Cinderella Candidates Announced

Jack Melton To Appear at Spring Dance

By HELEN M. KRACHENFELS

Student Council President Art Hoover announced on Wednesday night the names of the 11 girls who will be candidates for the title of Cinderella this year. Nominations were open to the entire student body and were conducted during the past week.

The 11 lucky lasses chosen for the honor of competing for the coveted "glass slipper" are:

Nancy Beam, Miriam Jeanne Dearden, Ann Faust, Patricia Fitzgerald, Jackie Jones, Connie Kamarunas, Lois Long, Nancy Morris, Jackie Oliver, Jeannette Perrins, Ruth Wilbur.

The annual Cinderella Ball, sponsored by the Student Council, will be held on May 13 at the Wilkes gym. Jack Melton and his orchestra will provide the music for dancing from nine 'til one. According to tradition the enchanted midnight hour will mark the dramatic revealing of our own Cinderella.

Co-chairmen for the Ball, Bill Crowder and Art Hoover recently announced the following committee heads: Tickets, Bob Lynch and Allen Feld; Refreshments and Check Room, Dick Bunn and Sam Lowe; Band, Bob Lynch; Gifts, Nancy Morris and Gloria Dran; Chaperones, Jim Benson; Invitations, Phyllis Walsh, Merri Jones and Ann Dixon; Selection, Art Hoover and Bill Crowder; Publicity, Helen Krachenfels, Dick Carpenter and Jim Neveras; Radio and TV, Jim Neveras.

Tickets for the dance can be purchased from any council member for a mere $2.00. A No Corsage ruling will be in effect, and dress will be semi-formal.

Conference Attended by 45

Last week's Careers Conference on Retailing was warmly received by some 45 local high school students, it was learned from Guidance Director John Chwalek.

The conference featured several of Wilkes alumni as guest speakers. It was announced that the next conference will be held in May and will have the theme, "Careers in Nursing".

DEBATERS POINTING FOR WIN AT NATIONALS

The Wilkes varsity debating team culminates both the season and its career at the West Point national invitational debate tournament this weekend.

In the tournament, which began yesterday, James Neveras and J. Harold Flannery, Jr., will try for the silver trophy proclaiming the nation's champions.

Today they will continue the eight qualifying rounds begun yesterday. This evening the top speaker for the meet will be named, as judged on the basis of those eight rounds.

Eliminations Tomorrow

Should Wilkes have qualified in these rounds, they will join the top 16 teams in further debate tomorrow in the eliminational rounds which will produce the nation's champions.

Last year at this time the same team won four of eight rounds to place among the country's top 20 teams.

In the last two years the team has won 45 rounds of intercollegiate debate to 13 lost, a .776 average.

Dr. Arthur N. Kruger, coach of the team, remarked last week, "I think that we will probably qualify for the round of 16, and with a few breaks, we may go all the way."

Cheerleading Squad Gets 4 New Members

Four Wilkes coeds were elected to the cheerleading squad for the coming year at a meeting held last Thursday after several weeks of practice sessions and try-outs.

Freshmen Roseanne Patner, Judy Menegus, and Sally Wermuth, and Sophomore Anne Kennedy were the girls chosen to "rah-rah" next year's Colonels on to bigger and better things on the sports scene.

Three Graduate

Juniors Della King and Al Rosenberg, and Sophomore Phyllis Walsh are the incumbent members of the squad who will be returning. Pat Fitzgerald, Ellen Louise Wint, and Neil McHugh will graduate this June.

Faculty adviser for the group is Mr. Robert Moran.

Science Delegates Hear Timely Talks At Seton Hall University Conference

By JEROME STEIN

Delegates from the Biology, Chemistry, and Engineering Clubs attended the ninth annual Eastern Science Conference at Seton Hall University last weekend.

This two-day affair (April 15th and 16th) was highlighted with prominent speakers, tours of various chemical, medical, and research centers, and research papers prepared by members of the attending colleges.

On Friday morning, April 15th, the delegates heard an enlightening talk by Father Joseph Lynch of Fordham University on the topic of "Seismology". Following this, they were given an opportunity to see a television demonstration by Mr. S. David Page of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. and a lecture on "Heart Surgery" by Dr. Anthony D. Crecca, a thoracic and cardiac surgeon of the Newark area.

Friday afternoon was devoted to tours of various chemical, medical, and research centers. The Edison Foundation and the Esso Research and Engineering Co. were among the places visited. Due to limited time, the delegates were allowed to attend but one tour.

Future Sophs Plan for Frosh Hazing

By JANICE SCHUSTER

Freshman class president Dave Vann recently called a meeting of the class council to discuss plans for next year's initiation of entering frosh.

At the meeting, President Vann appointed fourteen members of the class who will meet at the end of this week to plan for a feasible freshman program. The council aims to create a pleasant relationship between entering students and upper-classmen through a properly organized program.

The appointed council will be

Emperor Ralston, Partridge to Goad Shaw's Androcles

By T. R. PRICE

The lion roars tonight. He roars at 8:15 tonight and 8:30 tomorrow night.

And when he roars, Dean George Ralston and Director of Student Activities Robert W. Partridge will be on hand to see why as Cue 'n' Curtain's production of "Androcles and the Lion" gets underway.

The two members of the administration will not be box seat guests or anything usual like that; Ralston will be on stage as Caesar Augustus, backed up by his faithful centurion, Partridge.

The thornstuck lion will be Ronnie Price, while Skinny Ennis takes off Androcles, and Bruce Williams is Augustus, captain of the guard.

On the same bill, the College drama group is also presenting Eugene O'Neil's "The Emperor Jones", with William Crowder as O'Neil's tragic hero, and Paul Shiffer as the trader Smithers.

Both plays will be given tonight and tomorrow evenings at the College gymnasium on South Franklin street.

Admission is free to students and one dollar to the public.

In "Androcles", support will be given the coaches and Ennis by the Lettermen, Merri Jones and Jerry Luft, while Audrey Cragle handles the female lead.

Ennis will direct "Androcles", while Crowder will boss the O'Neil play actually as well as histrionically.

Those behind-the-scenes people so essential to any production will be Nancy Brown, Merri Jones, Nancy Batcheler, Fred Cohn, Ronnie Price, Ben Howells, Elaine Fabian, Jane Obitz, Pat Stout, Carl Ernst, Jim Miller, Gene Roth, Jerry Lind.

Pomictier to Teach in Montrose

Miss Mary Pomictier, recently accepted a position on the teaching staff at Montrose High School, in Montrose, Pa., it was announced by Guidance Director John Chwalek early this week. She will teach classes in the commercial subjects.

Miss Pomictier is majoring in business education and will graduate in June.

Bio Club Tops Drive

Mr. Partridge has announced that the Biology Club contributed the most money in the Red Cross Drive held on campus during the past two weeks. The sum consisted of eight dollars.

Guinea Pigs Fail to Develop Allergy

Dr. Sheldon Cohen, who is concerned with the project dealing with cobalt allergy in guinea pigs, announced last week that this experiment will have to be delayed until next semester.

It was found that the guinea pigs did not develop an allergy toward cobalt under the present treatment consisting of injections of a cobalt chloride solution and the application of a cobalt chloride paste. When the experiment is resumed, a different treatment will be administered.

Since the guinea pigs can no longer be used for experimental purposes, Dr. Cohen has taken this opportunity to demonstrate the killing of an animal by anaphylactic shock. In such a procedure, a dosage of horse serum is injected into the guinea pig and after a two-week period, in which the guinea pig is not disturbed, another dosage is administered. As a result of this second dosage, the animal passes into a state of shock and, consequently, dies.

It is interesting to note that much can be learned from an experiment even though the knowledge obtained is not directly related to the desired result.

EDITORIALS

A Pleasant Evening, Yours

The two plays which are scheduled by Cue and Curtain for tonight and tomorrow night at the college gymnasium should be interesting if only for the fact that they are cast with "unusual" actors. Take for instance the first play, "Androcles and the Lion," by G. B. Shaw. In starring roles will be that genial dean of men George "Southern Caesar" Ralston and Bob Partridge, that gum-chewing Centurion, who is better known for his activities in soccer and baseball. Add to this crew of the most "spirited" Lettermen-turned-actors, and it should prove amusing. Funnyman Howard "Skinny" Ennis who is directing the play will also appear and add to the gaiety.

In the other play, O'Neil's "Emperor Jones," Bill Crowder and Paul Shiffer should turn in creditable performances, if reports from the drama group are any indication.

At any rate, the plays should provide an evening of good entertainment. The drama group here at Wilkes has shown itself as industrious a club as any and certainly deserves your support. Why not plan to spend an enjoyable evening with Cue and Curtain?

Our Public Relations Singers

The "Collegians," Wilkes Male Chorus, gave another of its especially prepared high school concerts this morning at Coughlin High School. The chorus, headed by Bill Crowder, was invited to make its third appearance at the city school in its existence of as many years. A personal invitation was made by Francis Truscott, principal, so enjoyable was the show given last year by the group of fellas who give up their lunch hours so they can get together and sing. The "Collegians" came into being purely on student effort and have grown into a first-rate musical group. As well, they have established an enviable reputation. And what better public relations agent could Wilkes have to represent it out among its prospective students. We'll answer that one—none better. Students at Coughlin have asked us from the time we started teaching there when the chorus would sing this year, so impressed were they.

You may ask, "Why all the spiel about the Male Chorus?" Just this. It is an organization on campus which asks little and gives much. And too often, it doesn't get its share of the credit. Hats off to an organization which Wilkes can be proud to have representing it.

It's Up to You — Think, Vote!

Nominations were held this week for Student Council posts for next year. Many new names and faces (and hats, we might add) have been thrown into the campus political ring. That's good. For with the new names and faces have also come new promises and ideas. Certainly, there will be plenty of candidates from which the student body can choose.

It looks as though we will have a lively election for the council posts. Interest in the vacancies has perhaps reached a new high.

The Beacon advises only this. Take the trouble to find out about your candidates before election time. Find out who will and will not represent you. The paper has always stood behind any sincere move for improved student government.

Consider the records of past members carefully, too, before you vote. Don't forget, there have been good and bad members in the Student Council this year. The good ones may well deserve your support. As for the bad ones, well, you be the judge. But, most important, think before you vote. End of sermon.

WILKES PREXY SAYS EDUCATION INCOMPLETE WITHOUT INTEGRITY

By JOHN KUSHNERICK

An education without the understanding and the practice of honor is an incomplete education. Dr. Eugene S. Farley, Wilkes President, stated when queried on the work of individuals on campus to begin an honor system.

Dr. Farley expressed pleasure toward the new attempt to establish a code of honor among the students. He attached great significance to the fact that present attempts have originated on the student level. "It is a sign that our students are now willing to accept integrity," he said.

The president stated that over the past 19 years the administration has made numerous attempts to begin such a system, but that it has always been met with disinterest or dissatisfaction by the students. He felt the real beginning might be made this year since the origin is where it should be.

Dr. Farley also expressed hope that the development would continue slowly, methodically, and purposefully; for he saw possible failure in a sudden thrust into a seemingly different education atmosphere. He stressed his belief that each student must completely understand the workings and purpose of any system he is to work under. Four steps were envisioned as a logical progression in the attainment of an honor system: (1) Student and faculty exploration and recommendation of specific systems, (2) Discussion by students and faculty for modification and adoption of a final system, (3) Indoctrination of all students in the program to be undertaken, (4) Indoctrination of incoming classes in the ideals and practices of an honor code, and the pledge of each to adhere to the code.

Dr. Farley cited the University of Virginia for its indoctrination system in making students aware of the honor system they are to be held to before they ever enter the school.

He affirmed his desire to give the students all the help he could.

Ex-Beacon Editor, WC Co-ed to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. James Panzetta, 1800 Susquehanna Ave., Exeter, announce the recent engagement of their daughter, Frances, Wilkes College sophomore, to Eugene A. Scrudato, former editor of the Wilkes Beacon, a post-graduate student at the college.

Scrudato, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scrudato, 38 Parsonage St., Pittston, returned to Wilkes this year to earn a bachelor of science degree in secondary education after having majored in political science here previously.

The bride-elect is attending evening courses this year after completing her freshman year as a day student last year.

The couple is planning a wedding for "the near future."

Kamarunas Named Colonels' Queen At Lettermen's April Showers Dance

Connie Kamarunas was picked Colonels' Queen at last Friday's April Showers Ball.

She is an inhabitant of Sterling Hall; a transplanted Scrantonian.

A 20-year old junior, she is studying toward a Bachelor's degree in Retail Merchandising, and is an active member of Theta Delta Rho.

Connie K., as she signs her posters, oft seen on campus, has done considerable work in art. In point of fact, she designed the program cover for the ball of which she was chosen queen.

The Queen was selected by a committee of Lettermen and the faculty and was presented with a Longine-Wittnauer watch by Lettermen's adviser George Ralston.

She wore a black net gown trimmed in velvet. Her corsage was of lilacs.

Her escort was Eugene T. Riley.

COLONELS' QUEEN — Miss Connie Kamarunas is presented a Longine wrist watch by Lettermen's adviser George Ralston, after her selection as Colonels' Queen.

Science Brochure Prepared by PR Office

The Wilkes Department of Public Relations is now working to produce a brochure on careers in pure science.

The brochure will be distributed to high school students, and is the fourth in a series being currently prepared by the department.

It is planned to produce a total of eight brochures for the series, it was announced Tuesday. Already completed are brochures on engineering, retail merchandising, and teaching.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

Dearest Editors:

I read with lively interest the expatriations of a Philip D. Jones on honor, honor systems, and dropping bombs in last week's Beacon. I can remember a Jones back a few years ago who was either a rather seedy comedian or a warped crooner. In any case, this fellow wasn't the least bit honorable, so it could not be he.

I too have lived under an Honor Code and I agree, as Mr. Jones reports, that there is nothing to compare with it. It is terrible. Every week is a week full of Sundays. Your friends who were once panting protoplasms develop the enthusiasm of a three-day old fish. Forever and forever there is Big Brother. And in the meantime no one bothers to look up the definition of "honor."

Whatever "honor" is, it works only for the inept, the demented, the immoral, and the senile. For most it is either the last chain to respectability or a pipe-dream of warm Spring afternoons. Like the Honorable Gentleman of old, Brutus, most of the present-day versions have such a deterring fault that it renders them foolish. Honor remains pleasantly ephemeral, untouched by interstate traffic or southern evangelists with wings. Consequently, honor systems are in a league with Platonic Love, voodooed or unvoodooed with six memorized articles of code.

As for that bombing idea that Mr. Jones mentioned, I saw no need for it. The Wilkes boys and girls do no bombing to speak of, and, besides, they keep their dissatisfactions decently quiet from the general public.

As for this Mr. Jones and his proposal and support of honor, I do now remember that he was also a slithering seller of football pools in the cafeteria once. He should be investigated without question.

Cordially,

PAUL B. BEERS

NAS Oceana, Va.

Dear Sir,

My general apathy has been disturbed by some murmurings on campus relevant to an "honor system." I have been exposed to some of the finer details of such a system at a University where it was labeled a "success." Our "honor system" comprised mainly of a teacher leaving a room during an exam. . . the simpler the exam, the higher the ratio of honor. However, for every honorable student there was an honorable informer . . . thus the system was based not on honor, but on fear of exposure, fear of being seen and social pressure (the latter which was lacking among fraternity brothers, and any other Greek letter affiliates).

Once out of class, however, the shreds of academic honor we possessed were mutilated still further by the perfectly acceptable practices of pulling themes, reports, and tests from carefully kept files and smuggling quizzes out from under quizzical noses.

However, no-one can blame the student for slightly misusing the word honor. Ever since Darwin intimated that only the strong can survive, the word has flourished while its concept has become increasingly hollow. We are only the products of our environment . . . and the world around us does not pay homage to the honorable man.

Our entire undergraduate system is not ready for such a radical move as an honor system. Both administration and teachers think (consciously or sub-consciously) of the Undergraduate as immature or

TOSSERS IN FOR BUSY TIME; MEET THREE TEAMS IN WEEK

By JIM COLEMAN

Baseball gets a real whirl in the next few days with three games lined up for the swatters in the coming week. Golf Tourney Underway; Perlmuth Wins Round

The Wilkes Open Golf Tournament got underway last Friday afternoon at the Hollenback Golf Course. The day was anything but perfect conditions for the Wilkes 'Hogans and Sneads' but the Colonel divot diggers slogged through their first 18 holes in good form.

The opening day saw half of the Class D aspirants clubbing and sometimes flubbing their way through.

After the fog and rain cleared, it was Mickey Perlmuth shooting a sharp 93 that came through for the initial round.

Perlmuth took over Irv Kaye, Cliff Brothers, and Al Jeter. By measure of the win on the saturated links, he becomes a strong contender for the Class D crown.

According to Reese Jones, the rest of the Class D men will finish the first round this Friday. It is also hoped that the Class B players will be able to finish before the week is up.

Jones also reminded players that tournament fees are due and should be paid as soon as possible. The fees will be used to cover expenses and obtain a trophy for the final winner of the tourney.

Moravian. The Greyhounds squeezed out a 5 to 4 victory last season. Coach Partridge has spent a good deal of time in the past week going over stock infield positions that turn up often, in an effort to coordinate the almost brand new squad.

Doing Well

Partridge has no complaints as he stated that the club has been playing good ball for the amount of experience they have.

Some bad breaks seem to be the major cause of the Colonels' downfall in their first two games. Partridge, as well as the team and quite a few fans, feel that the tossers should have taken the first two tilts, but that the breaks just were not with them.

Lineup Switch

In order to take advantage of the boys that have been producing at the plate, Partridge has revised his lineup to some extent. He feels that this just might be a winning combination.

Joe Parsnik's steady hitting will be taken full advantage of by moving him to the cleanup spot. Jim Ferris has been shifted to the number two post in order to utilize his speed on the base paths.

Parsnik and Ron Rescigno are being counted on to keep hitting the pellet as they have been doing to produce runs. The old reliables, McNew and Kachinosky will round out the lineup.

On Saturday, Partridge will probably call Moe Batterson to the mound to take over the starting duties, in which case McNew will probably see outfield duty.

Colonels Gain First Win Over Lebanon Valley Tossers By Close Shave 2-1 Margin

Wilkes College baseball team copped its first victory yesterday by edging out Lebanon Valley, 2 to 1, on the latter's diamond. The win brought the still young season's record to one victory against two setbacks for the Colonels.

RAIDERS HOLD LEAD IN BOWLING LEAGUE BY 3-GAME SWEEP

The Ralston Raiders retained their first place standing in Intramural Bowling League 'B' last Sunday night by taking measure of the Deadly Strikers, gathering four big points. The Raiders led by Mickey Weinberger with a total of 470 pins swept the three game series. Next in line for the Ralstonmen was Batterson with 458.

Although the Strikers didn't show as too deadly against the Raiders, Dombroski came through with 373 pins to champion the losing cause.

The Walloping Wags kept a firm grip on second place by benefit of a forfeit, the first one in either league this season, from the Rambling Six.

Morris once again paced the Wags with 499 markers. Chapko came in second for the winners with 419.

Several of the Ramblers must have rambled too far and only two players showed up for the fracas. Sherman rolled a total of 427 for the forfeited club and Luft hit 253.

The Kingpins entrenched themselves in third place by grabbing four points from the Rampaging Five.

Llewellyn topped the Pins for a grand total of 505 pins and Larish came through with 497. For the losers, Neveras dropped 418 and Hughes contributed 362.

Loop 'A' swings back into action this Sunday night at the JCC. All members are urged to be on time.

Mel McNew went all the way to even his record at a win and a loss for the current campaign. He struck out eight Flying Dutchmen and walked none while giving up eight hits to the host club. Kosier was the losing pitcher.

The Colonels got off to a fast start by getting a run in the first frame. Catcher Bob Sokol singled and moved to second on an error by the right fielder.

Jim Ferris followed with a walk and both runners advanced on a passed ball. Joe Parsnik then belted a long fly to the outfield to bring in Sokol with the tally.

Then in the seventh, Mioduski walked and back to back singles by Kachinosky and Goobic brought in the winning score for the Blue and Gold.

Lebanon Valley scored its lone tally in this stanza when Benneth started off the inning with a single. He advanced on a ground out and scored later on a throwing error by Parsnik.

The team played without the services of shortstop Ronnie Rescigno who had to attend a compulsory Naval Reserve meeting. The gap was filled by Hesler who took over third moving Parsnik from his customary hot corner post to the short-stop slot.

In last Saturday's game the diamond forces were edged out by Bloomsburg State Teachers College at Kirby Park after the Colonels lead most of the way.

Wilkes starter Mel McNew was relieved by "Mo" Batterson who suffered the loss. Rudy Holtzman got credit for the win although he needed help from Jim Starr.

Champs, Barbarians And Hawks Winners

Intramural baseball play began this week at Kirby Park with three of the four scheduled games being played.

In Monday's games Parker Petrillak's Champions trounced the Barbarians, 16 to 2. The other tilt on the slate was forfeited by the Misfits to Weckesser.

Tuesday's action saw a close contest and a pushover. The Barbarians of Al Feargang edged out Maxwell's Deemons captained by Don Pacropus by a 5 to 4 score. In the other fracas, Howie Gros' Hawks were busy tamping Weckesser to the tune of 12 to 0. Carl Lahr hurled the shutout for the Hawks.

Commissioner John Bresnahan stated that all participants should be ready to play promptly at 4:30 at the park. Games are played on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays.

The schedule for next week is as follows:

- Monday:
Misfits vs. Champs
Hawks vs. Barbarians
Tuesday:
Deemons vs. Misfits
Hawks vs. Champs
Wednesday:
Barbarians vs. Misfits
Weckesser vs. Deemons

Baseball Fever

Old man spring fever took a punch at just about everybody's belt line this week and the air took on a distinct aroma of baseball and golf. The Barons opened again, but it looks like the proposed move to have some of the Colonels' home games played in Artillery Park that was prevalent last year has gone the way of many ideas—file x.

But good playing field or not, Bob Partridge just might have a ball club for himself this year. Most of the lineup is composed of untested freshmen. However, from the indication they have shown so far, these guys just might come through and take their share of ball games.

Backstopping Solved

A pleasant surprise has been John Sokel behind the plate. The backstop job has been a source of gray hairs to Partridge many times before, but newcomer Sokel shows the promise of developing into something fine. To begin with, he is a natural athlete, who we suspect would be able to fill any position that he had a mind to. Beside that, he is a hustler and eager to learn. Talent plus industry has been proved time and time again to be a top notch combination.

Mel McNew seems to have shaken off the arm trouble that plagued him last year which is a promising sign for the mound corps. If McNew is effective this year, it will greatly enhance the chances for a season that Partridge, in his last year of coaching here, can be proud of.

Breznay Leaves

Away from the baseball scene though comes a more sober note in the way of bad news for brand new football coach Russ Picton. It was learned last week that Andy Breznay, speed merchant back, will don the uniform of the United States Air Force on May 2. Breznay is a 'sizzling starter' kind of a back that you like to have around. Once the little guy takes off, it's a fast man who catches him.

Tough to Replace

Several weeks ago, in looking over the prospects for next year's grid season, it seemed that Breznay would fit into the type of football that Picton has been brought up under, to a T.

Breznay is an ex-Air Force man who gained a commission while doing reserve time as a civilian. His leaving will be sure to make a gap in the backfield ranks that will be hard to plug. The Beacon Sports Staff takes this opportunity to wish Lieutenant Andy Breznay good luck in his new career. The Colonels loss is the Air Forces gain, and it wouldn't surprise us to see him making a name for himself in service ball.

Mel McNew Named 'Athlete of Week' For Pitching Efforts in First 2 Games

Mel McNew, the iron man of the mound staff and the outer pasture, is the first "athlete of the week" to emerge from the current baseball season.

On being notified of his selection, Mel was quick to retort modestly, "I don't really believe I deserve an award for anything. . . . the club is young and fast. . . . they're all out there playing good ball."

Mel was selected as the starting hurler in the first two Wilkes diamond encounters, he pitched 13 of this season's 18 innings, no mean feat considering the lack of spring training. After being relieved of his mound chores he found sufficient stamina to perform capably in right field.

An "old timer" on the freshman-dominated squad, Mel is in uniform for the third year. He is the type of throw hard, run hard, hit hard, player that shoots life into an outfit and creates the team spirit that pulls the best from a squad.

Mel takes exception to most every rule in the manager's book. He is primarily a pitcher, supposedly a fragile, no slide, no hit individual who rests when he is not pitching. But so far, he has run the bases like a speed merchant, roamed the outer pastures when he wasn't pitching and hit safely in each of the games.

McNew is a native of East Baltimore, Md., where he attended Patterson Park High School. He played no high school baseball, but was an active pitcher on the sandlots. On

Wilkes Education Department Head Has Article in Penna. School Journal

Dr. Eugene L. Hammer, head of the Wilkes education department, has a featured article in this month's "Pennsylvania School Journal", official organ of the Pennsylvania Education Association.

Writing on the question of what students will learn, Hammer declares that the teacher's dilemma is one of providing for the unique needs of each child in the classroom.

The question is important because of the position of education in our society. It is a democratic institution, which must take into regard the worth of the individual.

We must individualize the curriculum, he continues, must give our instruction meaning for the student taken as an individual.

The teachers facing the problem must be masters of their subjects, students of human development. He must appreciate the finer things, and also appreciate the non-conformist.

At the last, the teacher attempting to solve the dilemma, must have a love for teaching. To him, the supreme achievement must be to help another human forward, Hammer concludes.
