The Wilkes College Alumni Association was organized to stimulate interest in the welfare of Wilkes College and to foster good fellowship among its graduates, and friends. Every person who has completed at least 30 semester hours of work at Wilkes College and has terminated academic relations is accorded full membership in the Association. Students from Bucknell Junior College are accorded full membership on the same basis. The annual meeting of the Association is held during the Homecoming weekend at which time the officers for the following year are elected. In addition to the Annual meeting of the entire Association, the Executive Committee meets whenever it is deemed necessary to carry on the business of the organization. The officers that were elected at the annual meeting on October 27, 1967, are serving on the Executive Committee for this year. The complete committee is listed below:

President — William H. Tremayne '57
Executive Vice-President — Henry K. Goetzman '56

Vice-President, Region II — John S. Adams '65

The members of the Executive Committee are featured later in this issue of the Alumnus. The five members who do not have their pictures in this issue will be included in the next issue. No officer shall serve in the same office for more than two consecutive years.

The regional vice-president is a new office in accordance with the amendments that were adopted at the annual meeting on November 4, 1966. In the geographical areas of the east coast where we have the greatest concentration of Wilkes College Alumni, chapters have been set up. These chapters in turn are in a particular region. In this way it is possible for the regional vice-president who attends the Executive Committee meetings to keep his chapter Presidents and the Chapter membership informed of what is going on in the Association. With this structural setup the individual alumnus is kept better informed and has a closer affiliation with Wilkes College. Some of these chapters have already been organized to the extent that they have held meetings of an informal, social nature. The Alumni who have participated in these meetings feel that a couple of meetings a year would be beneficial. As fellow Alumni they have a common interest regardless of what year they graduated.

It is the hope of the Executive Committee that chapters and regions can be set up in other parts of the United States when there is sufficient interest for such groups. The twenty chapters that have already been set up have not all been organized since it takes time in order to find the alumni that are interested in this type of affiliation.

The five classes which participated in the Reunion Banquet this year elected new officers in accordance with the Amendments that were adopted at the Annual meeting on November 4, 1966.

The Class of 1937 elected the following:

President Joseph Donnelly
Vice-President Joseph Brislin

The Class of 1947 re-elected the same officers.

The Class of 1952:

The Class of 1957:

Communications is a big item in the work of any alumni association. The Alumnus is published three times a year. We have the meetings of the chapters and regions and the annual meeting of the entire Association. The Newsletter for the Executive Committee is sent out periodically. The President's Report is sent out near the beginning of each year with the comprehensive picture of the College.

Each year the Alumni conduct an annual Campaign. The money derived from these drives provides resources for the present students who would be unable to attend Wilkes College without this help. This is an opportunity for our graduates to help students in the same way that they were helped when they were attending Wilkes College. It is important for those who wish to participate, to contribute whatever amount is possible.

In the past, alumni seminars were held on campus to provide an educational experience for the graduates. These seminars provided information as well as insight to current problems within our society as well as the world at large. The Executive Committee hopes to renew these seminars in the spring of 1968. These previous seminars were successful and many inquiries have been made about renewing this program.

The Alumni Association is a national organization with the home office on Wilkes College campus. Almost 6000 Alumni are now scattered throughout the United States. When time permits and the interests are stimulated, local meetings will be held throughout the U. S. As reported elsewhere in this magazine, the Director of Alumni Relations met with a group of Alumni in Los Angeles, California, and another group in San Francisco while he was there in connection with other business. There is much that these informal group meetings can do for the individuals that are interested, for the College itself as far as the students today on Campus are concerned, and for future students. Each year students are recommended to the College by our alumni.

The Wilkes College Alumni Association can be just another group of people or it can become a very active and stimulating organization. It takes a great deal of time and effort on the part of many individuals in the form of concern and planning. You are a part of this organization because you attended Wilkes College for thirty hours or more. How active you are in the organization is entirely dependent upon you, but remember, Wilkes relies on you for support. Your Executive Committee is ready and willing to serve in any way possible. How can they serve you best?

Baltimore Chapter Meeting

This meeting was held on November 4, 1967, with John Scandale, the Chapter President, in charge. Sam Davenport and Dean Ralston were present, as well as Hank Goetzman, the Regional Vice-President. Thirty-nine newly purchased slides were shown with comments by Dean Ralston. Although only fourteen people were present, it was a good meeting and we have a beginning of an active Baltimore Chapter.

The following Alumni and guests were in attendance at this meeting: Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Sordoni '61, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Reed (Helen Krachenfels '56), John Scandale '58, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Weiss '42, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Stephens '52, Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Viti '51, Ira Himmel '60, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goetzman '50.

Binghamton Area

This meeting was scheduled for Friday night, November 17, 1967. Gary Popovich, the Chapter President, had called the meeting. Ken Fox, the Regional Vice-President, and Jody Morrison, the Regional Secretary, had worked with Gary in setting up the meeting. Walter Mohr, the Director of Development, arranged the program to discuss the current trends and projects for the future within the development phase of Wilkes. Ed

Wallison, the Director of Public Relations, also planned to attend. This meeting had to be cancelled temporarily due to a snow storm which made traveling difficult. This meeting is to be rescheduled and it is hoped that the enthusiasm of the Alumni in the area will carry over for this future meeting.

Washington, D. C. Area

Joe Popple, President of the Washington, D. C. Chapter, and Sam Lowe, President of the Virginia Suburbs Chapter, called a combined meeting of their chapters. Due to unforeseen circumstances many Alumni in the area were unable to attend. Hank Goetzman, Regional Vice-President, will be working again with Joe and Sam for a future meeting in the early spring. There is a lot of enthusiasm in the area and the three organizers feel that they can meet with success.

Los Angeles Area

A meeting was held at the Statler Hilton in Los Angeles on November 16. Sam Davenport, the Alumni Director, called the meeting in Los Angeles because he had a stopover there on his way to Honolulu where he attended the National Council for the Teachers of English. George Fry '48 and Jerry Shilian '54 did the leg work for Sam in setting up the meetings. Much reminiscing and discussion about Wilkes provided a good social gathering in addition to the showing of slides which gave the Californians an idea of how the Campus appears today. The following Alumni and guests were in attendance:

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bogdan '60, Mr. and Mrs. William Gino (Emilie Roat '60), Dan Metroka '56, George Fry '48, Mrs. Eleanor Pero (Nielsen '63), Mr. and Mrs. Sol Spears (Irene Kessler '43).

Honolulu

Prior to departing for Honolulu, we heard from Girard Finn '50, who is a Commander in the U. S. Navy and is stationed in Honolulu. Although we were unable to get together because of conflicting schedules, we were able to discuss our mutual interest in Wilkes College by way of the telephone. There are a total of three Alumni in the Hawaiian Islands at the present time.

San Francisco

This meeting was held near the San Francisco International Airport on November 28. As happens at every meeting of this type, Wilkes Alumni found former campus colleagues living close by. Get-togethers of various types were being arranged over the holidays.

George Batterson '56, made all of the arrangements for this meeting, but was unable to attend due to a death in the family. The Alumni who were present enjoyed the slide presentation and had many comments about the Campus, the Alumnus, and their participation within the Alumni Association. The following Alumni were in attendance:

Susan Young (Weigelt) '55, Roberta Kakes (Russell) '49, Dorothy Davenport (Feldmann) '58, Alice Yurchison '55, Jim Hollifield '50, Pat Shovlin '61, Bob Chew '61.

20th ANNUAL HOMECOMING

Wilkes College Alumni celebrated their 20th Annual Homecoming on Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28. The annual meeting of the association was held in the Center for the Performing Arts. Although the attendance was small, the necessary business was taken care of. Eugene Roth, the president of the Alumni Association, presided over the meeting. The nomination committee gave their report and the slate of officers was elected. Joe Savitz presented Gene Roth a past president's plaque on behalf of the Alumni Association in recognition of his service to the organization. Cue 'n' Curtain presented two one-act plays, The Still Alarm by George F. Kaufman and Recollections of Childhood by Alfred S. Groh. The Wilkes College band returned from the bonfire at Ralston Field in order to present a concert under the direction of William Gasbarro.

The students under the guidance of Student Government erected many displays throughout the campus. Over thirty displays were judged by the Alumni Committee, consisting of: George Murdock, chairman; Carl Urbanski, Nancy Lynn, William Mainwaring, and Roger Squier. They were accompanied by two of the student co-chairmen Maureen Flanley and John Mahon. The presentation of the trophies was during the half-time of the football game on Saturday. Following the business meeting and presentations at the Center for the Performing Arts, the alumni, faculty, and guests met in the Marco Polo Room for the warm-up party.

The Executive Committee met in the Board Room of Weckesser Hall at 10 a.m. on Saturday morning.

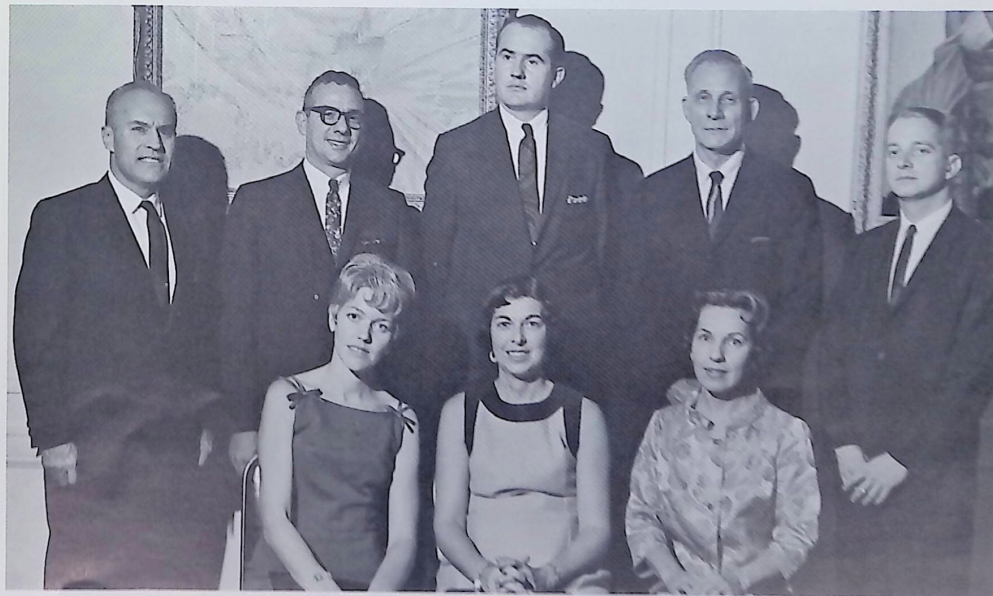

The main discussion of this meeting centered on the organization of the Alumni Chapters. The committee expressed concern about keeping the alumni informed about the activities of the association, about the College, and about fellow alumni.

Prior to the game, the student car caravan arrived at Ralston Field with the Homecoming Queen and her court. The Wilkes College alumni and fans overflowed the stands. They watched the champion Colonels defeat Haverford by a score of 69-0.

HOMECOMING HIGHLIGHTS

SUMMER AT WILKES

Every alumnus who has visited the College in recent years is aware of the physical changes that so visibly reflect the new dimensions of education at Wilkes. Curricular changes are, of course, much less obvious unless the alumnus has a professional interest in education or is in the process of examining for his own children various curricular offerings at institutions of higher education.

One of the less obvious changes that has taken place at the College is the rapid development of summer activity. For many years, the College summer program consisted of an eight-week late afternoon and evening schedule of classes in which the offerings were frequently limited to lower level undergraduate courses. Gradually there developed some graduate education courses offered in connection with the Temple University Graduate Program in General Education. In 1965, a seven-week summer institute for high school biology teachers was offered with the financial support of the National Science Foundation. This involved housing participants and their families in some of the College dormitories and provided support for maintaining food services during the seven weeks of the institute. At approximately the same time, the summer sessions of the College were expanded to include two six-week day sessions. An increasingly large enrollment of students from the area who were attending other schools but wished to move ahead in their program took summer courses at Wilkes. This expanded program also provided the opportunity for offering more advanced courses to our own students who wished to progress more rapidly in their programs and acquire more breadth in course areas they would not normally be able to experience because of the limitations of time in their own curriculum. The growth of these programs has been most satisfying and an increasing number of summer students reside in dormitories for this summer session. Obviously, the utilization of College facilities during the summer is a significant economic advantage and year round utilization of expensive facilities is most desirable. As the research programs have grown, an increasing number of faculty are in residence throughout the summer and more and more courses have been added to the curriculum. In recent summers, it has become apparent that Wilkes College can play a unique role in some of the Federally sponsored programs aimed at improving the elementary and secondary school programs. These range from programs to remedy gaps in educational background and motivate students who would normally not aspire to a higher education (upward bound); to programs for teachers; to programs for the stimulation of students' interests in fields normally foreign to the secondary school curriculum (theater arts and cultural enrichment). Wilkes has an ideal setting for group programs of this sort. Our dormitories make possible a complete range of housing facilities for either small groups in the individual homes to large groups housed in the new men's dormitory. Many of our faculty are uniquely qualified to deal in areas of value to teachers and students involved in such programs. The following articles provide a brief review of some of these programs and portend increasing activity in the College during the formerly quiet summer period:

Summer Sessions at Wilkes College

Robert Capin

The enactment of the G.I. Bill and the subsequent demands for additional education by returning World War II veterans necessitated the development of tri-mester schedules, including the summer months. Veterans accelerated their programs as much as possible because they were anxious to "make-up" the years away from home and get back into the "mainstream" of American society as quickly as possible. Needless to say, the facilities of the College were taxed to capacity.

When the veterans had completed their education, the pressure for summer classes diminished. During the summer, day classes were discontinued; however the eight-week evening session was continued and is presently in existence.

Again in the early 1960's there was a tremendous emphasis on the need for acquiring additional education, and the increasing numbers of students (the war-babies) required additional planning to meet these needs. In 1965, the administration and faculty agreed that a summer day school program, in addition to the eight-week evening session, should be established. This decision was based upon the following considerations:

1. Students would be able to accelerate their programs and thus embark upon their chosen profession or enter graduate school at an earlier date.
2. Students who changed their major would be given the opportunity to take the necessary make-up courses and thus graduate at the end of four years.
3. The College would have the opportunity to offer more pre-college courses in the various curricula.
4. Local students attending other colleges would be able to continue their education while they were home for the summer.
5. The physical plant of the College would be more efficiently utilized and the faculty would have the opportunity to earn additional income.

Thus, in the summer of 1965, the summer schedule was designed to provide two six-week sessions during the day and an eight-week evening session. Day classes were scheduled to meet five days per week, from 8:00 a.m. to 11:15 a.m. This schedule permitted students to attend classes in the morning and use the afternoons to prepare for the next class, work on a part-time basis, or enjoy a bit of summer relaxation.

In addition to the academic program, it was considered most desirable to establish a cultural program that would both stimulate and add some cohesiveness to the student body. A limited number of assemblies were scheduled, at which time outstanding speakers discussed important current topics. In addition, full-length movies were shown, and the Syracuse University Regent Theatre presented Shaw's Arms and the Man and As You Like It by Shakespeare.

The growth of the undergraduate summer program has more than justified the decision to undertake this venture. The following results speak for themselves.

SUMMER COLLEGE ENROLLMENT

	8-week Evening Session	1st six-week Day Session	2nd six-week Day Session	Individual Students*
1963	390			390
1964	405			405
1965	325	317	180	822
1966	341	488	371	1200
1967	351	584	432	1367

* A number of students attended all three sessions

As the College continues to grow, and the requests for more and varied courses increase, flexibility permits the College to adjust to changing demands and offer additional service to the students and to the community.

National Science Foundation

Francis Micheline

The National Science Foundation was charged by Congress in its enabling legislation to develop the scientific manpower potential of our country. A variety of programs has been developed through the cooperative efforts of the Foundation and institutions of higher education. Among these programs is the Summer Institutes program which provides financial support for participants and the operating costs of the institution for programs designed to communicate the new ideas and information that are so rapidly changing the teaching of science. The summer institute at Wilkes is designed to communicate the principles of modern biology to teachers who have, of necessity, been out of the day to day contact with the research happenings in their teaching field. In addition, the original academic background of many teachers was in areas that may well have no connection with their present teaching assignment. This is especially true in biology where frequently the physical education instructor was arbitrarily assigned to teach the science students.

Our summer institute was designed to provide a view of modern biology in a concentrated seven-week institute program. Five college faculty and two high school teachers constitute the instructional staff of the institute program. The initial week of the institute is primarily a review of the basic philosophical considerations of scientific method. A great deal of confusion in the student and lay person's mind concerning science lies in their lack of clear understanding of the methodology of science and the limitations which it arbitrarily imposes upon itself. The clarification of this basic philosophical area is most interesting. In our contemporary concern for applications of scientific knowledge, we lose sight of the tremendous upheaval and controversy caused by attempts to clarify these philosophical concerns. The question "How many angels can dance on the head of a pin?" appears ridiculous at first glance, and yet this was a question argued most heatedly during the early days of the development of scientific thought. The answer to this question involves a very clear delineation of the criteria the scientist must use before he can examine a question. It must be susceptible to observation, and experimentation with reproducibility of the results by any investigator a prime concern. To us, it appears obvious that this question cannot be answered in a scientific way but it could be debated endlessly by the philosopher whose thinking is not limited by the criteria established for the scientist in his work.

After this general introduction, our program has concentrated on lecture and laboratory work, upon modern understanding of microorganisms and disease. Microorganisms can be very effective in demonstrating many scientific principles, but high school teachers are frequently reluctant to utilize such experiments because of their own lack of familiarity with the technique necessary for safe handling of microorganisms in the laboratory. Consequently, much of the program consists of laboratory work as well as lectures in the general principles of microbiology.

The fourth and fifth weeks of the institute are devoted to the presentation of our modern understanding of chemistry and physiological mechanisms. Again, this is an area of rapidly expanding knowledge and understanding since a great deal of the contemporary research in biology is at the very basic molecular level of interpretation of biological phenomena. This is probably the most difficult area to progress in since many teachers lack any sound background in chemistry, physics, and mathematics. These three areas are intimately involved in any modern understanding of the biological processes.

The final two weeks of the program are oriented around biological organisms as part of an ecosystem. Ecology is a rapidly developing field in biology and we are fortunate in having two faculty members who are active researchers in this area. Mixed in with this strenuous academic program are a series of picnics, field trips, and social events that make the institute a pleasant experience for the participant and his family at the same time that it is accomplishing an academic objective. We feel these programs have been most productive and that the participants return to their teaching duties with new insights into the subjects they are teaching to our young people.

Project Upward Bound

Eugene Hammer

1. Introduction

Poverty can condition a young person's attitude in very special ways. It can force him to view his educators as irrelevant, authoritarian or even oppressive. It can so debilitate his energies that in spite of his aspirations, success in education just doesn't seem worth the try. It can compel him to drop his education and get into a paying job so as to help support his personal needs or the needs of his family. Above all, poverty can so limit his vision that the real benefits of a higher education are simply not imaginable to him.

The Office of Economic Opportunity has joined other institutions in the nation, both public and private, in trying to find remedies for what Sargent Shriver has called this "great waste of talent." The Office of Economic Opportunity cannot provide a higher education for anybody. Only the academic institutions can do that. But the Office of Economic Opportunity has assumed the responsibility to encourage these institutions to develop effective methods to induce college-capable young people, not now headed toward higher education, to shift gears and get on a "college track."

2. Definition

UPWARD BOUND is a pre-college preparatory program designed to generate the skills and motivation necessary for success in education beyond high school among young people from low-income backgrounds and inadequate secondary school preparation. It acts to remedy poor academic preparation and personal motivation in secondary school and thus increase a youngster's promise for acceptance and success in a college environment.

In 1966, UPWARD BOUND programs were supported by the Office of Economic Opportunity at 215 academic institutions in 47 states. These programs enrolled 20,000 youngsters, most of whom had completed the tenth and eleventh grades. Almost all of these UPWARD BOUND students were residents on college, university, and secondary school campuses for six to eight weeks in the summer of 1966. The summer of 1967 saw a total of 252 institutions participating with 23,000 students involved. UPWARD BOUND programs are operating in every state.

During the academic year the UPWARD BOUND institutions continue to meet their students through classes on Saturday, by tutorial sessions with tutor-counselors, and with periodic cultural enrichment programs. In administering these programs, academic institutions have used a wide variety of teaching techniques.

3. Project Upward Bound Programs

The typical UPWARD BOUND program is offered by an educational institution combining secondary school and college teachers as faculty, making use of the physical facilities of a college campus for the students, and utilizing the experience and energies of college and university students as tutors. These programs are predicated on the assumptions:

- A. that students of normal, functional intelligence can, with special encouragement and increased motivation, succeed in college;
- B. that, for success, most UPWARD BOUND students need a sharply improved self image;
- C. that a major feature of his success is his sense that somebody personally cares about him;
- D. that in order not to lose the "ripple effect" of an UPWARD BOUND project, local school systems must be effectively engaged;
- E. that the curriculum materials, and teaching methods in an UPWARD BOUND program are more effective when they do not directly parallel those normally offered in a high school;

- F. that programs with built-in capability for quick change, in learning, scheduling, and interpersonal relationships, are superior.

Although it is not possible to list all of the attributes of a successful UPWARD BOUND program, there are certain characteristics which appear common to the effective motivation and education of UPWARD BOUND students. These include:

- A. the development of significant working relationships among secondary schools, colleges and universities, and the community at large;
- B. the involvement of imaginative and flexible teachers and other staff persons who bring to UPWARD BOUND a willingness to involve the student directly in decisions about his own education;
- C. a provision for close and substantial individual student-teacher contact;
- D. the effective use of college and university students as tutor-counselors both in the summer phase of the program and in the academic year follow-up;
- E. an important emphasis on educational goals other than the strictly academic, including activities designed to develop abilities to organize, to persuade, and to cooperate.

4. Project Upward Bound Students

The UPWARD BOUND student is a young person with academic potential who because of his poverty background has not the motivation or preparation to use or demonstrate this potential. Typically this student may be apathetic or even hostile because he comes from a disadvantaged environment which is unable to help him release his real talent. He questions the existence of meaningful educational pursuits because of his inadequate school experience. The UPWARD BOUND boy or girl could succeed in college if he were given the encouragement and instruction necessary to overcome his inadequate preparation. Without this kind of experience these students would not consider going to college; they might even drop out of high school.

5. The Wilkes Program

The objectives of Project UPWARD BOUND are:

- 1) to meet the problem of low academic achievement among students possessing the potential for success in college;
- 2) to provide opportunities for students to become aware of their educational and vocational opportunities;

- 3) to promote an awareness by students of their ability to handle advanced education;
- 4) to provide a program which will give students experiences in critical thinking and effective expression;
- 5) to develop positive attitudes toward learning;
- 6) to provide a program which will assist students in developing self-discipline and leadership qualities;
- 7) to provide experiences in cultural enrichment;
- 8) to further the development of student personality through recreational and physical activities;
- 9) to improve the health status of students with the aid of medical and dental services.

Program

Wilkes College received a Federal grant to conduct its Project UPWARD BOUND program for 50 students from Luzerne County during 1967-68. The summer phase of the program was held on the Wilkes College campus from July 24 to September 1. UPWARD BOUND students lived in college dormitories and ate in the Dining Commons from breakfast on Monday morning through supper on Friday evening.

During this period, mornings and early afternoons were devoted to academic work; late afternoons and evenings were utilized for recreational and individual study activities. There was a minimum of formal class organization. Study was designed in seminar style with specific subject matter emphases dictated by student interests.

Seminars were organized for small groups of students to discuss the material they had been studying; efforts were made to individualize the curricular content for maximum benefit to each student. Reading material was made available by the staff to introduce these students to independent study as a means of developing their awareness of their capabilities.

All students received instruction in the basic skills of reading, writing, and mathematics according to their individual needs. Directed study of literature in the sciences and in other fields was provided. Field trips were arranged to take advantage of the cultural and educational opportunities available in this area. The students visited the Pocono Playhouse to see "The Fantasticks," they spent a day at Ricketts Glen State Park, and they visited other local colleges.

Evenings were devoted to individual study, to group conversations with college students living in the dormitories, and to social activities. There were seven counselor-tutors especially assigned to assist and encourage UPWARD BOUND students in their study. These college student counselors lived in the dormitories also.

Progress

While it is difficult to evaluate progress made in a program such as Project UPWARD BOUND, we have some evidence which indicates that certain of our objectives are being achieved. The students participating in our program are enthusiastic about it and its help to them. Many are frank about the attitudes of skepticism with which they arrived on our campus in July. They are quick to admit that they came for a good time but without real hope that the program would help them very much. After six weeks of work with an understanding staff these attitudes were modified. All agreed that the program was worthwhile. All went back to school with more confidence in their ability to achieve academically. All are now giving college serious consideration.

As we continue to work with these UPWARD BOUND students we are stressing the value of a college education to them. We are working to help them win admission and financial assistance to make that college career a reality.

Toward a Program in Educational Theater

Alfred S. Groh

The Summer Theater Workshop was a plea to make a permanent place for the drama in general education.

The Workshop offered teachers in elementary and secondary schools an opportunity to extend their background in theater, to receive further instruction and training in techniques of production and directing, and to broaden their understanding of the student's ability to illuminate an experience.

The Workshop demonstrated for the student the need to discipline himself and his talent. He was encouraged to become more fully aware of himself as a person and thereby better realize his responsibilities to himself and other people.

As teachers we are involved with the student's work in the classroom, but we are equally concerned about what stimulates the mind and imagination of the student.

It is clear that the relationships between the colleges and the schools are most effective when both concentrate on common problems. If answers are forthcoming, they are in response to the needs of the student. What matters most is what the student learns, and if new ground must be broken by school administrators, new patterns must emerge out of a commitment by school teachers. Colleges and high schools, still acting independently of one another, no longer can react separately to the student's need for inspired teaching, an improved curriculum, and better instructional facilities.

It is possible that a summer graduate project for teachers and drama coaches might lead to a full-time undergraduate program in educational theater at the College. The movement is underway.

The following feature article appeared in the Wilkes-Barre Record on September 24, 1967.

HAPPENINGS IN THE ARTS

by Sylvia S. Cutler

For six weeks last summer, a group of 90 people joined in an unusual theatrical experiment, one that was new in Pennsylvania although perhaps not in other parts of the country.

Under a grant from the U. S. Office of Education, and under a cooperative arrangement between Wilkes College and Lehigh University, 15 high school and college teachers and 53 high school students took part in a Summer Theater Workshop in the Wilkes College Center for the Performing Arts during the last two weeks of July and August. In addition to these participants, there was a staff of 10 Wilkes College students employed under the Youth Opportunity Program, plus an administrative, technical, and directional staff of 10, all under the direct supervision of John J. Chwalek, program director of Wilkes College and Alfred S. Groh, director of the Wilkes College Drama Department.

Purpose was primarily to afford an opportunity for the 15 teachers to acquire training and experience in theater work, and to receive credit toward their master's degree in education at Lehigh University. However, for graduate students and the 53 high school participants, the workshop was an enlightening experience.

The graduates came from Reading, York, Allentown, Lehigh, Stroudsburg, Berwick, even Baltimore, Md., and many small towns. The students not only represented Wilkes-Barre and Kingston, but Dunmore, Springville, Moscow, Waverly, Nicholson, Dalton, Tunkhannock, Glen Lyon, Factoryville, Hunlock Creek, and many other places. Originally the enrollment was to have been 45, with the idea that they and the graduates would be housed in the dormitories. Enrollment was overwhelming and an excess of 18 were accepted, but were housed at home.

The hopes of Groh and his staff, and the Wilkes College and Lehigh University administrations were high, with an aim planned at giving the graduates intensive training in all phases of theater, and the high school students a unique learning and growing experience that would benefit them in every facet of their lives.

Those hopes have been more than justified.

From strangers, Groh and his staff of 20 managed in a matter of days to whip into shape a team of enthusiastic workers, all engaged in a goal above and beyond themselves. The participants were from all walks of life, from many ethnic and racial origins and from many varied cultures. Working closely together through long hours, with physical, mental strains, differences disappeared, and the group became a homogeneous unit of "theater people" with "the show must go on" philosophy.

They attended classroom sessions. They auditioned for parts for five alternate directors each week, rehearsed afternoons and evenings.

They broke up in teams of actors, backstage workers, lighting technicians, costume designers, make-up artists, set designers, property committees, program designers, and alternated each week so that each individual was exposed to every facet of theatrical experience, technical and aesthetic.

Plays jumped from the printed page and became living works. Undiscovered talents were painstakingly dug out, honed and polished, and presented to an audience. Each participant discovered in himself abilities he perhaps had not realized, aptitudes he had longed to discover, a particular affinity for one phase of the work or another. He learned to live and work closely with people without supervision, to contribute ideas. He learned, sometimes, to override people older and more experienced than himself, sometimes with real authority and benefit to both. He learned to take and give orders and to take criticism. He learned the weaknesses, strengths of other human beings as well as of himself. His own work potential, and how to stick to a job until it is finished and self discipline were gained as well as the meaning and the meaninglessness of time. He learned the differences and the sameness of people from another way of life.

It was an endless learning experience from which everyone benefitted, not only the teachers, not only the students, but the staff and director too.

The experimental plays were varied: "I Remember Mama," "As You Like It," "The Sandbox," "My Sister Eileen," "Arsenic and Old Lace," "Our Town," "You Can't Take It With You," "The Madwoman of Chaillet," "Recollections of Childhood," original poems by Alfred Groh, and a musical "By Hex," which was presented free of charge to the public.

They attended plays at various summer theaters and enjoyed a Syracuse University production of "Arms and the Man." The work and the education notwithstanding, the workshop was also fun.

Opinions were expressed by the students: "I wish it had started sooner!" "I wish it could go on forever!" "I can't wait until next summer."

Opinions expressed by one parent: "This is the best thing that ever happened to my child."

As a matter of fact, it undoubtedly was.

The Dramatic Illusion

By Alfred S. Groh

In some magical, majestic way the theater converts student into performer and audience into participant. Both are transformed by the imaginative process: the audience through the performance of the players and the players through the response of the audience.

How does this transformation happen, we ask, from a concept to a word to a script to a set to a stage to the imagination and back again to a concept to a word?

If we believe that a play is conceived in the imagination and ends in the imagination, then the purpose of the dramatic experience is to reveal thought and action not by what is stated in the lines but by what is associated with the lines. When we respond not to fact but to meaning, the acting dimension has released the "unheard melodies" we have come to the theater to hear.

The houselights dim. The play has begun. We are on guard, anticipating the spell that has brought a hush over the audience. We are there to be taken in, to be absorbed — not to be tricked or fooled — we wish to be disengaged from ourselves and engaged by the players. At that moment it is as though we are present at our own birth and we become immortal.

That is what we ask and demand that the theater provide. We want the players to avoid the mistake amateurs are prone to make when they substitute irrelevant detail, surface sound, pretentious behavior in place of the reality of experience. If some of our productions fail to engage the imagination of the audience, it is because we are guilty of setting the stage with an artificial illusion.

These are some of the pictures taken backstage and during performance of some of the plays presented by Cue and Curtain at the Center for the Performing Arts since November, 1965, when the new theater was dedicated.

Plays, November 1965 to November 1967: The Death of Bessie Smith, The Apollo of Bellac, The Lottery, The Madwoman of Chaillot, The Marriage Proposal, Camelot, Othello, Sorry, Wrong Number, The Telephone, The Bill Alarm, Spreading the News, Recollections of Childhood.

1967 Football Recap

by George Pawlusch '69

Before the start of the 1967 football season, the Wilkes College Colonels were tabbed by eastern sportswriters as "the team to beat" on the strength of an unblemished 8-0 record the previous season. The Blue & Gold thereby became a natural target for all opponents.

Head Coach Roland Schmidt was very optimistic, but yet uncommitted in early September. He stated that the team's spirit was the highest of any he had ever coached.

The 1967 football year proved to be a tough and grinding one, but when the smoke had finally cleared, the Wilkesmen had extended their winning streak to 21 straight. Enroute to their second consecutive undefeated and untied grid season, the Colonels garnered their third straight MAC Northern Division Championship.

The Wilkesmen opened the lid of the 1967 grid campaign against Upsala. The Vikings had the distinction of being the last team to have upended the Colonels and were well-primed to do battle. After the opening kickoff, the outcome of the contest was never in doubt, as Doug Forde took the kick and raced 94 yards for the score. Aided by the strong performance of sophomore signal caller Joe Zakowski, the Schmidtmen scuttled the Vikings by 23-14.

Moravian provided the opposition for the Colonels' first home game. The Greyhounds unleashed a 40 pass aerial attack, but, unfortunately for the visitors, seven of them fell into Wilkes hands. Dan Malloy had a field day at his safety position, pilfering 5 of the Greyhounds' tosses. Moving into the starting quarterback berth after Zakowski was injured, Joe Frappoli filled in well, completing 6 out of 7 passes in leading the Colonels to a 22-12 victory.

The third game of the year proved to be the toughest of the entire campaign. With our team behind 7-0 early in the second quarter, unrest began to spread through the home stands. The Delaware Valley defense sidelined the third and final healthy Colonel quarterback. Faced with the toughest call of the season, Coach Rollie Schmidt inserted his sophomore ace, Joe Zakowski. Zakowski had been injured in the Upsala game and his availability to play against the Rams had been doubtful. Wasting no time, Zakowski uncorked a 26 yard touchdown strike to Joe Skvarla in the end zone to knot the game at 7-7. The Rams later scored again, but the try for the extra point failed. In the fourth quarter, defensive halfback Joe Wiendl electrified the fans by taking a punt and scampering 69 yards for the score. With the pressure on, freshman placekicker Dave Kaschak converted and the Wilkesmen won 14-13.

Traveling the next Saturday to Ursinus, the Colonels wasted little time in registering an early score. The "Blue and Gold" were a heavy favorite to romp over the Bears, but the score at halftime showed an inspired Ursinus squad behind by only 7 points. The Wilkesmen wore the Bears to a frazzle in the second half, as Rich Simonson engineered the Colonels to a pair of TD's to put the game out of reach. The final score was Wilkes 28 — Ursinus 0.

Drexel Tech invaded Wilkes-Barre with one of the hottest quarterbacks in the MAC. Having won their previous two games, the Dragons stood poised to make the Colonels work for their 18th straight victory. The Colonel defense rose to the occasion by null-fling all offensive fire breathed by the Dragons. Both teams scored their points in the second period with the final score 13-3, in favor of the Colonels.

The Annual Homecoming grid game proved to be the wildest rout in Wilkes College football history as the Colonels steamrolled to a 69-0 victory over the Haverford Fordes. The reserves were inserted early in the second quarter, but nothing could stop the Wilkesmen from scoring 10 touchdowns, and smashing 5 all-time team football records.

The PMC Cadets were the next foes on the Colonels' time-table. The Cadets provided strong resistance, but eventually faltered, as Joe Wiendl picked off two desperation passes, running both back for scores of 56 and 90 yards. The Cadets succumbed to the extent of 27-0.

With another undefeated season in sight, Wilkes closed out its 1967 grid war against Lebanon Valley. With the Colonels unleashing a devastating ground attack in the form of halfback Roger Beatty and Vince Yarmel, the Dutchmen were battered by a 37 to 7 score, bringing another banner season to a close.

A highly significant fact was that the Colonels ranked in the 8th position in total defense among the NCAA college division teams across the country, allowing an average of only 8.1 points per game. In the last four games, the Schmidtmen allowed their opponents a total of only 10 points.

The Colonels' success may be attributed to its remarkable line, both offensively and defensively. During the course of the season, 29 teams and individual records were either set, tied, or surpassed. Among the most notable marks to fall were: most total offense in one game — 654 yards against Haverford; best total defense in one game — 40 yards against PMC; interceptions in one game — 5, set by Dan Malloy against Moravian; and game F.A.T.'s — 3, by Bill Staake against Haverford. Joe Wiendl, junior safety, led the Colonels in breaking individual records. The talented junior shattered 3 during the season. His 56-yard punt return against Ursinus surpassed a 90-yard return record that had been held by Al Nicholas since 1949. The longest returned interception in Colonel history occurred in the PMC contest, as Wiendl picked off a pass and returned it 90-yards. The old mark was 78 yards, set in 1958 by Frank Spudis.

Roger Beatty was one of the leading ground gainers in the MAC this year. The senior halfback gained 532 yards on 115 carries. Joe Zakowski, sophomore signal caller, also had a fine year, completing over 50% of his passes and leading the team in total offense with 688 yards.

Besides Beatty, six other Colonel gridders closed out their collegiate careers. They were co-captains Joe Rosack and Slim Varchol, Tom Ambroski, John Jarvella, Al Peterfreund, and Wayne Bloomberg.

Eight Wilkes players were named to the MAC Northern Division All-Star Team at the season's end. They were: Bill Layden, Joe Koterba, Joe Skvarla, Joe Rosack, Slim Varchol, Paul Merrill, and Joe Wiendl.

In final balloting, the Colonels were voted out for a second straight Lambert Bowl by 5 points.

Mr. Samuel Davenport
Director of Alumni
Wilkes College
Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania

Dear Sam:

Perhaps the following will suit your purposes:
I accept your request to act as Chairman for the forthcoming alumni fund drive.

This drive is important and deserving of full consideration of all alumni of Wilkes College. It is important that we support Wilkes College if we believe in private colleges and wish to preserve them for future generations. I, for one, would be quite disturbed to see higher education become strictly a public matter.

On another level, I think giving to Wilkes College to me was pretty important. Maybe the amounts that they gave me seem small now, but help is not so much a matter of magnitude as timeliness. This, I think, should be considered when we budget funds for next year. Remember, in the final analysis, the value of our lives will be based on whom we helped.

Very truly yours,

Reese D. Jones

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

Dear Alumnus:

I am extremely pleased that Reese Jones has agreed to be chairman of the Alumni Appeal for 1968. The spirit demonstrated in his letter of acceptance (above) should be that of all alumni.

Few of us will ever be able to repay fully our indebtedness to Wilkes, for it is measured by the intangible gifts of insight, wisdom, and moral and ethical precepts rather than in simple monetary terms. Nonetheless, from a purely financial view, none of us paid Wilkes the full cost of our education.

You will be hearing from Reese Jones. He will be a strong chairman for this campaign. He has been associated with the Federal Reserve, with the investment counselors, Studley, Shupert and Company, and is currently serving as President and Chief Executive Officer of the First National Bank and Trust Company of Bethlehem. Reese's teaching experiences on the undergraduate and graduate levels of Drexel, University of Pennsylvania, Temple, Villanova, and Moravian have further equipped him with unusual insight into the need for a strong college program for all youth and the need for financial support of independent colleges like Wilkes.

I hope that all of us will join with Reese in providing today the support that others provided for us yesterday.

Sincerely,

William H. Tremayne

December 1967

Dear Alumni:

As Chairman of the 1967 Annual Alumni Campaign and on behalf of Wilkes College, I would like to express my appreciation and sincere thanks to all Wilkes Alumni who participated in the recent Alumni Appeal.

The 1967 Campaign, as of December 1, saw 13.4 % or 768 Alumni participating for a total amount of $17,500.50. In comparison with the last three annual campaigns - those of 1963, 1964, and 1965 - the results do not look good. The total picture shows, though, that some Alumni did not participate because they are still paying their pledges for the Library Campaign of 1966.

Many of the Alumni are to be congratulated for their work on this Campaign. Without the money from this annual appeal, many students would not be able to receive financial aid at Wilkes. We know how important this aid is in helping the student who has the intellectual capabilities to attend Wilkes, but is without the financial resources.

In the over-all picture, the 1967 Campaign was and is a success. The Alumni Office is still receiving contributions as Alumni find that they can participate.

We all know that the 1968 Annual Appeal will begin in the near future. Even though some of us will still be paying our pledges of the 1966 Campaign, let us try to build on our success of 1967 and work for greater participation.

Sincerely,

Bill

William J. Umphred

1967 SOCCER SEASON

by Robert Thompson

The soccer team, with Jim Neddoff in his second year as coach, completed another successful year with a record of seven wins, two losses and four ties. The Colonels, however, were disappointed after last years 9-2 record, which brought a tie for the MAC Northern Division Title. In the MAC this year they were 4-0-3. Just three goals, one in each of the ties, would have given the Colonels the title.

Leading the team this year were tri-captains Rich Beck, Joe Kiefer, and Tom Rokita. Rokita had a great year at the goalie position, making possible the five shutouts registered. Beck, who played outside left, and Kiefer, who played center forward, led the team with eight and seven goals respectively. Against Moravian, Kiefer scored three goals while Beck did the same against Upsala and Wagner. The two were also leaders in assists, helping teammates Don Spruck and John Santo to score four times each.

The Booters got off to a slow start, winning only one while tying three and losing one. However, they finally regained form and won five of the remaining seven games, registering five shutouts in the process.

Jerry Yaremko, a fullback, was selected to the All MAC first team for the third time. The other fullback, Ed Manda, who was an All-American last year, injured his knee in the first game and was unable to perform at full capacity all year.

Seniors on this year's squad are Rich Beck, Joe Kiefer, Tom Rokita, Dave Thomas and Roger Brewer.

Jim Neddoff, a 1961 graduate of Wilkes, has now compiled an admirable 16-4-4 record in his two years as coach.

In Memoriam

EDWARD N. HELTZEL

Mr. Edward N. Heltzel, an associate professor of engineering at Wilkes College, died suddenly at the age of fifty-nine on June 8, 1967, following a heart attack at his summer home. He taught at Wilkes for over twenty years.
