WILKES COLLEGE QUARTERLY

On the Cover

James F. Ferris, '56 has been, for the last 25 years, a positive force in his chosen field of education. He has made a significant contribution to students by generating energy through "Mindpower," at first as a teacher and currently as an administrator in the Wyoming Valley West School District.

In the recent election held by the Alumni Association for national officers, Jim was elected President for 1983. He resides with his wife the former Mary Ellen Ross and their three children in Kingston.

CAMPAIGN—'82: AN INVESTMENT IN MINDPOWER

With the proposed cutbacks in financial aid to higher education (see additional financial aid related articles in this issue) it is becoming increasingly important for Wilkes College to maintain a solid program of scholarship assistance to deserving and capable students.

In its continuing commitment to assist students in financing their Wilkes education, the College is now in the process of seeking support from alumni and friends and asking for your help in providing MINDPOWER to our students who will, in turn, provide MINDPOWER to Wyoming Valley, Northeastern Pennsylvania and the Nation.

The Wilkes MINDPOWER theme is part of a national program developed by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) designed to recognize the contributions of higher education to American society.

College personnel, community leaders, alumni and students are all taking active roles in making Campaign-'82 successful.

Ms. Debbie Dunleavy, '74, anchorwoman for WDAU-TV 22 in Scranton, was the guest speaker for the official campaign kickoff held in the Dorothy Dickson Darte Center for the Performing Arts.

This year's Campaign Leadership consists of: Robert S. Capin, president; William L. Conyngham, chairman of the board of trustees; Eugene Roth, chairman of the development committee; Mr. Roy E. Morgan, campaign chairman; Mr. Frear Scovell, campaign vice chairman; and Mr. Richard L. Bunn, '55, chairman of the alumni appeal.

Attention — Class of 1981!!

If you have not updated your alumni file during the past several months, this is a reminder for you to do so now.

Last summer, you were sent a set of three update cards by the Alumni Office; since that time, many of you have relocated because of employment or graduate school location, and we want to have the latest information in your file. So please take a minute or two and send in an Update Card to the College and include those significant events that have occurred since graduation — marriage, job placement, change of address, and so forth. We will appreciate it!

PULITZER PRIZE WINNING COLUMNIST ADDRESSES ROSEN LECTURE SERIES AUDIENCE

Over 400 people listened to Pulitzer Prize winning New York Times columnist Mr. Anthony Lewis deliver the inaugural lecture of the Wilkes College Rosenn Lecture Series in Law and Humanities in the Dorothy Dickson Darte Center for the Performing Arts recently.

Lewis, who addressed the topic Enforcing Our Rights, has twice won the coveted Pulitzer Prize and is currently the author of a twice-weekly column for The New York Times. It was in 1955 that the Harvard graduate won his first Pulitzer for a series of articles he wrote for The Washington Daily

News on the dismissal of a Navy employee as a security risk. The articles led to the reinstatement of the employee and later became the basis for a movie called "Three Brave Men."

Lewis joined the Washington staff of The New York Times in 1955 where he was assigned to cover the events of the Supreme Court. His coverage of the nation's highest court won him his second Pulitzer Prize in 1963.

Lewis is considered to be an expert on the constitutional rights and duties of the press and has written several books including "Gideon's Trumpet," about a landmark case before the U.S. Supreme Court, and "Portrait of a Decade," about changes in American race relations.

Following his visit to Wilkes, Lewis returned to his home in Boston and prepared his next article for The Times. His topic was Wilkes College and how proposed cutbacks in financial aid will impact higher education. The article is reprinted, with permission from The New York Times, in this issue.

The Rosenn Lecture Series in Law and Humanities was established in honor of Judge Max Rosenn by his former law clerks, family and friends to commemorate the Tenth Anniversary of Rosenn's appointment as Judge of the United States Court of Appeals, 3rd Circuit. The lecture series features internationally known speakers in the fields of law and the humanities.

PROJECT: F.A.C.T. GROUP UNVEILS SPECIAL CAMPAIGN

The Presidents of several educational institutions from the Luzerne County (Pa.) area met with members of the local media on February 24 to make clear what the effects of President Reagan's proposed financial aid cuts to higher education will mean to students, parents, the local economy, their respective institutions, and higher education in general. The President's unveiled PROJECT: F.A.C.T. (Financial Aid Commitment Team) which views its joint purpose as a springboard to inform and advise all community constituencies about matters relating to financial aid to higher education. An analysis of the financial aid situation facing Wilkes students, as well as other financial aid-related articles can be found in this issue of The Quarterly.

ANNIVERSARY PLANS TAKING SHAPE

As the 1982-83 Academic Year approaches, members of the College Family are hard at work making preparations for the Fiftieth Anniversary of Wilkes College. Under the general chairmanship of Mr. Carey Evans and the coordinating efforts of Mr. John Chwalek, anniversary plans are now taking shape and will provide the College and the Community with a varied year-long program of cultural, social, educational, and athletic events.

The Anniversary Year will officially open with a Convocation on Friday, September 24 which will include special guests from Wilkes and Bucknell University. Wilkes was founded as Bucknell University Junior College in 1933.

On Saturday, September 25, the internationally heralded Fitzwilliam String Quartet, which has garnered world-wide acclaim for its quintessential interpretation of the string quartets of Dmitri Shostakovich, will perform in the Dorothy Dickson Darte Center for the Performing Arts on campus.

John Chwalek recently announced the following tentative schedule of events for the Fiftieth Anniversary Year — 1982-83:

SEPTEMBER:

LOUIS NEUMAN

Personnel Profiles

Louis Neuman, known by the many athletes who have passed through Wilkes College as "Big Lou of Ralston Field" is in good health and continues to keep Wilkes' athletic fields in good shape. Lou is a graduate of the Pennsylvania State University School of Turf and Grounds Maintenance and proudly says that he is now in his seventeenth year at Wilkes College.

Throughout his career at Wilkes Lou has been involved in the preparation of fields for various events which include football, baseball, field hockey, tennis, cross country, soccer, golf and all the intramural sports fields.

"One of the happiest memories I have of Ralston Field began at 4 a.m. one morning many years ago," Lou recalled. "I went to the field to set up for national television coverage at the time when the Wilkes Colonels (football) had the longest winning streak in the nation. The morning was cold and I had to check all the riggings for safety and the cables for even tension. I really enjoyed the national exposure," he said.

As Lou continues his daily groundskeeping of the College athletic fields he remembers vividly all of those special times out of the past. "I have always enjoyed, and will continue to enjoy, working with all the fine people associated with the sports programs here at the College. I sincerely wish all the graduates, present students, and all others who have become part of Wilkes College the best of health, success and happiness in the future. The memories and experiences are everlasting." O

Anniversary Edition of Alumni Directory Now Taking Shape

Work on the College's 50th Anniversary Edition of the Alumni Directory is well under way. Soon all Alumni will receive a brief questionnaire with a follow-up request to be sent one month later. The prompt return of these questionnaires is essential so that the information in the Directory will be current and complete. The completed questionnaires as well as a list of all Alumni who do not respond to either mailing will be turned over to the publisher for telephone follow-up.

Alumni will then be contacted directly by the Harris Publishing Company to verify information and to see whether you wish to purchase a Directory. Alumni with current addresses who have not responded to the questionnaires and are not reached by phone by the Harris representatives will appear in the Directory, but with the information of last record as shown in our Office files. The Directory will be of great value not only to us here on campus, but also to Alumni in the field who desire information on their classmates and friends; however, the accuracy of the published information depends on the timely response of all Alumni.

Alumni will be listed alphabetically, geographically, and by class year. Each listing will contain name, class year, degree(s), residence address and phone number, and business or professional information when available.

If you have not yet received your questionnaire or if you do not wish to be listed in the Directory, please notify the Alumni Office in writing. Remember, too, that the project will cost the College nothing — The Harris Company will compile, publish, and market the directory, financing the operation solely through the sale of individual Directory copies to Alumni only. Release of the 50th Anniversary Edition is scheduled for Fall 1982.

HOMECOMING COMMITTEE

Members of the 1982 Alumni Homecoming Committee have been meeting on a regular basis to make plans for the special 50th Anniversary Year Homecoming Extravaganza. According to committee members this year's event will be held October 8-10 and will feature a variety of athletic, social, educational, and recreational events. A tentative listing of homecoming events can be found in this issue of The Quarterly.

Andrea Petrasek, child development supervisor, co-chairperson of the parade and chairperson of the alumni float; Chris Baron, guidance counselor, co-chairperson of homecoming; and Jenny Centrella, secretary, co-chairperson of the Sunday Brunch. # JIM FERRIS '56

A POSITIVE FORCE

by Jane Manganello

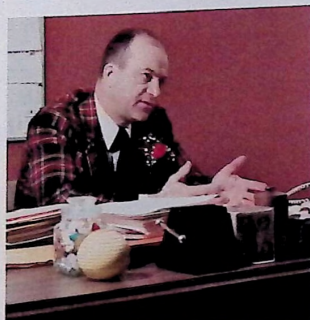

Last July 16, the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) initiated a nationwide campaign built around the central theme "America's Energy is Mindpower."

The concept is that it is the energy produced by the development of mindpower which will solve the complex problems of the future and, according to CASE, must be a "legacy given to those who will need to be the problem solvers for whatever lies ahead."

Needless to say that Wilkes, long before the CASE campaign or theme was conceived, had traditionally held to this goal and what better way to accomplish it than through the education of those who will teach: who have the opportunity every day to influence not one mind, but hundreds, in elementary and high schools throughout the nation.

Jim Ferris, principal in the Wyoming Valley West School District and a Wilkes grad with a B.S. in Education, is an excellent example of the success of those endeavors. For 26 years Jim has been a propagator of energy through mindpower; he is a teacher. Graduated from Wilkes in 1956, Jim's career has taken him through every level of teaching — from classroom and coaching to counseling to administrator. Through all the years since 1956, he has maintained a close affiliation with Wilkes. "Yes, I have stayed close to Wilkes. Without the encouragement I received from people at Wilkes in the beginning, I seriously doubt that College would have been financially possible for me. I remember waiting outside George Ralston's office thinking about just how I was going to handle financing four years of school, and how, by the time I left his office I felt convinced that it was all possible for me. George spent hours guiding me through the maze of information about grants and scholarships and jobs on campus. He remained my friend and counselor throughout my four years at school."

An outstanding athlete, he excelled in basketball, soccer, and baseball. "Jim had extremely good natural ability as an athlete," Ralston remembered "and more important, he had the determination to give 100% of himself to any contest. He certainly lived up to the full measure of his potential, and he still does," Ralston stated.

Jim at work in his office at the High School in Plymouth, Pa.

Jim was hired by the Kingston School District in 1956 as a math teacher and basketball coach. At the same time, he served as head soccer coach for eight years at Wilkes. "It was busy," he said, smiling "but I enjoyed it."

When a student in high school, one of Jim's classmates was Mary Ellen Ross, who was to become Mrs. James Ferris in December of 1958. After they were married, Jim returned to school to get his Master's degree in Education from Bucknell, which he earned in June of 1961. They had, in 1960, become the parents of a baby girl, Carol, and would have two more children, Marie, born in 1962, and James, born in 1967.

During the summer of 1966, the schools formed a jointure which took schools from nine townships and incorporated them into one system. "They (school board officials) were meeting in Forty Fort realigning the new system, and I received a phone call from Dr. William Smodic, who was then superintendent of schools in the new Wyoming Valley West District. He asked me how I felt about moving into administration, and I accepted the position of assistant principal." Jim then went on to become principal of grades 9-12.

The move to administration took him out of the classroom, but not away from the students. Les Nicholas, who teaches in the high school and who is a Wilkes alumnus '81, states, "The students and faculty here have a lot of respect for Mr. Ferris. He is always on top of everything and is very accessible when there's a problem. He is supportive of both students and teachers."

Had Jim always wanted to be a teacher? "When I went into Wilkes I may have toyed with the idea of engineering or one of the sciences, but early on I decided that I wanted to teach." The years have seemed rewarding for him in his chosen field, though there have been difficult times. In 1972 Hurricane Agnes put most of his world under water. "My home and my school were both flooded," he said "and when we finally got back to class in late fall of '72, we had double sessions. Our classes started at 7:20 a.m. and continued until 5:30 p.m. because we lost schools and had to accommodate all students. Adjustments, for some, were difficult, but we did come back even stronger, I think, than before."

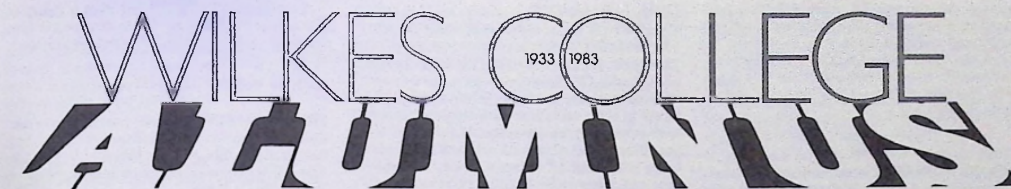

When asked the inevitable question — How do you compare students today with those of prior years, he said, "Students are much the same now, today a bit more aware and sophisticated because of TV, but basically really good. We have many serious students; you unlock something in his or her mind and they really take off. That's the gratifying part."

Art Hoover, Associate Dean of Student Affairs and a long-time friend of Jim's who was a year ahead of him at Wilkes, said, "I don't think anything defeats Jim for very long. I watched him as a student athlete who, many times, had performed under intense pressure and he always excelled. During the years I served as Director of Alumni Relations, he never once said no to anything the Alumni Association asked of him. He has held office at the local and national association level and has always been a positive force for Wilkes College."

As a person, a student, an athlete, an alumnus, and, most important, a teacher, Jim Ferris has made a significant contribution to the generating of energy through mindpower. He contributes still to the "legacy" for those who choose to lead through teaching.

Les Nicholas, also an alumnus, teaches a class of Wyoming Valley West students

She had previously been Marketing Officer with that organization. Donna also earned a Master's degree in Counseling at Rollins College, also in Winter Park, FL.

THOMAS J. WARD is manager of planning, methods, and procedures with the Pennsylvania Gas and Water Company, and is one of those twenty selected to attend "Leadership Wilkes-Barre." For those of you who have carefully read these class notes, you found that seven of the twenty individuals in that group were Wilkes Alumni. The seminar is designed to train the leaders of the future for Wyoming Valley, and so it comes as no surprise that 35% of that group studied here at Wilkes. We have been doing the job of training leaders for nearly fifty years, and we thank Bob, Paul, Lee, Marino, Tom Ward and Tom Kelly, and Ron for being tangible examples of the role played by the College in the life of the community.

1978

DEBORAH UGOCHUKWU is enrolled as a graduate student at Southeastern University. She lives in Adelphi, MD.

KAREN SUPKOSKI and DAVID J. McELWEE '79 were married recently. They are residing in Bloomsburg, PA, where Karen is a staff nurse in the Intensive Care Unit of Geisinger Medical Center, Danville, and David is an agent with Equitable Life Assurance Society. Best wishes, folks.

Why aren't there more class notes in this issue? Simply put, it's all we had. The volume of update cards has fallen off dramatically in the past six months, and we are back to hunting for information to include about alumni.

You can help by sending in an update card if you have not done so during the past year, or if you have news to share with the alumni body. Your classmates and friends look forward to reading about you, just as you enjoy reading about them. So take a minute and send us an update card — we'll even pay the postage just to hear from you — the cards are Business Reply cards, and need no stamp.

You will also notice the statement "Address Correction Requested" on the mailing face of the Quarterly and on some of the other mail you receive from the office. This is an instruction to the Postal Service to report back to us changes of address of the recipient. The post office does a good job, too, because each time we mail an issue, we receive as many as 250 address changes from the Service. While we appreciate these new addresses, we must pay 25 cents for each one — which costs us over $1,000 a year in additional postage expenses. By making you aware of these costs, we hope you will take the initiative and tell us about impending changes of address with sufficient lead-time so that we can change our records before a new mailing is sent to your old address. Just jot the information down, giving us your name, new address, and effective date of the change, and you can help us stop spending so much money on tracing lost alumni. Please — help!!

ATTENTION PARENTS!

If this magazine is addressed to your son or daughter who no longer maintains a permanent address at your home, please clip off the address label on back cover and return it with the correct address to the Alumni Office at Wilkes College. Thank you for helping us update our records.

Wilkes College admits students of any race, color and national or ethnic origin.

AL MOLOSH MAN OF THE YEAR AT WILKES

Al Molosh received triple honors at the college athletic dinner December 12 in the cafeteria. The 1951 football co-captain received the Outstanding Lineman of the Year Trophy, the Joseph Gallagher Memorial Trophy, and the Howard W. Davis Memorial Trophy.

The senior from Brooklyn, NY was awarded the Davis Trophy for achievement in athletics, sportsmanship, leadership and scholarship last year and is the first two-time winner.

Also receiving a mark of high esteem and a trophy for his athletic prowess was George Elias, junior from Wilkes-Barre, who was named Outstanding Back of the Year. His election as co-captain of the 1952 football squad, along with Dan Pinkowski, was also announced at the dinner by head coach George Ralston.

Dr. Farley spoke briefly and offered congratulations to all Wilkes teams of the past year. He stressed that athletics must be seen in a proper perspective. He went on to relate through personal experience that it is the mental and physical training gained from college athletics that counts most.

RESEARCH PROGRAM FOR WILKES LABS

A Wilkes-Barre physician's zeal for research has enabled the College to establish a program of medical research within its biology department.

The physician is Dr. Sheldon G. Cohen, who has been authorized by the U.S. Public Health Service to use Wilkes facilities for carrying on the research he began as an immunologist in the Gibson Laboratories of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine.

Having received two substantial grants from the National Heart Institute and the National Microbiological Institute, subdivisions of the Public Health Service, Dr. Cohen is continuing his investigation of the role of infection, allergy, and immunity in rheumatic fever and tuberculosis.

A fellow of the American College of Allergists, the new research associate is working closely with Walter E. Mokychic, '50, assistant in biology, in the college laboratories.

WILKES TO TRAIN HEAD NURSES AND INSTRUCTORS

As some 16 student nurses from Wyoming Valley Hospital complete their pre-clinical period of training at Wilkes under an arrangement that may be extended to include other hospitals in the area, word comes from the President's office that Miss Ruth Jessee of Presbyterian Hospital, Philadelphia, will head the recently approved two-year course leading to the Bachelor of Science degree in nursing education. She will undertake her duties here in September, 1952.

The new program in nursing education is intended to supply hospitals and schools of nursing with instructors, head nurses, and supervisors. Any state-registered nurse graduated from an approved school of nursing may become a candidate for the degree. Such a student may receive a maximum of 60 credits for work done in the school of nursing but must earn at the College at least 60 of the 120 credits required for the degree.

THE WILKES COLLEGE STORY

On Wednesday morning, November 8, 1961, at 8:47 o'clock, the John Chancellor "Today" program brought to thousands of television viewers on the National Broadcasting Company network the "Wilkes College Story." If you were one of the many alumni, notified by postal, who saw the capsule, no doubt it brought you a certain nostalgia of undergraduate days. From others who never heard of Wilkes College before the show was aired, it brought congratulatory messages. So much for the tremendous impact the effort commanded.

The filmed segment of "Today" consumed just about seven minutes, yet it involved more than two working days for the NBC production crew who arrived on the campus the week before the telecast. Heading the vanguard the previous Wednesday was Paul Cunningham, "Today's" crack roving reporter. Met at the Wilkes-Barre/Scranton Airport by John Whitby and John Chwalek, both of whom were directly responsible for NBC's interest in the college, Mr. Cunningham began script preparation for the program which was to be aired the following week. Meeting with Dr. Farley and members of the Administration and later with the heads of various departments, the announcer-producer mapped out his production schedule for the following day.

Bright and early the NBC camera crew arrived Thursday and the campus of the College resembled somewhat the West Coast's Television City. For those of you who saw "Today" on November 8, no description is necessary; for those of you who did not, no description is possible.

Here was a College that was unique, and because of its uniqueness, it was selected by "Today" from hundreds of other independent colleges to call the Nation's attention to the importance of higher education to community growth and progress. And its impact upon the viewers was great.

From Maine, California, Florida, Arizona, and other states of the Union, letters came to the College. All of them praised the program; some requested information about the College.

Certainly, no one can deny that Wilkes College won thousands of friends. Only with the passage of time will one be able to determine how many alumni were added because of "Today."

WHO . . . WHAT . . . WHERE . . . We all know the year was 1961 (and reported in 1962), but why were these 900-1,000 people gathered together? A special prize for the alumnus who identifies the most people in the photo and tells where and why the gathering took place.

1972

$300,000 ALUMNI CHALLENGE FACING ALUMNI

Letters have been mailed to some 8,000 Wilkes College Alumni appealing for funds to meet the goal of the Alumni Challenge — $300,000 from 3,000 alumni by June 30, 1973.

The letter was sent by Robert H. Melson, chairman of the 1972 Wilkes College Alumni Fund and vice president of the administration, Carpenter Technology Corporation.

Melson stated in part: "Over the years, at one time or another, all of us have been especially proud of our association with Wilkes College. Whether it was a particular event or the combination of many forces and events which have influenced the continued growth and reputation of Wilkes, we as alumni hold a stake in all that is Wilkes. And now, more than ever before, we must give active tangible support to sustain our stake in Wilkes."

Melson called attention to the matching gift programs in which many organizations participate. Employees affiliated with a Matching Gift Company may have their gifts to Wilkes matched in whole or part by the organization.

Alumni were also invited to join the Gene Farley Club, membership of which is open to all alumni who contribute a minimum of $100 a year to the Alumni Fund.

SENIOR TEDDY YEAGER SELECTED AS WILKES ATHLETE OF YEAR

Four-year football and baseball standout Ted Yeager was accorded "Athlete of the Year" honors at the college's 26th annual athletic dinner on April 16. The 5-6, 160 pound mini-mite from Catawissa succeeds last year's winner, Dave Kaschak, as the recipient of Wilkes College's most coveted athletic honor.

Football was his forte and the diminutive halfback thrilled Colonel faithful for four seasons, ripping off 2,869 yards of real estate. On 11 separate occasions, the "Catawissa Flash" as he was affectionately called, broke the game century yard barrier. Earlier this year he joined Joe Wiendl in Blue and Gold football immortality by having his famed number "21" retired by the athletic committee.

Complimenting Yeager on the female side of the dias was women's basketball and hockey fixture Kathy Davies.

As I See It

(Bob Barrall was born and reared in Pennsylvania, and earned the AB in History in 1953 at Wilkes. He taught history and English at Moorestown High School in New Jersey for some twenty years, twelve of those years in a wheelchair following the onset of multiple sclerosis and other handicaps. The essays included in AS I SEE IT were written while Bob was a resident-patient at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Palo Alto, California for the building newspaper there.)

AS I SEE IT, harvest time is a good time to reap the rewards for cultivating our own gardens and a good time to prepare the soil for new crops. It is altogether fitting that people, young and old, return to their studies to prepare the intellectual soil for a new crop of enlightened souls. This is the time the leaves begin to turn on the trees and in the notebooks. If we watch during the coming year what we plant in our minds day by day, next autumn we will reap a harvest of greater happiness and more worthy lives.

As I see it, education is the whole purpose of life. True, education deals with what many people call facts. Facts, to be sure, are interesting things. By themselves, however, facts are always dependent on many other things, such as application, relevancy, appropriateness, timeliness, interpretation, context, and other facts. Education is always more than facts. Education deals with the meaning of facts. It may be, as suggested long ago by a sage, that the only real fact is that true education is what is left after all the facts are forgotten. We are here to learn more than mere facts; we are here to learn the meaning, relationship, and efficient, worthy use of the facts in our lives.

Education, clearly defined — and purely refined by living — builds character. Anyone can be a character, but having character is better. We must make the most and the best of what we are and what we have. The difference between success and failure is often determined not so much by what happens to us but by what we let it do to us, or for us. We have the incredible godlike power to make the right things happen! This is our birthright and our privilege. This is character. This is education in action.

I was amused some years ago when I read somewhere that the value of a liberal education is that it teaches us to hate the wealth it keeps us from earning. In reflection, many years later, I would say that he who hates wealth is a crazy, mixed-up cowboy who has never left the ranch.

That kind of thinking comes from shallow minds with an "education" that is neither liberal nor educational. Wealth by itself is neither good nor bad. Wrong use of wealth leads to destruction. Right use of wealth leads to greater happiness, greater power to serve, and greater fulfillment. It beats poverty by a mile, for my money. Similarly, wrong use of education leads to disaster. Right use of education opens windows in our minds and opportunities in our lives.

I was also amused some years ago when I read a sign, in an examination room, that read something like this: "When you were born, you were given two ends, one to think with and one to sit on. What happens to you in life depends on which end you use. Heads, you win. Tails, you lose."

There is some truth to this statement, but I do wish more people would learn to use their hearts as well as their heads. Maybe such things as war and poverty would only be history lessons about man's past stupidity. Isn't it amazing that such conditions still persist in a world that turns out more geniuses with more university degrees than ever before? Obviously, we are developing the mind and neglecting the soul. Obviously, too, developing the mind and not the soul is NOT education. It is personal and social suicide.

Many people in our society seek education for the wrong reasons or for reasons that are too limited to lead to personal fulfillment. Some seek better jobs, less work, more pay, power over others, more idle time, public acclaim, private fortunes, etc. Some find a sense of security in education without ever finding it in their own souls. There really is only one good reason to become educated — to become better human beings living better lives in perfect harmony with God, our fellow man, and ourselves. Anything less than that, anything other than that, is rubbish.

The master teacher Jesus told it right, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all things shall be added unto you." Socrates said, "Know thyself." Saint Augustine suggested we find ourselves — because when we truly find ourselves, we shall have found God. Unless we find ourselves doing the most of the best we can do for everyone we meet, we can hardly call ourselves "educated."

"Better jobs" and "more money" are probably the biggest motivators toward more education.

Would that we would be seeking "better lives" and "more soul." Education helps, but one does not need formal education to get a good job or to get rich. To get money and position, one needs native intelligence, desire, energy, ambition, aggressiveness, a good idea, the right breaks, and persistence. The records are full of success stories of poor kids without much formal education who became rich, famous, and powerful. If we don't have the other qualities, we won't "make it" no matter how much formal education we have. But when we add soul to those other qualities, we have an indomitable combination for greatness — with or without formal education.

I believe in education, both formal and informal. There is no substitute for the fellow who knows his job. The old tale "It's not what you know, but who you know" is pure hogwash. Knowing the right people might get a fellow a job, but if he doesn't know the right things, chances are he won't keep the job long. There is no substitute for knowing the right things and being the right kind of person. If a person knows the right things, the right people will get to know him if he circulates enough. Everyone is looking for productive people!

By the same token, inheriting wealth or having a rich uncle gives some advantages, but if a person does not have the qualities of a good human being, chances are that he won't keep the wealth or the advantages long. Formal education, often used as a means to acquire wealth and comfort, should be a means to live a better, richer, fuller, more worthy life. Most people learn more and do better things with their lives by having had a formal education than they would learn or do without the education. However, degrees don't guarantee anyone happiness or success. Nor do they necessarily bring wisdom or wealth.

All real education is self-education. It is self-enlightenment. It is something that happens differently within each man's soul and brain. It is understanding something personally in a way that was never before known to him. While education is never facts, books, or courses, it is often a reaction to facts, books, or courses. More often, it is a reaction to an idea, a teacher, another human being, or to life itself. Education is never regurgitation. It is increased awareness. It is revelation.

We don't give or provide our children an education. We simply create more and better situations where education takes place productively. We speed and expand the process of learning. Life and mind are the educators. We merely release the educators held captive within ourselves.

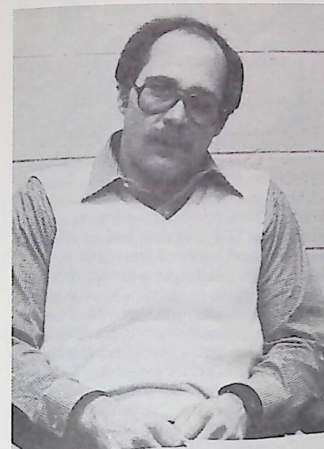

Perhaps education is what happens to us when we are rubbed the wrong way, rubbed the right way, and then notice and apply the difference wisely to life situations. Perhaps education is learning to "accentuate the positive and eliminate the negative," as the wise old songwriter says. Perhaps education is learning to live together peacefully, profitably, happily, willingly, and effectively. Perhaps education is learning to truly love one another. So be it!

UNSWORTH NEW FOOTBALL CHIEF

by: Eddie White, III

Veteran Wilkes football followers will be treated to a high-powered offensive attack when the 1982 grid Colonels take the field. Former Franklin College assistant grid coach Bill Unsworth was named as the new head football mentor at Wilkes in February succeeding Rollie Schmidt who resigned after 20 seasons at the helm of the blue and gold.

Unsworth, who was the offensive line coach at the Indiana school for the past five years, will bring his "Run and Shoot" offense to the Wilkes campus. This offense had its quarterbacks ranked among the nation's "Top 10" in the NAIA in 16 of the past 18 seasons. This past season, the "Run and Shoot," which features only one back and four receivers, was rated No. 1 in the NCAA Division II.

Unsworth was head football scout for Franklin from 1972-77 before becoming a defensive assistant in 1977. In 1978 he became a full-time assistant in charge of the offensive line. In addition to his football coaching duties at Franklin, he also served the school as head trainer, head wrestling coach and assistant professor of physical education.

"We're happy to be able to acquire a talent like Bill," said Wilkes president Robert S. Capin. "He has the experience we had been looking for and the personality to deal with our football team. We hope that his background and technical skills will lead to a very successful football program."

During Unsworth's five years at Franklin, the football team was conference champions in 1977, 1980 and 1981; runner-up in 1979; ranked No. 12 in the NCAA II in 1980 and 1981; No. 1 in the NCAA II pass offense in 1981; No. 2 in pass offense in 1980; No. 6 in NCAA II in scoring in 1981 and No. 3 in the NAIA in scoring in 1977.

Recruiting is one of the strong points for the 32-year old Unsworth. In his first year (1977), Franklin had 86 recruits visit the campus, but this past year, he helped raise that number to 230.

Another number Unsworth will be looking to raise this season will be wins for Wilkes. The Colonels are coming off their worst year ever, an 0-9 mark during the 1981 grid campaign.

A Status Report On Financial Aid

The word for the day is financial aid. The word for the next few days is financial aid. The word for the future is financial aid.

If you are currently a college student, or a parent of a college-bound student, or a parent with visions of sending your son or daughter to college someday, then yes, indeed, your word for the day should be financial aid.

On February 8 the President of the United States, Ronald Reagan, sent to Congress a proposed budget which, if fully accepted, would cut federal aid available on campuses by 50 percent for the academic year beginning September 1983. The budget cuts would eliminate over 2.3 million awards to needy students and impose restrictions on the Guaranteed Student Loan program, which would deprive some 600,000 graduate students of the principal means of financing their education.

Wilkes College, like virtually every other institution of higher learning across the country, is concerned and is taking action. At a recent press conference at Wilkes, College officials unveiled PROJECT: F.A.C.T. (Financial Aid Commitment Team) which is a joint effort by Wilkes, College Misericordia, King's College, The Pennsylvania State University (Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton Campuses), and Luzerne County Community College to inform and advise all college and community constituencies of the facts and figures which relate to President Reagan's proposed cutbacks. The intent is to put into clear and concise terms the impact this decision will have on students, colleges and the communities they serve.

The series of articles which follows is designed to help you better understand what has transpired thus far in the continuing financial aid story. The articles will also provide background information to those concerned enough to write their Congressman and senators in an effort to gain support for the survival of higher education into the future.

A HISTORY OF FEDERAL SUPPORT TO EDUCATION

SOURCE: American Council on Education
January 22, 1982

Federal support for education programs has been long-term and bipartisan.

When Congress enacted the National Defense Education Act in 1958 — at President Dwight Eisenhower's request — it said: "... the security of the nation requires the fullest development of the mental resources and technical skills of its young men and women ... We must increase our efforts to identify and educate more of the talent of this nation. This requires programs that will give assurance that no student of ability will be denied an opportunity for higher education because of financial need. ..."

President Lyndon Johnson, a former teacher, in a 1965 education message said: "Every child must be encouraged to get as much education as he has the ability to take. We want this not only for his sake, but for the nation's sake. Nothing matters more to the future of our country: not our military preparedness — for armed might is worthless if we lack the brainpower to build a world of peace; not our productive economy — for we cannot sustain growth without trained manpower; not our democratic system of government — for freedom is fragile if citizens are ignorant."

President Richard Nixon in 1970 declared: "No qualified student who wants to go to college should be barred by lack of money. That has long been a great American goal; I propose that we achieve it now ... The resulting legislation set up the Basic Education Opportunity or Pell Grant program.

President Jimmy Carter said in 1980: "Through the Middle Income Student Assistance Act we've brought college within the reach of every student in this nation who's qualified for higher education. The idea that lack of money should be no barrier to a college education is no longer a dream, it's a reality. ..."

This commitment is being challenged by the Reagan administration. Federal budget chief David Stockman has told the House Budget Committee: "I do not accept the notion that the federal government has an obligation to fund generous grants to anybody who wants to go to college. It seems to me that if people want to go to college bad enough, then there is opportunity and responsibility on their part to finance their way through the best they can."

A REVIEW OF PRESIDENT REAGAN'S PROPOSED CUTBACKS

SOURCE: Editorial Projects in Education
February 11, 1982

Pell Grants would be cut from $2.28 billion to $2.19 billion in the current fiscal year, then reduced by 36 percent to $1.4 billion in fiscal 1983. That is $1.4 billion below the program ceiling provided in the Reconciliation Act of last summer.

The changes, if accepted by Congress, would remove nearly one million students from eligibility — almost one-third of current recipients, higher-education organizations estimate.

In addition, the maximum Pell Grant award of $1,800 provided for under the current law would be cut to $1,600 next year by increasing the percentage of income that students and their families are expected to contribute to college costs.

► Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants. The SEOG awards, which currently serve about 615,000 students attending higher-priced institutions, public and private, would be eliminated.

► National Direct Student Loans. This program, in which new federal capital provides loans to 266,000 students, would be eliminated.

► State Student Incentive Grants. This assistance program, which matches state aid with federal money for more than 300,000 students, would be eliminated as well.

► College Work-Study Program. If this program is reduced by the proposed 25 percent, nearly 240,000 students would be forced out of this supplementary way of earning money for school.

► Graduate Fellowship Program. The Administration will seek to phase out this program, established under Title IX of the Higher Education Act and currently providing more than 1,200 fellowships to minorities and women.

► Guaranteed Student Loans. President Reagan's budget proposal would deny eligibility to graduate and professional students, who make up 15-20 percent of all borrowers.

Nationwide, about 600,000 graduate students — roughly half of those enrolled — are currently borrowing under the program, many of them close to the annual limit of $5,000. Graduate students would be eligible for Auxiliary Loans to Assist Students, which carry a 14-percent interest rate instead of the GSL's 9-percent rate.

In addition, the GSL origination fee would be doubled from 5 percent to 10 percent. A student who needed a $2,000 loan would have to borrow $2,200.

A $30,000 income-eligibility cap would be replaced by limiting eligibility to "unmet need" — that is, cost minus family contribution to other aid.

Additional Cuts. The Administration will seek an additional $142 million in student-aid cuts for the current fiscal year.

Cumulatively, the changes would represent a loss of over 2.4 million awards, which could force hundreds of thousands of students to drop out of college or change their educational plans, financial-aid experts are predicting.

Overall, President Reagan proposed cutting spending for programs now in the Department of Education to $10 billion in fiscal 1983 — about 25 percent less than the $13 billion provided by Congress for fiscal 1982. If Congress approves the Administration's plan to transfer some of the department's programs to other federal agencies, the budget for a stripped-down education foundation would total only $8.8 billion.

THE IMPACT AT HOME: WHAT THE CUTBACKS WILL MEAN AT WILKES

SOURCE: Mrs. Rachael Lohman
Director of Financial Aid
Wilkes College
February 17, 1982

The proposed reductions in financial aid for fiscal years 1982-83 and 1983-84 will adversely impact on a number of students at Wilkes College as it will on students at colleges throughout the country. Most students will realize a reduction in one or more components of their financial aid packages. Some students may have to postpone going to college, or try to attend part-time.

Proposed recessions for the 1982-83 academic year include a substantial reduction in Pell Grants (Basic Grant), National Direct Student Loans, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, and College Work-Study programs. The Reagan administration also plans additional restrictions on the Guaranteed Student Loan Program. For the 1983-84 academic year, the budget proposal calls for the elimination of the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant and the State Student Incentive Grants programs, further cuts in the Pell Grant and College Work-Study programs, and no new funding for the National Direct Student Loan program.

During the current academic year 1,103 Wilkes students have received Pell Grants amounting to $1,070,000. If the proposed cuts to this program are passed by Congress, over 300 of these students may lose this aid. The total dollar amount of lost Pell Grants would be in excess of $300,000. An additional $120,000 would be lost in Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants and College Work-Study funds allowing for approximately 75 fewer awards of Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants and 145 fewer awards of College Work-Study.

For the 1983-84 academic year, Wilkes College would suffer a loss of $650,000. Expressed by programs, our students will receive 440 fewer Pell Grants, 222 fewer Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant awards and 128 fewer College Work-Study awards than in the current academic year.

Of perhaps even greater significance are the increased restrictions on the Guaranteed Student Loan Program. Prior to October 1981, graduate and undergraduate students were able to borrow under this program without regard to need. This year, Wilkes processed over 1300 loans totaling in excess of $3,000,000.

Approximately 1/2 of our graduate students use funds from the Guaranteed Student Loan program to help finance their education. For many of these students, it is the only aid available. The proposed changes to this program would eliminate graduate student eligibility entirely.

Another 250-300 Wilkes students may be eliminated from the Guaranteed Student Loan program if the need analysis is extended to all applicants. Currently, a needs analysis is only required for those applicants whose family income is in excess of $30,000.

These proposed reductions and restrictions in federal student assistance programs may deny many students the opportunity of equal access to higher education. Certainly, they will have a serious effect on Wilkes College and the students.

ANOTHER VIEW: DEPLETING OUR CAPITAL

By: Anthony Lewis

Editor's Note: Mr. Anthony Lewis is a Pulitzer Prize winning columnist for The New York Times. He was at Wilkes College on February 9 to deliver the inaugural lecture for the Wilkes College Rosenn Lecture Series in Law and Humanities and, upon his return to Boston, wrote this article which appeared in The New York Times on February 10, 1982. © 1982 by The New York Times Company. Reprinted with permission.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Feb. 10 — It did not generate big headlines at first, but around the country one idea in President Reagan's budget is arousing a new kind of concern and resistance. That is the proposal to cut back drastically — in many cases to eliminate — federally insured loans and other help for college and graduate school students.

The impact of the Reagan proposal would be serious at the big universities. It would be devastating at the thousands of smaller private colleges that play such an important role in American education. There is an example here in the old industrial-mining area of northeast Pennsylvania that tells the story.

Wilkes College is a nondenominational college that occupies some wonderful old Victorian mansions and good modern buildings in Wilkes-Barre. It has 2,100 full-time students, who pay $4,200 a year for tuition and $2,100 more for board and room if they live in a dormitory. More than 1,100 of those students now have federally insured loans.

"Many of them could not come without the Federal loans," says Robert S. Capin, president of the college. "They would postpone college, or try to come part-time. But part-time jobs are scarce nowadays — that's another problem."

The college has balanced its budget for years, but a big drop in the student body would sharply change the picture. Capin said it would be hard to cope with "the loss of even 100 students — and that's a modest estimate of what could happen."

President Reagan's Secretary of Education, T. H. Bell, defended the budget proposal by saying the Federal Government could no longer afford "posh student aid." But no one looking at the facts here on the ground could believe that either the present loans or their recipients are "posh."

Wilkes was founded in 1933, as a junior college, in part to educate the families of miners. It became a regular four-year school in 1947. The students now come not only from this area but from New Jersey and New York. And 75 percent of them get financial aid, through Federal or Pennsylvania programs or modest amounts the college has available for scholarships.

Last year President Reagan proposed, and Congress passed, legislation to limit the Federal loan program to students who really need the help. That was a wise change. The previous system, where someone from the wealthiest family could get a loan and have Washington pay the interest while he was in college, could not be justified either economically or morally.

But this year's budget proposals are very different, removing various kinds of support from students who are not able to pay their own way. The budget would eliminate 625,000 loans for graduate students and several hundred thousand — no definite figure is available — for undergraduates. It would also make drastic reductions in other Federal aid for higher education, eliminating as many as 2.4 million awards to needy students.

Many colleges and universities, small and large, are criticizing the Reagan proposals. This is one issue on which students and administrators, faculty and parents are likely to agree. The resistance could become politically significant.

Of course there is an element of selfishness in the criticism, whether from the colleges or the families that may be affected. But over the last 25 years Federal student loans and other aid programs for higher education have become important to American society, and there is no visible way for states or private institutions to replace them. The aid is especially important in one respect that might have been expected to appeal to the Reagan philosophy: in increasing social mobility.

Education is a crucial way for individuals to escape from a background of poverty. Federal loans now enable a young man or woman without family resources to become a professional — a lawyer, a teacher. It is the modern task, in our mass society, to realize the American dream.

Smashing the graduate schools seems a particular folly in that light. And many of them would be smashed if the Federal loan program is simply cut out for them as the budget suggests.

For the Reagan Administration to make such proposals is peculiar in another sense. The central theme of the President's domestic policy is that the United States must become more productive, modernize its economy, compete more vigorously in the world. Are we going to do that while reducing our people's opportunity for education?

Matching Japan in the new high technology is not going to be done by physical investment alone. It requires development of America's human capital. It requires education that can cope with the sophisticated requirements not only of microchips but of human communication.

Looking at the world, there is no reason to believe that ignorance is going to make the United States thrive. ○

1981 BENEFACTORS

The following listing identifies those alumni who pledged or contributed to the College in 1981. We recognize with pride these individuals who, through their generosity, have assisted us in better meeting the needs of our students. Such alumni participation is vital in encouraging friends, businesses, corporations, and foundations to also support Wilkes College, and we thank you for your help.

Stan Irzinski, '61 . . . Providing Mindpower to Others

By: Randy Xenakis

Stan Irzinski was not in Wilkes-Barre when the great flood of 1972 inundated the region. He was, however, sitting in his modest administrative office here at 421 North Pennsylvania Avenue when, in late January, the chilled pipes running through his ceiling burst and deposited better than two inches of the wet solution throughout his office. It's all clean now, and, as many say about the '72 tragedy, it may have been a blessing in disguise. Although still modest, his office has been rehabilitated — new carpet, new draperies, and a new spirit.

Rehabilitation is nothing new to Dr. Stanley Irzinski. Immediately following his graduation from Wilkes in 1961, he applied his A.B. degree in Psychology to the fulfillment of human needs. Not his own needs, but those of others who need it the most — the handicapped. "It was the encouragement of Dr. Bob Morris that led me to a graduate program at The Pennsylvania State University following graduation," offered Stan. Dr. Morris, who passed away last year, was active at Wilkes, serving as Assistant to President Eugene Farley (1959-62).

"Bob had a good handle on what was going on in the field of graduate education for psychology majors," recalled Stan. "He asked me if I knew about the M.Ed. program in Rehabilitation Counseling at Penn State. The question alone gave me enough incentive to check out the program." In 1963, Stan received his M.Ed. degree in Rehabilitation Counseling from the Pennsylvania State University and, in the process, found out some enlightening facts about his Wilkes education.

"I had not realized how well-prepared I was on the undergraduate level until I started having classes with other students on the graduate level. Some of them had to take refresher courses while others had difficulty with some of the expected requirements. They attributed their difficulties to handle the work to their undergraduate preparation. I attribute my having been able to handle the course work to Wilkes College."

Following two counseling internships, one at the Johnstown State Rehabilitation Center and a second at the Pennsylvania Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation in Rosemont (Pa.), Stan received his M.Ed. from Penn State (1963). Upon completion of the graduate program he accepted a post as Assistant Director of Rehabilitation at the Golden Opportunity Center, Inc., in Dover, Delaware. There he was responsible for psychological and vocational testing, evaluation, job placement, contract procurement, individual and group counseling, fund raising, and grant preparation. Following a two-year stay at the GOCI, the Wilkes-Barre native spent a year as Vocational Director with the Poughkeepsie, New York, based St. Francis Rehabilitation Center. The Poughkeepsie Center was medically oriented and was involved in the design of a comprehensive state-wide plan for the rehabilitation of adolescent offenders. In 1966 he returned to Penn State and, in 1967, was awarded the Ed.D. degree in Counselor Education. His thesis dealt with Factors Related to Counselor Turnover in a State Rehabilitation Agency.

In 1967 Stan accepted a position as Director of Rehabilitation at the Elwyn Institute in Elwyn, Pennsylvania. He served the Elwyn Institute, although at different locations, for the next fourteen years. Because of his successes at the Pennsylvania Center, he was transferred to the Elwyn Institute in Delaware in 1974 to run that branch and, in 1981, he helped provide leadership of Elwyn's Philadelphia-based institute.

On January 4, 1982, Stanley Irzinski returned home to Wilkes-Barre to become Administrator of United Rehabilitation Services, Inc. (URS), a rehabilitation center for the handicapped.

"Although I have been away from the area for nearly 20 years I never lost contact with my friends and family," said the amiable administrator. "I would always return to the Valley four or five times each year to visit and keep abreast of what was going on in my old stomping grounds."

One thing that was going on was the incorporation of URS in a merger between the Wyoming Valley Workshop (founded in 1958 by LUZARC) and the Industrial Department of the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind. "This merger was the answer to the community's request for one vocational training agency to serve all handicaps," said Stan.

"Throughout the years which followed the merger, I became very familiar and friendly with URS personnel, especially administrator Walter George. I would step in and talk with Walter at-length about the URS facility. I have deep respect for Walter and the program," he said.

Providing services on a daily basis to well over 300 people (including URS branch facilities in Hazleton and Tunkhannock), the rehabilitation program is, in the words of Stan Irzinski, "unique to this area." As a community resource for handicapped adults, URS works in conjunction with United Way and other community resources to enable disabled adults to function to the best of their ability in the community. Disability groupings include mental retardation, mental illness, blindness, other physical handicaps, social handicaps, and aging.

Reading the descriptive nature of what URS does in an article such as this cannot do justice to what URS, and Stan Irzinski, are all about.

Simply stated, they're about people. And, in order to get the impact of the nature of their service, one need only walk through the facility which bustles with handicapped workers doing the best they can to contribute to the Free Enterprise System. Let us not be fooled. When I say they do 'the best they can' that in no way implies inferior work. It implies conscientious effort, hard work, dependancy upon one another and dedication. Picture, if you will, a small-scale factory where assembly-line-type workers (instead of computers) package products step-by-step and prepare them for shipment. On this particular day, the handicapped workers were preparing several Proctor and Gamble products for final delivery. Shaping the shipping cartons, packing the products in plastic bags, counting out the number of items per box, placing the boxes on pallets, guiding a dolly full of boxes to the loading dock, and placing the finished cartons on awaiting trucks for shipment.

Why do companies like Proctor and Gamble use the services of the URS personnel? Like other service-oriented companies, URS workers must bid on jobs they want and when they submit a low bid they receive the contract. What the workers don't receive is special consideration. From talking with the workers I was fortunate enough to meet, they wouldn't want it. What they do want is to keep their pride.

Talking about pride brings up another matter. Stan Irzinski is bullish on Wilkes-Barre and bullish on Wilkes College.

In reminiscing about the area Stan recalled, "I remember when the only thing in Mountaintop was a television antenna. Now, that area has developed and continues to grow." Additionally, he remarked how the road system has improved, allowing

John Reese Honored

On February 13, friends and family of Wilkes wrestling coach John Reese gathered to honor the veteran mentor at the Wilkes-Lycoming wrestling meet. The day had been proclaimed by the College as "John Reese Day" in recognition of Reese's success with the Colonel wrestling program.

Earlier in the season he had copped his 300th career coaching win making him one of the few NCAA coaches to do so. This season he guided the Wilkes grapplers to their 27th straight winning season and a 19-4 overall record tying the school mark for most wins.

On "John Reese Day", his matmen handed Reese a 40-2 victory over the Warriors of Lycoming. Half-way through the bout, the meet was stopped for a short program. Reese received many gifts from College family members and friends of the College.

WILKES COLLEGE "HOME" FOR NEW JERSEY CO-ED

by Jane Manganella

Students recently enjoyed Spring Break with family and friends, and then reluctantly packed their bags to return to college campuses. Mary Ann Elefther, a freshman nursing major at Wilkes, was among them. But this time, she was smiling, something she was not doing last August, when she arrived on campus to begin her college career.

"At one point, the night before we left for Wilkes-Barre, my mother and my best friend, Sophie, were helping me pack," Mary Ann remembered, "and the thought that this would be the last night I'd spend in my own room, that tomorrow I would be in a strange city, in a new college and would not really know anyone really got through to me. I sat down on the bed and said, 'I've changed my mind, I'm not going.'" She added, "It took a lot of talking on both their parts to start me packing again."

Mary Ann looked forward, through all her high school years, to the time when she could go away to school, until suddenly the time was here and "I was in tears." The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eleftherious Elefther, Paramus, N.J., Mary Ann was raised in an environment of extraordinary close family ties. "My aunts, uncles, cousins from both sides of the family live very close by and we spend all our time together. My father's two sisters and their families (the Stefanides and the Markopoulos) and my mom's brother and his family (the Dellinades) all live within walking distance and it really is like one family. There are eleven girls and three boys and for those who don't know the families well it is hard to tell who belongs to whom," she smiles.

Mary Ann's affection for her family is apparent when she talks about them, and she remembers all the feelings she had as the time to leave them drew closer. "It was traumatic." Then why did she choose Wilkes College instead of one closer to home? "I did a lot of looking around," she said, "and the Wilkes Nursing Department was the best." Also when we drove up to look at the campus it seemed not very far away at all; now it seemed like the other end of the earth."

The memories of her childhood and the stories she heard about relatives in Greece influenced Mary Ann's choice of careers. "My great grandmother was a mid-wife in her village in Greece. She lived in Katarina, at the foot of Mt. Olympus in Macedonia, and she delivered just about every baby in the village. I think that's a pretty special way to spend your life. I decided to be a mid-wife then and I haven't changed my mind. I need a Master's degree in nursing to achieve that."

Undoubtly, this kind of close family is terribly hard to leave, but the time had arrived and Mary Ann, her mother and best friend and cousin, Sophie, left for Wilkes-Barre. They arrived on campus with no improvement in Mary Ann's mood or outlook. She moved into Barre Hall and introduced herself to her roommate Patti Elek. "My mother, Sophie and I toured campus and talked a lot about a family wedding we were all going to attend in Ohio the following weekend and the whole time I kept thinking that I'd stay at Wilkes for just the week, go to the wedding, and then go straight back to Paramus forever. That really was my plan, in just a week I could go back home." That was the thought she hung onto when she said goodbye to her mother and Sophie.

One of the things scheduled for incoming freshmen was a "Playfair" at the Wilkes gym for the evening. It was a series of games which involved students, faculty and administration and the purpose was to have everyone meet everyone else in an atmosphere of fun. Mary Ann walked down to the gym with other students who were feeling the same things she was feeling. Many were already homesick but were trying to "make the best of it."

Diversion was the best she hoped for but, when she and the others arrived at the gym, she found a group of people waiting to welcome them to campus. "They were really great, there were upper class students, there were members of the faculty, even President Capin was there. They really did so much to make it fun, and they weren't just gestures, they were sincerely interested and trying to make us feel at home. Before long we were involved in the games and having a very nice time. Friendships were formed right at the beginning and they are still there. When we went back to the dorm, we were all feeling so much better," she said, smiling.

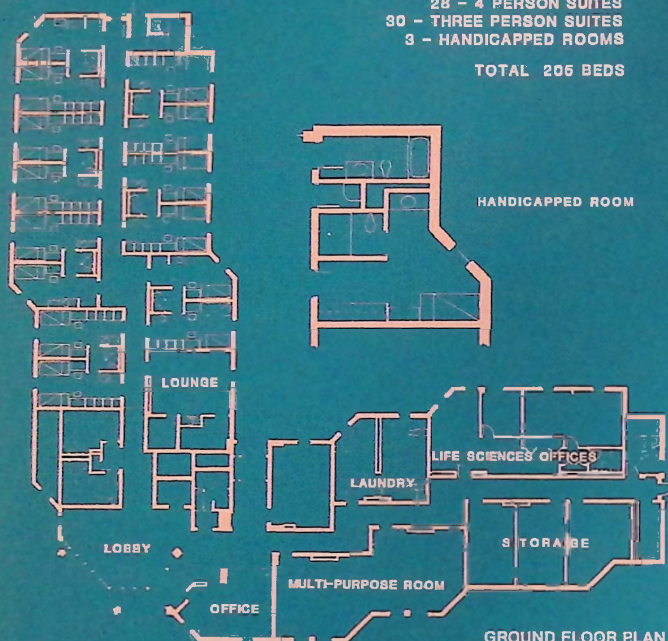

It's been like that ever since. There have, of course, been some rough spots, but friends make even the rough spots easier. Mary Ann is looking forward to the summer at home with her family and they are certainly looking forward to having her home. But, when it is time to pack for the return to Wilkes, there will be neither trauma nor tears because Wilkes is now home away from home for Mary Ann Elefther.

industry easy access; how shopping facilities have become bigger and better; and how the working population has become more diverse. "I remember a time when people only left Wyoming Valley. Today, many of those people are coming home." Needless to say, Stan, like many of us, marvels at the recovery of Wilkes-Barre following the Flood of '72.

One of Stan's homes, and he is the first to admit it, is Wilkes College. He has fond memories of his alma mater and respectfully recalled the names of Bob Riley, John Gaito, George Ralston, Gene Hammer, and Eugene Farley, to name a few.

"Dr. Riley gave me advice; Dr. Gaito, confidence; Dr. Hammer, an appreciation for the classroom; Dean Ralston, a listening ear; and Dr. Farley, a sense of respect." In recalling Stan as a student, George Ralston said, "Oh sure, I remember Stan. He was always active in the Psychology Club and would stop by to discuss different issues with me from time to time. He's a fine man."

One of the most memorable moments Stan recalls while he was at Wilkes was when Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt came to campus and addressed the students at one of the weekly assemblies. "I never did figure out how Dr. Farley got the First Lady here, but I do remember the gym was packed as we listened to her talk about equality and humanitarian issues," he said. At that time, Mrs. Roosevelt had been appointed by President Truman to serve the United States delegation to the United Nations as chairperson of its Commission for Human Rights.

Stan remembers many things about Wilkes. With a wide grin he reached back into his past and exclaimed, "I remember when our (Wilkes) football team used the Single Wing . . . it is similar to the shotgun in case you're not familiar with the Single Wing," he told me. He was right, I wasn't. If I felt that I needed an in-depth explanation on how the Single Wing worked, Stan advised me, respectfully, to ask George Ralston. George was head coach at the time. In an effort to gain additional insight on the 'Single Wing' I asked the Dean for a brief explanation. "Greatest formation ever used in the game," he said.

Even though the days of the Single Wing have gone the way of the 'horse-and-buggy' (at least at Wilkes), Stan says he looks forward to the fall when he will again become a supporter of the Colonel gridiron squad. "The names have changed but the spirit remains," Stan offered.

"As I look back on my years at Wilkes I can recall a comfortable, supportive, family atmosphere," said Stan in closing. "Besides receiving a good education at Wilkes, it was simply a nice place to be."

It still is.

Do You Have to be in Who's Who to Know What's What?

By Betsy Bell Condon

At the time of writing this (mid-January) I have just put away my cherished collection of angels, for another year. Each time I bed them down I remember the fun it's been to collect: that darling china one from Spain; the exquisite piece from a boardwalk glass blower; handsome wooden Gabriel received on my 40th birthday; and even one made from an old light bulb presented by a six-year-old daughter. (She now wants me to toss it, but I can't!)

Are you a collector, too? Perhaps your collections are more valuable than mine. If so, have you considered what will happen to your coins, stamps, cut glass, gem-inlaid pill boxes, antiques or silver miniatures when you're not here to enjoy them? More and more collectibles are being left to colleges as bequests, thus providing the donor with tax advantages and a possible life income for a beneficiary. Such a remembrance also supports Wilkes College, your prime reason for its consideration in the first place, and produces that great feeling of gratification from making a life income gift without jeopardizing income.

Almost anything of value may be donated to a charity, and many can set up a charitable remainder trust. (Rural colleges often receive gifts of livestock and crops as well as farmlands.) People are becoming familiar with gifts of real estate, stocks, bonds, insurance policies and cash to fund a trust providing life income for themselves and beneficiaries . . . but few think of their "collections" as assets or their jewelry, library and business inventories!

There's even a twist by which you may donate a partial interest in, for instance, a work of art you own . . . and receive a tax deduction to boot. You give Wilkes (the Sordani Art Gallery, perhaps) an undivided one-fourth interest in a valuable painting. Assuming that interest covers all property rights, including the right of possession for one-fourth of the time, you are entitled to a deduction equal to one-fourth of the painting's value. Wilkes thus gains a marvelous exhibit it might never have obtained, and you still receive joy from your prized possession for the rest of the year.

Of course, you may not have any old Van Gogh's hanging around, or a Mercedes/Rolls/Ferrari type car, or even a Mickey Mouse watch to bequeath to Wilkes. BUT, perhaps your manufacturing company has unused scientific equipment in its inventory, held primarily for sale to your customers. You may give such "State-of-the-Art" property (called a "Qualified Research Contribution") to Wilkes for our research, experimental or training use. By donating the property within two years of the time you had substantially completed its construction, you are permitted a deduction for the basis of the property plus one-half of its unrealized appreciation. Think on that, all you scientific equipment makers!

If you've been reading this article, chances are that Wilkes is part of your "collection" of charities. Do Your Estate Planning Now. It's important to review your will regularly and soon! If you have some art work, an early American craft collection or lovely Oriental fans, it won't cost you a thing to bequeath those collectibles to the College. In fact, your financial position might well be enhanced . . . that's what planned giving is all about.

These diverse property gift ideas are mentioned to demonstrate the variety possible in your estate planning and the imaginative ways you might consider for potential life interest plans made in support of Wilkes. Planned gifts via life income trusts and bequests don't endanger your future security and can often strengthen it.

As Sam Levinson's paperback title stresses: "You Don't Have to be in Who's Who to Know What's What" . . . Contemplate all this information, instead!

All Sports Reunion Celebrating The 50th Anniversary of The College

As part of the College's 50th birthday celebration plans are being formulated for a reunion of all alumni of the College who in any way participated in or contributed to the Intercollegiate Athletic Program of the College.

Date for the gala celebration
April 23, 1983

On this date we plan to focus all activity on athletics and those men and women who participated. During the day there will be reunion sports events for all who care to participate (golf, softball, tennis, running). Varsity Intercollegiate teams will be active. Finally, in the evening, there will be a dinner dance and gala reunion.

As a former Colonel participant in the sports program as a player, manager, trainer, cheerleader, coach, etc., consider returning to your alma mater for a day of celebration.

To help us better plan the day, please detach and return this form. Detailed information will then be sent to you.

I am interested in returning to Wilkes to celebrate athletics and the 50th Anniversary of the College. Please send me the detailed schedule for the celebration. (Fill out mailing information below if different from mailing label on reverse side.)

More than 13,500 students have passed through the halls of Wilkes College over the past 49 years. During that period of time many friendships have developed and long-lasting relationships established. During the nearly five decades of educational service, the College has been sensitive to the needs of the students and the community. To be effective, the College has, during this period, expanded its programs, strengthened its curriculum, maintained a strong faculty and made a continuing commitment to the students and community it serves.

While change is necessary to keep in step with the times, Wilkes College has not changed the one thing it has offered since 1933 — Quality.
