WILKES COLLEGE IS 'ON THE MOVE'

Wilkes College is really going places, insiders say, and they're right-even in the literal sense.

Activity which began during the summer and ended early this week has moved at least seven offices and departments to new homes on campus. The changes are as follows:

1. The Sociology-Anthropology Department has moved from Parrish Hall to the second and third floors of Chase Hall.

2. The registrar's office has been moved to Parrish Hall after operating for years from the basement of Weckesser Hall.

3. The Office of Continuing Education and Graduate Studies has also packed up and moved to Parrish Hall.

4. The Veterans' Administration Office has relocated to Parrish.

5. The recorder's office has accompanied the registrar and Continuing Ed in the move to Parrish. Recorder Ruth Bishop was formerly on the first floor of Weckesser.

6. Project Upward Bound and the Act 101 program moved from Chase to Ross Hall this summer.

situation would be to have all these offices in SLC, but the lack of space prevents this.

It will probably be some time before everyone becomes familiar with the new locations. If you're one of the unlucky people who wanders the basement of Weckesser searching in vain for Mrs. Barker or Mr. Meyers, just remember that Wilkes is "on the move."

MOVIN' ON- Maintenance men have been working diligently, transporting office equipment and supplies from one end of the campus to the other.

Parent's Day To Be Held

The College's Annual Parent's Day will be held this Saturday, October 8.

During the past 14 years, it has been a tradition at Wilkes to set aside a day especially for the parents to enable them to obtain an "in depth" view of the College, and to visit with their sons or daughters in the college atmosphere.

Parent's Day gives the student's parents an opportunity to take an active part in the student's education here at Wilkes. The day is designed to operate on an informal basis, and provides parents with the occasion of meeting and socializing with the administration, faculty members and students of the "Wilkes College Family."

Various athletic events are scheduled and a "Post Game Huddle," open to all administration, faculty, students and their parents, is planned to take place at the Hotel Sterling.

The main events of the day are slated as follows:

9 a.m. to 1 p.m. - Registration - Dining Hall Lobby (tickets available for the football game).

9 a.m. to 5 p.m. - Open House - All College buildings.

10 a.m. - Women's Tennis - Wilkes vs. Baptist Bible - Ralston Field.

1:30 p.m. - Football - Wilkes vs. Upsala - Ralston Field (free admission for parents).

4 p.m. - "Post Game Huddle" - Hotel Sterling - refreshments will be served - cash bar available.

The future of the basement of Weckesser is still a question mark, although a number of suggestions have been made. The Beacon has taken over the former Vets' office, and is using it as a typesetting and newspaper layout room.

Parrish Hall is obviously the center of activity in the moving process, which is precisely the reason it has been so involved. The registrar, Continuing Ed and the recorder were moved there in order to centralize the registration and financial procedure, since both the business and finance offices are located in Parrish.

Formerly a student had to trek back and forth between Weckesser, Parrish and the Computer Center in Stark Learning Center to register, pay bills, pick up class cards, change schedules, etc.

Now the system is more localized, although not really centralized, since Parrish stands at the far end of the campus and the Computer Center remains in the middle. Provost Richard Soter explained that the ideal

Consolidation Proposed By Trustees' Committee

Carl Holsberger, Student Government president, reported at the SG meeting, Monday night, that the Freshman Life and Housing Committee is suggesting that the three student bodies of IDC, CC, and SG be consolidated into one. Louie DeRobertis, CC president, is in favor of this proposal arguing that it may bring more organization to student affairs. Holsberger and Dean Edward Baltruchitis expressed feelings against this proposal but will discuss it further with an open mind. The Freshman Life and Housing Committee is a sub-committee of the Board of Trustees.

Under committee reports, the social committee headed by John Sentore announced that the theme for this year's winter weekend is the "Wilkes College Winter Olympics" being held on Jan. 28-29. A concert is being looked into for the weekend and further information will be available later in the semester.

The film committee reported that there has been a change in the film schedule for Homecoming Weekend. "Lady Sings The Blues" will be shown in the SUB, free of charge, on Saturday at 6:00 p.m. and Sunday at 8:00 p.m. The movie was originally scheduled for two showings on Saturday night.

A report was given by Greg Black, concert chairman, on "The Outlaws" concert held last Thursday which 1800 people attended. A floor covering was borrowed from King's College for the concert but Black is going to look into getting one for the College gym since it is so desperately needed. Some complaints were expressed to Black from SG members concerning the concert where the music was too loud, rushed through, and where people had trouble seeing. The overall view, however, was that the concert was a success.

College Jazz Band Is Tuned To Play

The Wilkes College Jazz Band is tuning up and preparing to get their 1977-1978 season underway. This year the band is under the direction of Eddie Richards and Assistant Director Tom Ralston.

Dave Palanzo, spokesman for the band said, "The presently reforming Jazz Band, has planned a concert schedule for this year which will be larger than in previous years.

The group's first engagement this year will be at the Gong Show which will take place on Friday, Oct. 28. After this the band prepares for a Christmas concert tour which they give every year at 12 local Junior and Senior High Schools. During the college Christmas break the group returns a week early to leave on this provincial tour. Because of this local touring, the band is probably better known off than on campus.

Last year, for the first time, the band traveled to Owego, NY during the holiday break to perform at a Junior and Senior High School in the area. They are planning to return there again this year.

Throughout the season they also hold concerts for Cherry Blossom, Concert and Lecture Series, and for the S.U.B. and C.P.A.

The Jazz Band is a student volunteer club which is totally organized and run by students. Originally started in 1973 by Al Dunn, the band has been in existence for five years. The group's advisor, Art Hoover and Dean Edward Baltruchitis have both helped the club over the years. Student Government, for the first time this year, is sponsoring the band so that they will be able to purchase new music for this year's spring concert.

Approximately 20 people are involved in the band this year, (not all being music majors), enabling the group to keep a standard jazz band size of five saxophones, five trombones, five trumpets and five people in the rhythm section. Their music ranges from Count Bassie and Duke Ellington to Woody Herman, Stan Kenton and Maynard Ferguson.

The Jazz Band practices every Monday night from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Anyone that is interested in joining the group, who has his instrument, is welcome to come out and audition.

Kenneth Koch To Speak And To Read His Poetry

American poet and playwright, Kenneth Koch, will visit Wilkes on Tuesday, Oct. 11 to talk with students and read from his works. The reading, scheduled for 8 p.m. in SLC 101, is open to the public.

"Koch is fond of making poetry out of poetry-resistant stuff," says one of his critics. "Locks, lipsticks, business letterheads, walnuts, lunch and fudge attract him; so do examples of inept slang, silly sentiment, brutal behavior, and stereotyped erotica and erotica."

Koch's remarkable literary talent has given him a place almost entirely his own in American literature.

He has published many books of unique poetry including, "Thank You and Other Poems" (1962), "Ko, or a Season on Earth" (1959), and his most recent, "The Duplications" (1977).

Koch has worked with children and the elderly, surfacing poetry in those who least realized their creative abilities.

In "Wishes, Lies, and Dreams" (1970), Koch teaches the writing of poetry. "Rose, Where did you Get That Red?" (1973) presents poetry as literature in an effort to get children to write poems similar to those they read.

Koch was born in 1925. He lives in New York City where he is professor of English at Columbia University.

Koch, together with John Ashbery and Frank O'Hara, was a principal of the "New York School," a group of poets working in the middle 1950's to transcribe the "abstract expressionism" in painting for poetry.

He has written scripts for many experimental films, two of which have been produced. His most recent work is a full length play, "The Red Robins," adapted from his novel of the same title.

The Beacon will be out on Friday, October 14 in honor of the Homecoming activities.

UPWARD BOUND - Do you enjoy working with young people? Would you like to do something constructive in your spare time? If you are this type of person, Upward Bound may have a niche for you to fill.

Project Upward Bound is a remedial education program that is sponsored by Wilkes College and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. It is designed for local high school students who are disadvantaged for one reason or another; yet, have the potential for college. Because of their circumstances, they may be deficient in some of the basic skills necessary for success in such an undertaking. Special classes, tutoring sessions and career counseling during the school year and summer are just some of the activities organized to help these students make their dreams of college and a future career a reality.

Upward Bound needs people to tutor in all high school subjects. Sessions can be arranged at the volunteer's convenience, in evenings and after school. Limited white card hours are available for eligible students, but the program is largely seeking volunteer time. Interested people can contact Barb Greenwood, director of Upward Bound, at the Upward Bound office on the second floor of Ross Hall [251 South River St.], or call ext. 306.

What college women are being pinned with.

As a woman ROTC student, you'll compete for your commission on the same footing as the men in your class. There are 2-year, 3-year, and 4-year scholarship programs available. A young woman enrolled in the AFROTC 4-year program is also qualified to compete for an AFROTC college scholarship which will cover the remaining 2 or 3 years she has as a cadet. Tuition is covered...all fees paid...textbook costs reimbursed...plus $100 a month allowance, tax-free. A woman's place is definitely in the Air Force and our pinning ceremony will be the highlight of her college experience.

Bright Light Leaves Campus

Someone once said that there are two ways to bring light into the world- to be the flame itself or to be the mirror that reflects it. Marianne Montague is both, for her personality can illuminate any dark corner, and she also has a special talent for allowing people to see the best in themselves, especially when they're feeling pretty worthless.

As a student here, Marianne took an active part in campus life, managing the swim team, being a member of The Beacon editorial staff, becoming a Homecoming princess and being selected for Who's Who.

She ended her undergraduate days in style, graduating cum laude with a B.A. in English-Secondary Education with a concentration in journalism, and being named "outstanding graduate." "That was the proudest moment of my life," she said, "because receiving both my degree and that award represented my academic and campus activities. That meant a lot to me because I learned at Wilkes both inside and outside the classroom."

Although she was "ready to face the world," she found that the teaching market was all but closed, and she returned to Wilkes for graduate courses, and to work at the Housing and Alumni offices. One year later (last week) she was informed that she had been hired as the Program Coordinator for Student Activities at Bloomsburg State College, a position for which 90 people applied.

"I'm really enthusiastic about the job," she said, and she expressed her appreciation to the people she worked with both in Weckesser and Housing (including the RA's) who "supported my career plans while always helping me grow, and who were always my friends."

As hard as it is for those who know her to see her leave Wilkes, it's also difficult for her to leave. "It sounds corny," she said, "but I can see the memories passing by, and they were all important parts of my life. Most of those memories are of the people at Wilkes-those who listened and laughed with me. I'll always have them with me."

People who know her will admit that they spent a great deal of time laughing with her, for she possess an exceptional sense of humor, coupled with true warmth and understanding. One of activities on The Beacon was to write a weekly humor column, "Dream On," which charmed readers throughout the campus and was probably the most popular series this paper has ever featured. She continued to exhibit her witty style in the Wilkes College Quarterly as a member of the editorial staff.

In addition to her ability to see the lighter side of life, she is also capable of sustaining other's spirits by listening patiently, talking sincerely and somehow planting hope. If she ever decides to charge for those services, the Rockefellers are in for some stiff competition.

As if that weren't enough (I told you you'd be embarrassed, Mare), she's also modest and unassuming, refusing to stand in the spotlight, while usually that someone else does instead.

It may seem impossible for any one person to possess all these attributes and not yet be canonized, but anyone who knows Marianne will agree that she's someone special.

"Why do you want to write about me for The Beacon?" she asked (typically). "A lot of people leave Wilkes when they get jobs." Well, that may be true, Mare, but none of them ever won the love and affection from so many people that you captured so easily.

George Ralston Out

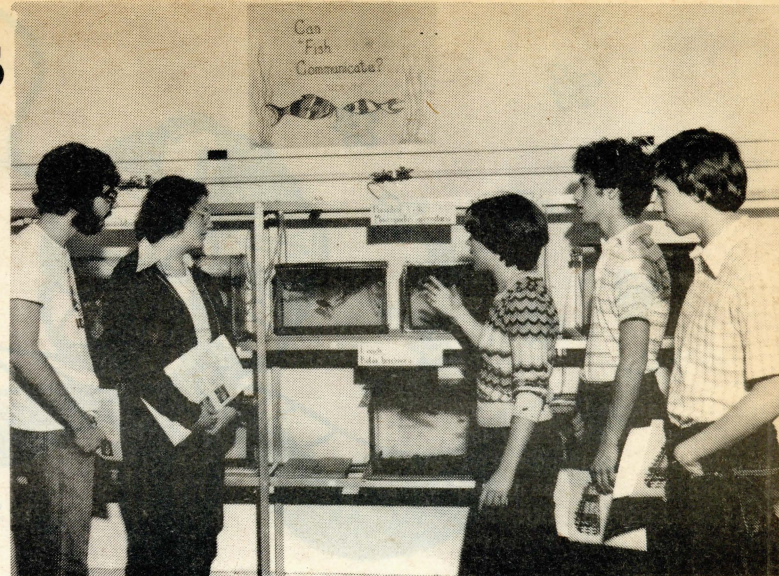

Dean of Student Affairs, George Ralston, suffered a herniated disc on Tuesday, September 20, and has been out ill since then.

Presently, he is at his home recovering while taking periodic tests with his doctor. Dean Ralston's secretary, Peggy Jones, commented that he is in a lot of pain and has to keep very still.

It is not known for sure when he will return but as Ms. Jones feels "I hope very soon."

Even though Dean Ralston is not presently available, Associate Dean Jane Lampe and Assistant Dean Edward Baltruchitis are working hard to cover for him.

The Wilkes College Veteran's Club is sponsoring its second annual road rally. The road rally will be held on Sunday, October 9 and will start from the parking lot of the Narrows Shopping Center, Edwardsville. Prizes will be awarded for both the driver and navigator of the first three place winners. contestants may register at the VA Office at Wilkes at ext. 439 or 277.

Committee Formed IDC

To Investigate Parking Ramp

A report from the Freshman Life and Housing Committee was given at the Commuter Council meeting, Monday afternoon, which led to much discussion. The committee recognizes the strong need for a new Student Union Building or facility and an improved orientation program (which CC suggested), but is flatly rejecting the idea of a parking ramp because it claims it is financially impossible.

Much discontent was expressed by the council over this decision and attitude and a committee was formed to investigate the possibility of operating a parking ramp. Council member Philip Murosky, who is heading this committee, feels the administration has taken a negative attitude toward a parking ramp and really does not recognize the actual need for one. This committee was enthusiastically formed with 11 council members out of 18 volunteering to work on it.

Under new business, plans for the Halloween party were discussed and finalized at the meeting. The party will start at around 8:00 p.m. in the gym on Oct. 29 with hot food being catered by Konefals. The band "Phoenix" will perform between 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. and the price of admission is $3.25 for those dressed in costumes and $3.75 for those who are not.

Survey Focuses Spending Habits

Public Relations distributed a survey at the October 2 IDC meeting to get an idea of how much money Wilkes College dorm students spend at community merchants each year. It is estimated that a total of between $75,000 and $1 million is spent by the College's dorm students each year.

The reason for the questionnaire is due to a proposal by the College to raze a few of the men's and women's dormitories on campus such as Miner, McClintock and Gore to build a major high-rise dormitory complex. But the city does not totally approve of the idea that the College will not have to pay any taxes on a new Housing complex. Public Relations is trying to defend its case using the results of this survey.

This new dormitory, if it is built, would increase the total dormitory population; therefore, increasing the money that would be circulating into the community businesses.

The person responsible for the rash of thefts that have been occurring in the past two weeks was caught last week. He confessed to eight of the thefts. IDC president Tom Bazzini stated, "Just because this guy was caught doesn't mean we shouldn't be more careful in the future. We should use this as a lesson."

A Letter To "Judas"

Dear Flowering Judas,

We read your first issue recently, and as the reputed "established voice of Wilkes students," would like to sincerely welcome you to the campus. We're not sure in what manner we were expected to behave, but we have no intentions of condemning your efforts to 'try to blow all you people [students] out of your apathetic stupors.'

We think that is a worthy but awesome goal, and is one which, believe it or not, we try to achieve also.

We believe that you can serve a useful function on this campus and can be a valuable asset to students. But take care that you don't forget some important ideas that should be at the heart of your efforts. We don't mean to sound preachy, but we are in a position to reflect on some of the things we have learned through our mistakes and through the opportunities we have had to see aspects of Wilkes that relatively few students are able to view. Perhaps the lessons we've learned can be of some value to you.

The most important idea to remember when venturing out into the publication world is that truth and fairness should be the overwhelming theme in everything you write. The problem is that truth can be hard to distinguish among the many shades of gray and fairness is a relative thing. As a result it is easier to offend people than it is to please them, even though you never intended to be unfair.

But don't let the thought of offending someone prevent you from saying what you know is right - just be certain that you are. Also, you will probably soon find that the wall of apathy is hard to crack, especially when you are committed to fairness and accuracy, for they often take some of the sting out of your story. It's easy to stir up interest in an issue if you print things you can't prove.

And, if you really believe in what you're doing, don't hide behind anonymity. This only shows a lack of faith in your convictions and a lack of courage. It's easy to take pot shots at people when they don't know who you are.

We try to make people think about this college, to evaluate its strengths and its weaknesses, to search for ways to improve campus life and also to appreciate the good aspects that exist now. If you can compel people to think even more, and perhaps to care enough to actually do something to make this college better than it is, then you will have accomplished a great deal.

But also remember that while public criticism can be a valuable tool, too much can kill many good ideas and intentions. Be careful not to discourage the people on this campus who ARE trying to do something.

Thanks for listening and good luck. We'll see you on the 14th.

Get Your Dictionary: Another Tree Freak Expresses Criticism

To The Editor:

Being a devotee of sesquipedalianism, I find it categorically imperative that I produce counter evidence to Robert Knorr's unruminated letter concerning Daniel A. Miklander's correspondence to The Beacon. I shall not at all delve into the venomous criticism of its "satirical" and "literary" worth, except to say that I thought it a prime example of prosaic epistolary form. Rather it is Knorr's accusation surrounding the validity of the word "stegophilist" with which I shall deal.

The word "stego" is Greek in origin. It is derived from "stegos" meaning roof or cover. A prime example of its application was a herbivorous dinosaur of the Jurassic and Cretaceous periods characterized by its heavy, bony armor (a cover for protection). The element "philo" is also Greek in origin. Philo means "loving" and a philist would be a "lover." Hence a "stegophilist" is a person who loves to cover objects, e.g. an alpinist or a tree climber.

I might suggest that Robert Knorr purchase another dictionary and perhaps a thesaurus. The paperback edition that he now owns is insufficient for college needs.

Sincerely,
Niki Liljestrand

P.S. In Chris Daryl's letter on "Treeman" the word magnolia was misspelled. Its proper form lies above.

"MATERIALS MANAGEMENT OR THE TERM PAPER"

You enter class, your instructor hands out the course syllabus, test dates out of class assignments and the term paper required for the course. If you are registered for 18 credits, this may be the third term paper required of you for the semester. If you are lucky you will have one.

The first term paper usually counts as a full hourly exam; therefore, it's important that you gather, assess and communicate information to the instructor in a logical way. Term papers are generally assigned so that you can research and learn a specific body of knowledge. It is important that you develop a systematic approach to research and writing. Since your first college term paper will be a chore, don't wait until the last week of the term. Once your topic is assigned, locate the college library and ask an employee to show you where data may be found.

Generally, library orientations are conducted at Wilkes College by members of the English Department. Nevertheless, get a jump on your competition, don't procrastinate - get started and you will feel a sense of relief if you have your paper completed well in advance of the assigned date.

Here are a few tips for writing your first college term paper:

Acquire a term paper manual. Ask your English instructor for a few recommendations on authors. Manuals are inexpensive. Most manuals will have the following as a general theme.

Identify your topic and compile a bibliography on your topic. Use 3 x 5 cards and indicate author, title, place of publication and date. Prepare and outline.

Information extracted from your reading should be placed on 4 x 6 index cards. Also, each card should indicate the source of the extracted information. Somewhere on the card indicate whether the extracted idea is (A) a quotation, (B) a conclusion, (C) your idea, (D) author's idea, (E) paraphrase. In essence you don't want to be guilty of intelligent shoplifting commonly known as plagiarism. Footnotes in your term paper must establish the source of your extracted information.

Your term paper manual will show you how to list footnotes and utilize such Latin abbreviations such as "Ibid.," "Loc. Cit." and "Op. Cit." although such abbreviations are gradually being replaced with other methods.

Write a rough draft from your cards - just get your thoughts down on paper. Review the draft for spelling, grammar, logic, idea development, general organization and sentence structure.

When writing your paper there are some general rules of thumb. Use "quotations" only when necessary. Your term paper should not be a paper of another person's words - just say it your way. Write clearly and simply, don't be addicted to big words. Make sure your paragraphs support your thesis statement and topic - don't throw in words to fill up the paper. Place your paper aside for a few days - come back to it and proof read it with care. Get another opinion from a friend who is an English major. If you don't have one, find one. Make your final draft look neat. Use quality white erasable bond paper. Purchase a clear, plastic cover or manilla folder to give it a professional polished document look.

Mazarro And Dow To Speak In Learning Center; Marks Second Event In Fall Poetry Festival

Writers Jerome Mazarro and Philip Dow will read from their works and speak with students and the public today a 8p.m. in Stark Learning Center, room 1.

Dow's collection of poems, "Paying Back The Sea," is ready for publication. He has also translated 300 Japanese haiku. His poems have appeared in the magazines, "The Nation," "North American Review," and "Field."

Mazarro's collection of poems, "Changing The Windows (1966), deals boldly with the day-to-day problems of survival, the power of the past, and the impact of people and places on our lives.

The Thursday night reading by Mazarro and Dow is the second in a series being held at Wilkes this fall.

Handling Test Barrage Requires Many Tactics

Now that the semester is well underway, and just about everybody is accustomed to their schedules, you will find that a unique phenomenon is occurring on the college campus.

You may be a victim of this plight or you are one who has temporarily eluded it. (If the latter is the case consider yourself lucky!)

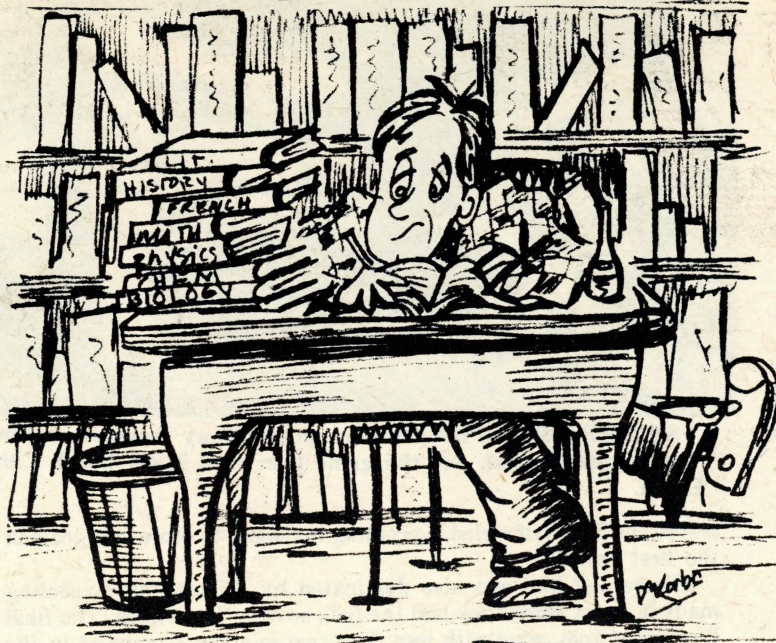

The realization may strike you as you eat lunch in the caf or commons, enjoy a party or sit talking with friends.

Suddenly within the span of one week, or maybe even two, every class you own a book for is having a test, quiz, exam, term paper, presentation, speech or report.

The amazing part of this phenomenon is not only that it all happens in such a short span of time; but even more mind-boggling is the way in which different students manage to prepare for these.

Some students remain calm, collected and rational and go about the chore of studying in an orderly and systematic fashion, dividing their time for each subject.

Others take the "you only live once" approach. These students, instead of studying, call upon their tact, wit and crib sheets to pull them through. Among the methods employed are "multiple guess" and the "roaming eyes" plan. Unfortunately, most of the time, this approach doesn't quite work and it takes the seasoned professional to avoid the consequences.

At the other extreme is the over conscientious soul who is so well-prepared he can tell you what page number any term or problem is on. This individual usually pitches a tent on the third floor of the library a week before the test, emerging only to take the test, hand in the paper or use the rest rooms.

The tactics used in dealing with that first flurry of tests depends on the individual and the class. And if keeping your sanity through it all isn't hard enough, why is it that just when you are in the midst of cramming, memorizing, reviewing, and deciphering your notebook, all of your friends seem to be out at the best parties and having the best times?

Or maybe you have a different plight. Perhaps just as you settle down to study, you come down with the worst cold or sore throat you have had in the past ten years. (The recent rainy season didn't help any, but if you think that was bad - wait til the snow comes!)

The only solution is to arm yourself with a box of tissues and some chicken soup and make the best of the situation. Good luck!

MIND DESIGNS

By Pam Long

Sexy women, fantastic contraptions, sinister villains and the immortal 007 are all rolled into one to form a more recent kind of James Bond movie, "The Spy Who Loved Me."

This time Bond (Roger Moore) is involved in a zany plot to apprehend the culprit responsible for kidnapping several nuclear submarines by using a tracking device. The idea is, of course, to destroy the world, and the impenetrable secret agent accepts the challenge to terminate the scheme.

The tone of the movie is fairly consistent in keeping with the previous 007 ventures, which starred Sean Connery. Yet it seems this Bond lacks that special finesse so characteristic of the imperishable undercover man. Perhaps it might be safe to say that Moore does not project that quality of control which the old Bond seems to have been famous for. Moore does adequately fulfill the role, however, in comparison to the original he seems rather to resemble a modern Alexander Mundy, with perhaps a bit more starch.

In keeping with the initial 007 flavor, everything is indeed bizarre. The deathless secret agent seems to have a contraption for every situation. But because of Bond's past reputation it is not surprising that he should be equipped with a digital computer read-out wrist watch, a car which converts into a submarine and a parachute that saves his life as he skis off the edge of an enormous mountain, pursued by thugs.

Bond's relationships with women come as no shock, yet his style in such matters cannot but be envied. His "dashing personality and charm" encourage numerous voluptuous beauties to ultimately melt in his arms on sight, thus nourishing the spy's extraordinary ego. But here, 007 is enthralled with one particular goddess who ends up accompanying him on his mission. The lady would indeed seem to represent Bond's equal, as far as occupation goes, but the incomparable spy succeeds in "conquering" her as is typical of his style.

Style indeed seems to be Bond's trademark, as it is evident in everything he relates to; his women, attire, form of travel (Unheard of!), speech and so on. This characteristic, however, might be his only noteworthy quality, as he is otherwise a rather foppish fellow.

And humor? Bond's humor is indeed an outrage! The sarcastic comments he utters at the most opportune times produces such farcical comedy, one ultimately has to respond with "Oh, come on!" Ah, such wit! But this is par for the reputation of James Bond; he is a farce, but he is also "the best."

Meanwhile, evil forces set out to destroy the hero, headed by the scandalous Strombel. One memorable maniac is a character named "Jaws." This gruesome fellow, along with having a mouth full of metal also possesses a will to survive comparable to that of Bond himself. He becomes rather comical and ultimately unforgettable.

"The Spy Who Loved Me" thus celebrates the reincarnation of the unforgettable 007, the secret agent with a tremendous capacity for survival, a harem of beautiful women and a waggery which should perhaps have remained buried!

Booters Still Winless With Brautigan Hurt

The Wilkes College soccer team fell victims to defeat twice last week and are still struggling to break an early season slump. The Blue and Gold lost their home inaugural to Muhlenberg last Wednesday, 6-1 and were defeated by Lycoming College in their second home contest, 6-5.

The Colonel booters beat Muhlenberg in their previous meeting, which turned out to be a hotly contested match at Muhlenberg. The damp rain wasn't the only thing present, as the Muhlenberg booters filled the air with a strong feeling for revenge. At the end of the first period, Wilkes trailed 20-9 in goal shots and 4-1 in scoring. Mario Apuzzo, junior co-captain was the only Colonel to score, hitting the nets at the end of the first period, unassisted.

The offensive hustle of sophomore Warren Bush, freshman Dung Chi Duong, and senior Tony Apostolaros seemed almost worthless, due to the muddy field conditions.

Freshman goalkeeper, Cliff Brautigan played a respectable game, making 22 saves before leaving the game mid-way through the second half. Brautigan was desperately trying to defend his goal when he collided with a couple of Muhlenberg's persistent offensive players. He is now on the injured list for three to four weeks with torn ligaments in his leg.

Junior goalie, Joe Stephens replaced Brautigan and did a commendable job, making 9 saves and allowing just one score. Reserves Steve Bailey and Ed Finn provided some excitement for Colonel fans, demonstrating tough physical contact with their Muhlenberg adversaries. Despite the good defense in the second half, it was already too late and the Colonels found themselves on the short end of a 6-1 decision.

On Saturday the booters played their second home match and dropped a 6-5 squeaker to Lycoming. Although the poor weather conditions prevailed for the weekend, things went a little better for the Wilkesmen. Since a few more Colonels joined the scoring ranks, Coach Eaton believes they will do a better job with their remaining schedule.

Co-captain Tony Apostolaros scored the first goal of the game when he fashioned a 35 yard kick 11 minutes into the first period on a pass from freshman Dung Chi Duong. Wilkes recorded their second goal when Dung(Zoomy) was illegally pushed and drew a penalty kick for the Blue and Gold. Mario Apuzzo kicked the penalty shot and made the score 2-0 favor Wilkes. Mario also scored the third tally for the Colonels on a pass from Apostolaros just before the first half ended. Lycoming managed to score two goals in the first half.

The second half was also dominated by Wilkes, but Lycoming made it count when they had the ball, scoring four times. The final Lycoming goal came with less than two minutes remaining in the match, awarding them with a close 6-5 victory. Other Colonels breaking into the scoring ranks were sophomores Joe Piccone and Nick Golowich. Warren Bush was credited with the assist to the Golowich score.

Wilkes saw their record drop to 0-4 but Eaton is optimistic about their game at Moravian, Saturday at 10:30. Last year the Colonels defeated Moravian 3-2 in a hardfought overtime battle. After the Contest with Moravian, Wilkes will be at home on October 11, entertaining Baptist Bible College.

Well, as they say in the trade, there's always next week! Undeclared Upsala rolls into town riding a 3-0 record and sporting a tremendous defense. They have beaten Swarthmore, 15-6; Susquehanna, 16-0; and Madison FDU, 46-0. In case you flunked math, they've outscored their opponents 77-61!

Ideally, the Colonels still have a chance. They are only one game off the pace in the MAC race but every remaining contest is with an MAC member. Realistically, you have to have severe doubts. Maybe it'll rain. At least it'll be fun to watch.

Jeff Acornley

Hockey Squad Scores Twelfth Straight NPWIAA Victory; Home This Week

The field hockey team struggled through a tough week beating the University of Scranton 8-1 but losing to Kutztown 4-1 and Lafayette 2-0. The team's overall record is now at .500 with two wins and two losses.

The Colonels looked unbeatable on Tuesday as they kept on the attack against Scranton getting 33 shots on goal against only 10 for the Royals. Coach Meyers' girls gave a total team effort scoring eight goals to go along with a great defensive performance. Marie Elko, Barb Gorgas and Julie Kerrick each had two goals in the lopsided win. Pam Synder added a goal that was so quick that the University of Scranton team didn't know what happened. Jean Johnson led the defense keeping the ball up to the attack throughout the game.

Wilkes substituted freely in the contest using 17 players. Goalie Lee Ann Earl was forced to take No Doz once again as she had to kick the ball only three times in the entire game.

The victory over Scranton was the Colonels' 12th consecutive victory in N.P.W.I.A.A. play. Since the league was formed in 1974, Wilkes has never lost a league game.

Thursday's game was not so easy. Kutztown, a far superior team to Scranton, outshot Wilkes 22 to 12. They provided the toughest competition for the team so far this year. Wilkes played a tough game, but Kutztown was there to capitalize on the Colonels' mistakes. Marie Elko scored once again but a Kutztown goal tied it up just before the half ended. In the second half a tough Kutztown defense held the team scoreless while they added three goals for a 4-1 final.

Coach Meyers had much praise for Kutztown's effort: "Kutztown is so aggressive, I always get the feeling they are playing with an extra player. It seems that they always have a player at the ball. Our defense did a good job in the majority of the time, but the minute we let up -- they were right there."

Mrs. Meyers stressed that her team's mistakes proved to be the difference. "Wilkes didn't get outplayed," she stated. "We were in the game. The difference was we made mistakes and they didn't."

Once again, Jean Johnson was a standout on defense. Lee Ann Earl proved why everyone says she is a class goalie making 10 saves. Geri McAfee, a sophomore transfer student, did a good job on defense in her first varsity appearance.

It must be noted that Kutztown has a larger program than Wilkes does and they are consistently tough each year. This is also true of Lafayette who has a very strong team.

Over 90 percent of Saturday's 2-0 loss to Lafayette was played in a pouring rain and the game was finally called with close to 15 minutes left because the field condition became so bad. The combination of the rain as well as losing 15 minutes of playing time definitely hurt the team especially in such a close contest.

Wilkes showed the powerful Lafayette team that they are no team to warm up on. The stats were not too far apart with Lafayette holding the edge in shots 23-14 and in penalty corners by only 11-8. Lee Ann Earl was super in goal tending once again making 15 saves. A great defensive effort was led by Monica Krammer, Karen Worlinski and Lu Ann Neely. The defense never let up sending Lafayette away from the goal time and time again.

A turning point in the game could have been missed shots by Jerry Ann Smith and Mary Jo Frail. Both girls had some tremendous shots on goal but the ball just wouldn't go in.

The team will be definitely asking itself what the outcome would have been if the final 15 minutes had been played. The team was breaking through the Lafayette defense more often and more quickly in the second half.

"I am very pleased with the total team performance," noted Coach Meyers. "We lacked some power on attack, but our defense did a great job."

The team unit is starting to come together but a few weak spots still exist. If the team plays the rest of the season with less mistakes, they can be tough.

Evidence to the caliber of team that Lafayette has is the fact that they are hoping for a bid to the USFHA AIAW field hockey college championship tournament in November.

In both the Kutztown and the Lafayette games, Wilkes played good open field hockey. They were not outclassed in either game. The team didn't win either game but the team members played well against the strong competition that teams like Kutztown and Lafayette supply.

In this week's action, Wilkes plays Delaware Valley and Bloomsburg State both at home. Bloomsburg has a strong and tough team. As always, fans are welcomed and appreciated.

Netwomen Cop 3rd Straight Victory

The Colonelettes tennis team extended their win streak to three with wins over Misericordia, 6-1 and the University of Scranton, 6-1 over the past week.

In action against Scranton, Wilkes' Reenie Corbett crushed her opponent Sue Gay, 6-3, 6-1. It was only last week that Corbett defeated Gay, 6-2, 6-2.

Royal Kathy Coleman defeated southpaw Jan Wolf, 6-1, 6-1. Coleman had ruled the court last week against Jo Ann Pugliese the last time two teams met. The Coleman victory was the only win for Scranton for the afternoon.

This week it was different for co-captain Pugliese as she rebounded and defeated the "U's" Barb Mechling in a 6-3, 7-5 tiebreaker.

Once again Diane Polachek looked devastating by overpowering Sandy Selinski, 6-4, 6-4. In a grudge match, Colonelette Laura Canfield went against Royal Kathy Knowles for the third time in two years. The match moved into a third set and the crowd was stunned when Canfield defeated Knowles, 6-4, 6-3, 6-0.

The doubles action was in the "Good Hands People" as the Colonels Steele-McQuire pair were too much to handle for Scranton's Moisey-McIntyre, 6-3, 6-1.

In the nite-owl doubles, Wilkes' Bellas-McMahon were seeded against McManus-Stanchak. In a superb effort the Wilkeswomen emerged with the win.

At 3 p.m. today the netwomen put their 4-2 record on the line against a tough Bloomsburg State team at Ralston Field.

Smegmas, New Riders Rolling With Wins

In a crucial football encounter this past week in the Western Division, Miner Hall and the Smegmas squared off for a game whose outcome will be disputed for years to come.

Miner came in to the game overconfident of themselves, and as a result were burned on the first and second offensive possessions by the Smegmas. "Broadway" Greg Tomcho launched two touchdowns to his two normally not-so surehanded halfbacks Mike Capper and Bruce Douglas for an early 14-0 lead.

This score held until the third quarter when Miner finally came to life via a Brian Hoynak touchdown toss to wide receiver Ken Hughes. The Extra point was missed, and the score stood at 14-6.

Lightning struck quickly however, as Mike Vassil ran the ensuing kickoff back 92 yards to boost the Smegma lead to 21-6. However, Miner got a break on the successful extra-point attempt when halfback Douglas viciously spiked the ball, only to have the ball bounce back and spike him where the sun don't shine, eliminating him from any further action for the day.

Miner quickly capitalized, using a 40 yard halfback option pass to Pete Pagano and a 10 yard bootleg by Hoynak to get within a point, 21-20. After that, two interceptions by Smegma Scott Sultzer kept the boys from the Hall in check until with 3 seconds left in the game, when Miner lined up for a 35 yard field goal attempt by Mike Heller. The kick appeared good as the final gun went off, but referee Bill Manley said no because the ball was too high as it went over the crossbar. The Smegmas, not the type of team to argue with officials, accepted the 21-20 victory and limped home.

In the East, the New Riders continued to roll with a 41-19 win over a tough STX II team. The Riders, behind the moves of "Disco" Tom McIntyre are scoring this year at a rate of 13.5 points per game, while allowing the opposition only 12.5.

A Corny Look At The "Kernels"

by jeff acornley

The only thing missing was Bob Woodie and his cartoon classics! While the Colonels were doing their best to imitate the Little Rascals, Jay Kristopher, Dan Patrick, and Jim Vanston were masquerading as the Three Stooges.

Saturday's Wilkes-Bloomsburg football game was televised regionally by local ABC affiliate WNEP, and in many ways both the game and the telecast were comedies.

The channel 16 broadcast team was if nothing else, entertaining. Kristopher kept predicting rain, Patrick rooted for the Phillies and Vanston just agreed with them. Their commentary wasn't much more than entertainment, however. They insisted that Dan Pisarcik was kicking for Bloomsburg and that Mike Wilson was tall for his age. They should have done their homework.

The production wasn't all that bad, though. The college promotions were excellent for both schools as was the filming of the improvised halftime show that was staged by a few crazed students. Using props such as umbrellas and rain slickers, they staged a "Laugh-In" type of marching show complete with sped-up filming. The exhibition provided some laughs while the main show was in the locker rooms.

The center ring show was worth the price of admission also. Since there wasn't a heck of a lot of football being played, both teams must have decided that they needed to keep the audience somehow. Humor was the answer.

Every turnover imaginable made an appearance in that game, including a man in the 13th row dressed as an apple turnover. He must have thought he was at "Let's Make A Deal" when in reality it was more like the "Gong Show."

Highlights were when Rich Chapman fumbled for the third time when a punt rolled right through his legs at the goal line and when Joel Kane caught a screen pass. Oh, my!!

And while you folks were catching pneumonia, I got to watch all of these delights in living color complete with instant replays!

Frosh Thomas A Sure Bet With 8 Consecutive Wins

Have you lost much this year on football pools? Want a sure bet? A bet that has won eight times out of eight chances.

If so, put your money on Danny Thomas of the Wilkes cross country team. The 5-10, 129 pound freshman sensation has garnered eight first-places since setting foot on the Wilkes campus. From the season he is having already, it is no wonder he was named to the All-American cross country team in high school.

Thomas is not the only one having a great year. The team itself, under the guidance of Coach Kevin Davenport, has established a new school record for most wins in a season, four.

Last week, Wilkes defeated Muhlenberg, 18-42, while losing its first meet of the year to Scranton, 33-23, in a triangular event at Kirby Park.

Thomas, [who else], took first with a time of 26:54. He was followed by four Scranton Royals, who tied for second with a clocking of 28:07: Joe Haggerty, Mike Brennan, Jim Haggerty, and Ron Miller.

Ed Eppler of Wilkes finished sixth at 28:37, just ahead of Muhlenberg's Howard Gerstein. The Blue and Gold took the next two slots with Don Patrick, 28:50, and Dave Boris, 28:55, finishing eighth and ninth. Vince D'Amato of Wilkes came in 12th with a clocking of 29:36.

On Friday, Wilkes defeated Albright, 26-29, but lost to Philadelphia Textile, 26-29, and Delaware Valley, 20-43 in a quadrangular meet at Reading.

Thomas again finished first with a time of 29:12 over the 5.5 mile Albright course, establishing a new record for that layout.

Albright's Scott Wolfe followed Thomas with a 29:37, just ahead of John Marble of Phila. Textile with 29:54.

Finishing for Wilkes were Ed Eppler (13th) 31:43; Dave Boris (14th) 31:44; Dave Kerek (21st) 33:22; Jeff Davis (23rd) 33:28; Don Patrick (26th) 34:09; Dan Rittenhouse (27th) 34:16; and Roger Davis (28th) 34:28.

The Blue and Gold, now 4-3-1, hosted Lebanon Valley yesterday, and will entertain Albright next Wednesday at the Kirby Park course.

Huskies Embarrass Gridders; Brace For String Of MAC Foes

All right, who was humming "I'm Singing In The Rain?" because of that brazen display of arrogance, you've got the football team singing "I've Got the Gridiron Blues." When will you ever learn?

God only knows what they will be singing next week, after facing undefeated Upsala on Saturday. Instead of the traditional football equipment such as shoulder pads, helmets, etc., maybe they should be equipped with snorkles, fins, and a portable wailing wall for when it's all over.

In case you were fortunate enough to miss last week's travesty, far be it for me to leave you groping in the dark.

The contest was similar to a Heights Packers vs. Parsons Giants game. Miniature men trying to hang on to a ball that was at least twice the size of their hands. It looked like they were playing with a jellyfish instead of a ball.

SPORTS

The first time Wilkes had the ball, Mike Wilson was sacked twice and Dan Pisarcik mis-handled a snap on a punt attempt and he also was sacked. Bloom takes over on our heroes' 16. Enter Tony Couto, John Lack and the boys. On three successive plays they stymied the Huskies. Tom Yuhus had a sack, Mike Molitoris made a fine defensive play, and Lack came up with a diving interception.

Enter our offense. Dave Fritzges drops a third down pass. Enter our defense.

Enter our offense. Rich Chapman fumbles a pitchout at the Wilkes 25. Enter our defense. Tony Couto makes a fine play on a blitz to halt the Bloom drive and Dan McCallum missed a 28 yard field goal attempt.

Enter our offense. Wilson fumbles at the 22 under a terrifying rush. Enter our defense. Bloom has a TD called back on a penalty and they have to try for another field goal and this was also missed by McCallum. Whew! At this point you have to wonder if McCallum's father is an alumni of Wilkes. They must have been saying to themselves, "We're lucky to still be in this one. We're giving it to them and they don't want it." Unfortunately, slippery hands still prevailed.

Enter our offense. Chapman fumbles again at the 25 of Wilkes. At this point, Bloom has to be saying to themselves, "I can't believe this. This is too easy!"

Finally Mike Morrucci, the 9th ranked rusher in the country, bulled over from 3 yards for a Bloomsburg TD and thereby added a little sanity to the proceedings. McCallum finally made a kick and that was an omen of what was to come.

Ah, this merriment continued. Despite the ineptitude of the offense, Wilkes was still miraculously in the game. Behind by only 7 points, there was still plenty of time to regroup at halftime. Now this is the kicker. With only 45 seconds left in the half, Wilson tried to throw long. Alas and alack, he fumbled it and the Huskies had golden opportunity number 5 staring them in the face. Tony Williams made short order of this one, darting over from the 4 for the TD. McCallum added the point and it was 14-0 at the half.

If you can believe it, the second half was worse. Pisarcik again failed to get a punt away and Bloom took over at the Wilkes 25. Aided by a personal foul call that gave them a first and goal, QB Perrotti scored on a roll-out and with McCallum's kick it was 21-0.

The game was so pathetic, it started to get funny. I don't want it to sound like Wilkes was the only comedy team standing in the rain. Bloomsburg wasn't exactly the straight man either. The third quarter saw a rapid succession of turnovers that was ludicrous. It looked like Alphonse and Gaston in raingear.

The only Wilkes score came on an "excuse me" catch in the endzone by TE Paul Wengen. Tom Breese blocked a punt inside the 15 yard line of Bloom but a personal foul almost took the Colonels out of range. Graciously, Bloom reciprocated the personal foul to move the Wilkesmen inside the 15 again.

By this time Bill Slavoski had taken over for fallen QB's Wilson and Pete Maxwell. He threw a blooper into the endzone that bounced off a defender's hands and into Wengen's. Surprise!! Paul was really the only sign of life in the offensive unit with 4 receptions for 47 yards and a TD.

After the score, the game went from ridiculous to downright silly. Rick Chapman let a punt roll right through his legs at the goal line that was recovered in the endzone by an astonished, but grateful Bloom player. Joel Kane then decided to take matters into his own hands by catching a screen pass. Now, boys!

Bloom was only too anxious to rub salt in the wounds as they continued to pour it on instead of run out the clock. McCallum's 42 yard FG late in the game was a bush move on the part of the Husky coaching staff.

Thomas, [who else], took first with a time of 26:54. He was followed by four Scranton Royals, who tied for second with a clocking of 28:07: Joe Haggerty, Mike Brennan, Jim Haggerty, and Ron Miller.

Ed Eppler of Wilkes finished sixth at 28:37, just ahead of Muhlenberg's Howard Gerstein. The Blue and Gold took the next two slots with Don Patrick, 28:50, and Dave Boris, 28:55, finishing eighth and ninth. Vince D'Amato of Wilkes came in 12th with a clocking of 29:36.

On Friday, Wilkes defeated Albright, 26-29, but lost to Philadelphia Textile, 26-29, and Delaware Valley, 20-43 in a quadrangular meet at Reading.

Thomas again finished first with a time of 29:12 over the 5.5 mile Albright course, establishing a new record for that layout.

Albright's Scott Wolfe followed Thomas with a 29:37, just ahead of John Marble of Phila. Textile with 29:54.

Finishing for Wilkes were Ed Eppler (13th) 31:43; Dave Boris (14th) 31:44; Dave Kerek (21st) 33:22; Jeff Davis (23rd) 33:28; Don Patrick (26th) 34:09; Dan Rittenhouse (27th) 34:16; and Roger Davis (28th) 34:28.

The Blue and Gold, now 4-3-1, hosted Lebanon Valley yesterday, and will entertain Albright next Wednesday at the Kirby Park course.

A HOMER? Hardly. Carmen "Homer" Lopresto was the only homer that the Colonels had, however, charges upstream in last week's loss to Bloomsburg. He Photo by Doug Rubinstein

Huskies Embarrass Gridders; Brace For String Of MAC Foes

All right, who was humming "I'm Singing In The Rain?" because of that brazen display of arrogance, you've got the football team singing "I've Got the Gridiron Blues." When will you ever learn?

God only knows what they will be singing next week, after facing undefeated Upsala on Saturday. Instead of the traditional football equipment such as shoulder pads, helmets, etc., maybe they should be equipped with snorkles, fins, and a portable wailing wall for when it's all over.

In case you were fortunate enough to miss last week's travesty, far be it for me to leave you groping in the dark.

The contest was similar to a Heights Packers vs. Parsons Giants game. Miniature men trying to hang on to a ball that was at least twice the size of their hands. It looked like they were playing with a jellyfish instead of a ball.

SPORTS

The first time Wilkes had the ball, Mike Wilson was sacked twice and Dan Pisarcik mis-handled a snap on a punt attempt and he also was sacked. Bloom takes over on our heroes' 16. Enter Tony Couto, John Lack and the boys. On three successive plays they stymied the Huskies. Tom Yuhas had a sack, Mike Molitoris made a fine defensive play, and Lack came up with a diving interception.

Enter our offense. Dave Fritzges drops a third down pass. Enter our defense.

Enter our offense. Rich Chapman fumbles a pitchout at the Wilkes 25. Enter our defense. Tony Couto makes a fine play on a blitz to halt the Bloom drive and Dan McCallum missed a 28 yard field goal attempt.

Enter our offense. Wilson fumbles at the 22 under a terrifying rush. Enter our defense. Bloom has a TD called back on a penalty and they have to try for another field goal and this was also missed by McCallum. Whew! At this point you have to wonder if McCallum's father is an alumni of Wilkes. They must have been saying to themselves, "We're lucky to still be in this one. We're giving it to them and they don't want it." Unfortunately, slippery hands still prevailed.

Enter our offense. Chapman fumbles again at the 25 of Wilkes. At this point, Bloom has to be saying to themselves, "I can't believe this. This is too easy!"

Finally Mike Morrucci, the 9th ranked rusher in the country, bulled over from 3 yards for a Bloomsburg TD and thereby added a little sanity to the proceedings. McCallum finally made a kick and that was an omen of what was to come.

Ah, this merriment continued. Despite the ineptitude of the offense, Wilkes was still miraculously in the game. Behind by only 7 points, there was still plenty of time to regroup at halftime. Now this is the kicker. With only 45 seconds left in the half, Wilson tried to throw long. Alas and alack, he fumbled it and the Huskies had golden opportunity number 5 staring them in the face. Tony Williams made short order of this one, darting over from the 4 for the TD. McCallum added the point and it was 14-0 at the half.

If you can believe it, the second half was worse. Pisarcik again failed to get a punt away and Bloom took over at the Wilkes 25. Aided by a personal foul call that gave them a first and goal, QB Perrotti scored on a roll-out and with McCallum's kick it was 21-0.

The game was so pathetic, it started to get funny. I don't want it to sound like Wilkes was the only comedy team standing in the rain. Bloomsburg wasn't exactly the straight man either. The third quarter saw a rapid succession of turnovers that was ludicrous. It looked like Alphonse and Gaston in raingear.

The only Wilkes score came on an "excuse me" catch in the endzone by TE Paul Wengen. Tom Breese blocked a punt inside the 15 yard line of Bloom but a personal foul almost took the Colonels out of range. Graciously, Bloom reciprocated the personal foul to move the Wilkesmen inside the 15 again.

By this time Bill Slavoski had taken over for fallen QB's Wilson and Pete Maxwell. He threw a bloopster into the endzone that bounced off a defender's hands and into Wengen's. Surprise!! Paul was really the only sign of life in the offensive unit with 4 receptions for 47 yards and a TD.

After the score, the game went from ridiculous to downright silly. Rick Chapman let a punt roll right through his legs at the goal line that was recovered in the endzone by an astonished, but grateful Bloom player. Joel Kane then decided to take matters into his own hands by catching a screen pass. Now, boys!

Bloom was only too anxious to rub salt in the wounds as they continued to pour it on instead of run out the clock. McCallum's 42 yard FG late in the game was a bush move on the part of the Husky coaching staff.
