Nixon Visits Wilkes With $4-Million Check

President Richard M. Nixon (left) presents a check for $4-million to Wilkes College President Francis J. Michelini with a warm handshake as presidential aide Frank Carlucci (center) looks on.

"Operation Snapback" efforts reaped success with the arrival of President Richard M. Nixon on the Wilkes College campus and the presentation of a check in the amount of $4-million.

President Nixon presented the check directly to President Francis J. Michelini, saying, "this is one check that won't bounce, Dr. Mike."

The check was only a first installment, with $6-million more to arrive in the near future, covering the estimated loss of $10-million caused in June by the record flooding of the Susquehanna River.

"Operation Snapback" represents an all-out effort on the part of students and college personnel who responded to a plea for "manpower and elbow grease" from Dr. Michelini in an effort to overcome what had at first appeared to be an almost fatal blow to the liberal arts institution.

The future growth of the college and the efforts to keep the institution at its present high level of operation depends on financial grants from the federal agencies, alumni contributions, and other sources.

"Operation Snapback" was termed a major success when, on July 5, some 10 days after the flood, summer day and evening classes resumed. The early return was a result of the cleanup and the fact that facilities above the first floors were unharmed.

Phase II of "Operation Snapback" began in August when paint buckets and brushes replaced shovels and payloaders. The dormitories and classroom buildings were all

25th Homecoming Draws Hundreds

Last month marked the celebration of Wilkes College's Silver Anniversary with a host of activities for the alumni and the undergraduates.

Highlighting the weekend's activities was the crowning of Miss Debbie Koch, a senior elementary education major from Bricktown, N. J., as Homecoming Queen at halftime activities of the Wilkes-Ithaca football game.

Miss Koch's court consisted of Paula Cardias, Long Island; Josephine Schifano, Pittston; and Randy Wells, Lebanon, Pa.

Homecoming activities first began in 1947 — the same year Wilkes was chartered as a four-year liberal arts college. Since that time, the Homecoming Weekend has continued to grow with the addition of new activities for the alumni and undergraduates.

This year was particularly important in that it marked an important step in the College's recovery from the $10-million in damages resulting from the June 23 flood.

At halftime activities for the football game, Dr. Francis J. Michelini, president of Wilkes College, reminded the spectators that four months ago they would have been sitting under 28 feet of Susquehanna water.

At the Saturday evening Homecoming Dinner, the College delivered a special salute to the silver anniversary class of 1947. Featured speaker at the event was Dr. Michelini on "Wilkes College: Pre-Flood and Post-Flood."

An Ecumenical Church Service in the Center for the Performing Arts drew the weekend's activities to a close with a Wilkes alumnus as the principal speaker, Lt. Col. Robert L. Benson, Class of 1952, Chaplain, U. S. Air Force Academy.

Wilkes Learning Center Progresses

Out of the tons of mud and debris deposited on the Wilkes College campus following the record flooding of the Susquehanna emerged a small, though powerful ray of hope—as construction of the Wilkes Learning Center on So. River St. continued. Last June, Wilkes College was able to announce, with a great deal of pride, plans to construct a $5-million learning center. This center would represent the hopes and dreams of a small community dedicated to the ideal that through education the dreams of the future will be realized.

A year of construction followed with alumni and friends of the small liberal arts college watching the workers mold their contributions into a new educational facility.

Last summer also meant destruction—the demolition of five mansions that had once housed some of the most prominent families of the Wyoming Valley Area.

Directly hit by the gushing water which breached the dike on June 23, was the frame work of the Wilkes College Learning Center. Fortunately, the damage was easily repaired.

When Wilkes College President Francis J. Michelini returned to the flood ravaged campus shortly after the waters receded,

Incoming Frosh Welcomed In Post-Flood Recovery

"Ask yourself what am I? What do I want to be? What ideal am I striving for?" And then use your four years here at Wilkes College to achieve it.

This was the core of the message that Wilkes College President Francis J. Michelini delivered in the gymnasium before the largest group of incoming students in the college's history—650 freshmen and 150 transfer students.

It was an emotion-packed address that President Michelini delivered to the Class of 1976 as he reminded them that they will always be remembered as the freshman class that came to the campus immediately after the institution had been restored following the "great flood of 1972."

While he had words of advice and welcome to pass along to the new students, President Michelini also took time to recognize many in the audience who had come to Wilkes during the Summer crisis as "volunteers who wanted to simply do something to help out even though you at that time weren't actually active students."

Many of the returning students expressed some surprise at the condition of the campus and the buildings, stating they had expected more signs of the destruction from the Summer flood, but expressed pleasure and amazement over the accomplishments of the many volunteers who had worked throughout the Summer months putting the 58 buildings and grounds back into condition far greater than any believed possible at the end of June.

The president—implying that the Class of 1976 also had the spirit of '76 called the group special in that it had already demonstrated a desire to become involved and be of service to others.

"And becoming involved and helping others—giving of yourselves for the sake of helping your fellow man—is so very important," he told them. "I speak to you with humble awareness of the many who came forth and when we needed you so desperately and I am grateful."

Moving into the philosophical vein, Dr. Michelini stressed the important contribution the recent disaster would have on the incoming students in terms of understanding and involvement.

He emphasized the role of the college students in helping the community snap back after the disaster. College students pitched in to help with the flood recovery efforts, before, during and after the disaster.

ADMIRAL HAROLD R. STARK IN MEMORIAM

With the death of Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations and former commander of the United States Naval Forces in Europe, the Wilkes College community lost a long-time friend and supporter of educational ideals and the role of education in the community.

When Wilkes was founded in 1933 as Bucknell Junior College, Dr. Eugene S. Farley had a dream and the determination to prove to sceptics in the Wyoming Valley Area that there was a definite need for a college and the type of education it could provide for the area.

The veteran educator was determined that a college education would not continue to be limited to children of families fortunate enough to be able to afford the costs. Admiral Stark was one of the few individuals who demonstrated a positive interest in the college and encouraged Dr. Farley in his endeavors to make the liberal arts institution grow.

Admiral Stark demonstrated his interest in the establishment of a permanent institution in 1937 by donating his family home at 184 South River Street to the College as a memorial to Fred M. Chase and his wife, who was Admiral Stark's sister.

In 1947 Stark joined the Wilkes College Board of Trustees and from 1959 to 1964 he served as Chairman of the Board. The need for a science hall had long been felt at Wilkes. This fact, coupled with the express dedication Admiral Stark had shown for the small institution was enough to set the wheels in motion. Within a relatively short period of time, Dr. Farley received a donation from friends of the Admiral, covering the cost of the complex.

At all times during his lifetime, Admiral Stark demonstrated an interest in the young people of the Wyoming Valley and the vast number of opportunities that could be afforded them through higher education and the establishment of a permanent institution of higher learning in the city of Wilkes-Barre.

Within a short period of time, Dr. Farley, as president of Wilkes College, learned that he could rely on Admiral Stark for the support of expansion and for backing in the pursuit of educational ideals.

Dr. Farley described the Admiral as the "ideal person to translate our aspirations for students, College, and community into a program of action. He gave generously of his time and energies, and always led our campaign for funds by a generous gift. He interested his friends in the College and used his influence in its behalf."

Dr. Farley once wrote, "it is the individual who gives substance and vitality to an institution."

The substance and vitality supplied by one man—Admiral Stark—helped Wilkes College realize a potential for increased community service and improved education.

Dr. Francis J. Michelini, second president of Wilkes College stated, "I think it is fitting that the people of our Community recognize the significance of the contributions of this great leader of men, who, in his most quiet and humble way, influenced the lives of so many thousands of people in our Community."

Several areas on the local campus will serve as reminders for thousands of students entering the institution of learning, telling of the vast amount of aid Admiral Stark had given to the private institution.

One such reminder is the special room in the Eugene S. Farley Library, dedicated in his honor. The other is the Stark Science Hall, which the Admiral was largely responsible for creating.

Admiral Stark was born in Wilkes-Barre in 1880. He graduated from the Harry Hillman Academy, receiving a commission as Ensign in the United States Navy after graduating from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1905.

In 1939, he was appointed Chief of Naval Operations and Commander of European Naval Forces during World War II. Throughout the War, he acted as liaison between Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin D. Roosevelt. His service during the conflict was rewarded by the Distinguished Service Medals of both the Navy and the Army.

Wilkes College President Francis J. Michelini met recently with representatives of the three student governing bodies on campus—Student Government, Inter-Dormitory

Council and Commuter Council—to discuss recovery progress following the $10-million in damages caused by record flooding of the Susquehanna River.

Wilkes College President Francis J. Michelini explains to student representatives of the three campus governing bodies the amount of damage done to the college, recovery progress, and the continuation of normal activities for the fall semester following the record flooding of the Susquehanna River which left Wilkes with $10-million in damages.

Concentrating his efforts on the rapid recovery the liberal arts institution is making, Dr. Michelini remained optimistic, stating the educational facilities in every department on campus would be fully operational by the start of the fall term.

"We still have a long way to go financially, but the real guts of a college is in the students and faculty, not in the bricks and mortar. As long as we have those two ingredients, we will have a college," stated the president.

Dr. Michelini received letters from over 50 college and university presidents, offering aid for Wilkes. One college president even sent a contribution of $35 out of his own pocket.

"Out of every disaster comes a new spirit," said Dr. Michelini. "Many young people were looking for a cause to fight for, and they have found it in the Wilkes restoration program—a cause that will last for a good many years, but make us stronger in the end."

A VALLEY UNITED

The following letter was written by Dr. Eugene S. Farley, first president of Wilkes College, in the aftermath of the June 23 disaster and ran as a Letter to the Editor in the August 3 edition of the New York Times.

July, 1972

While memories of water, mud and devastation are still fresh maybe each of us will join in planning for the re-birth of our Valley.

One hundred and fifty years ago the "Vale of Wyoming" was reputed to be one of the most beautiful spots in the East.

One hundred years ago our Valley was still beautiful but mining was slowly destroying its natural beauty.

Fifty years ago our Valley was noted for its labor strife and for the physical and psychological scars left by the mining industry.

Fifty days ago we were struggling to create a new and more attractive Valley and we were succeeding. Slowly but surely new jobs were being created, the general economy was improving and old eye-sores were being replaced by modern, attractively landscaped buildings.

And — then in a few hours we were inundated with flood waters and left with inches of mud and material damage that had to be seen to be believed.

But — in the midst of this devastation neighbor helped neighbor and Civil Defense maintained order and provided leadership in the midst of muck, mud and devastation. In the midst of crisis we were united.

Now that we are slowly recovering may we maintain and enlarge this unity. May we unite to restore the beauty of our Valley while we strive to rebuild our homes and our industries. If we possess the vision, the will, and the desire, we can, in cooperation with our neighbors, or state and federal governments, restore the best of the past. And while so doing we can create a more beautiful and wholesome environment.

This is a dream but America was built by dreamers who were also doers and our Valley was being rebuilt by men and women of vision who also were doers. Can we not work to sustain this dream?

There are many agencies at work to provide the instruments for new growth. Let us work with them to build a new and better economy and a more beautiful community. It can be done if we envision it and possess the will to do it.

EUGENE S. FARLEY, President Emeritus

Alumni Fund Appeal Set By Wilkes College

A campaign involving approximately 8,600 Wilkes College alumni—3,000 living in Luzerne and Lackawanna Counties—in the task of raising funds to help offset the $10-million in flood damages and loss was begun last month.

In a special appeal to the alumni by letter and illustrated newsletter, Alumni President Reese Jones told the former Wilkes students that "never before in the history of our college has your full support been more urgently needed than it is now."

Jones, who is president of the First Valley Bank of Bethlehem gave a complete appraisal of the damages to the alumni, placing emphasis on four sites:

1. The Eugene Sheddén Farley Library: Over 50,000 volumes (half of the total collection) lost—plus special collections, all basement furniture, shelving, carpets, carpeting and much first floor shelving as well. Estimated loss—$1,250,000.

2. Stark Hall: Loss of laboratory and scientific equipment alone valued at $500,000. Total estimated loss—$1,500,000.

3. Center for the Performing Arts and the New Music Building: Instruments and equipment loss in the tens of thousands of dollars. In the theater itself, water level covered all but the top six rows of seats. Estimated loss—$1,750,000.

4. Gymnasium: Entire gym floor washed out and buckled into five-foot waves. Estimated loss—$125,000.

Jones, who only three months ago assumed the two-year post as national president, called upon his colleagues to "give all the support that you possibly can to aid our Wilkes College 'Operation Snapback'."

International Club Offers Understanding

Another person's country can be a very lonely place unless someone offers the hand of friendship and understanding.

That, in essence, is what the International Club of Wilkes-Barre is attempting to do by its existence and efforts on the local campus.

Mary Cheung, a native of Hong Kong, and president of the International Club, is determined to work with her five-member executive council to make life on the campus and in this country more enjoyably familiar to the foreign student.

The charming resident assistant has a humble but convincing way of making someone listen when she expresses her concern for the plight of the foreign student—especially during their first years in this country.

Finding a solution to the problems facing the foreign students is one of the key points of interest that Mary is counting on to put new life into the three-year old International Club.

Assisting with the overall revitalization of the organization is Assistant Dean Edward Baltrukitis, who had experience on the college level with International Club Organizations on other campuses.

It was a unique occasion on the lawn of Weckesser Hall on Friday afternoon on the Wilkes College campus as the presidents of the classes of 1947 and 1973 met for the first time and bridged a 25-year span of Alumni Association homecomings.

The turning of the leaves on the huge maple and oak trees on the lawn of the administration building provided the perfect setting for the meeting of a quarter of a century of students at the local college.

Members of Theta Delta Rho, Wilkes College service organization, set up their display on Bedford Hall lawn with the slogan "Strike the Bombers" as their theme.

Taking time out for a photo prior to joining the hundreds of guests who filled two of the banquet rooms in the Hotel Sterling during the Wilkes College Homecoming affair on Friday night are, seated — Marietta Bednar, Fords, N. J.; Linda Tyson, Lakewood, Pa.; Elaine Godlowicz, Wyoming; and Homecoming Queen Debbie Koch, Bricktown, N. J. Standing — John Pisano, Newtown; Leo Auerbach, New York City; Wilkes College President and Mrs. Francis J. Michelini; Michael Barski, President of Student Government and a resident of Mocanaqua; and Frank Galicki, Hanover Township.

HOMECOMING

Halftime activities for the 25th Annual Homecoming game at Ralston Field were highlighted by the crowning of the Homecoming Queen, Miss Debbie Koch, and her princesses. Flood Fails To Distract Wilkes Summer Students

Statistics have shown that 89 percent of the students attending the day and evening sessions at Wilkes College this summer failed to be distracted by the tremendous damage caused by Hurricane Agnes.

This became evident with the announcement by Wilkes President Francis J. Michelini, who revealed that the $10-million in damages to the college and the disruption of classes for slightly more than a week did not seriously hamper the program.

Dr. Donald W. Tappa, dean of academic affairs, received the initial report on the results of the campus flooding and damage to property as it related to student attendance when classes resumed on July 5.

Mobile Homes On Campus

The flood disaster mobile home program added a new touch to the Wilkes College campus when one was backed into a spot near Bedford Hall at South River and West South Streets.

Recipient of the trailer-type home is Nelson E. Carle, superintendent of buildings and grounds at Wilkes College, who is shown unlocking the door to his new "home" so that College Business Manager Charles Abate can get a first-hand view.

Carle, whose home on Carey Avenue suffered heavy damage from the flood waters, has practically lived on the campus since the waters receded on June 25, because of his job responsibilities.

Abate, whose family and home were also affected by the flood, has worked virtually around the clock at the college directing the massive cleanup program "Operation Snapback" — the volunteer effort on the part of many to repair some of the $10-million damage to the institution.

ready stripped of debris and were in the process of drying out and awaited paint crews.

Frank Carlucci, President Nixon's special representative in the Wilkes-Barre area to coordinate the federal flood recovery operation, met with Dr. Michelini and toured the campus over the summer.

Carlucci said, "the damages to private institutions were quite extensive." There were 41 private institutions in the area hit by the flood.

Western Electric Grant Presented to Wilkes

The Western Electric Fund presented contributions of $50,000 to Wilkes College and $5,000 to King's College to assist the two local institutions in restoring their campuses following the massive damage done by the recent flood.

The presentation of the two grants was made at a noon luncheon held in the Marco Polo Room of the Treadway Motor Inn.

Receiving the grants for the private colleges, which under current legislation were not eligible for federal assistance, were Dr. Francis J. Michelini, president of Wilkes College, and the Rev. Lane D. Kilburn, president of King's College.

Wilkes President Michelini privately expressed his appreciation for what he termed "a most welcome and timely financial contribution that will help immensely in our battle to overcome the tremendous $10-million in damages inflicted upon our college by the flood."

King's President Kilburn joined in expressing appreciation on behalf of the institution he heads for the generous gesture by Western Electric Corporation and its Foundation.

Harry Keller Named New Finance Aide

Richard Raspen, seated, goes over financial aid for flood victims with newly appointed financial aid officer, Harry Keller.

Harry Keller, a 1970 graduate of Wilkes College, has been named financial aid officer at the college, according to an announcement by Wilkes President Francis J. Michelini.

Keller is replacing Richard Raspen who resigned recently to enter full time teaching at the college.

Raspen and Keller have been working together throughout the flood emergency to aid students affected by the disaster in obtaining greater financial assistance.

Students from families who have suffered losses from the recent flood have been notified by the Wilkes College Financial Aid Office that both state and federal attention is being given to new avenues of greater assistance.

Raspen said, "Both state and federal sources of student aid funds were approached. We received their assurances that they would do everything in their power to assist students and families who suffered flood losses."

Public Policy Center Established at Wilkes

The establishment of a Center for Public Policy at Wilkes College, in cooperation with the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, has been announced by Wilkes President Francis J. Michelini.

In announcing the establishment of the center, President Michelini said it represents a most welcome and valuable addition to the Wilkes College facilities. "I am most certain," he said, "that our students and faculty will derive great benefits from this new inflow of information on many current topics."

The American Enterprise Institute is a publicly supported, non-partisan research and educational organization located in Washington, D. C. It was established in 1943 to assist the nation's legislators and educational leaders by providing factual analyses of important national policy issues.

Major issues of national significance are discussed through legislative and special analyses, long-range studies, regional debates, seminars and symposia. AEI also publishes basic handbooks for use in both the National high school and national intercollegiate debates.
