a spontaneous and most interesting discussion of all the aspects of labor-management relations. There was a good attendance at the meeting, even though some of the active members were tied down elsewhere.

The program for the future activities of the group is being planned by an informal committee consisting of Dr. Davies, Dr. Vujica and Dr. Symmons.
